Talk Marathon By Opposition Now Week Old

Money Bill 'Debate' Expected to Continue

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) —The opposition's monologue on a money bill completed a one-week stand in the Commons Friday and is expected to run well into next week.

The measure would give the government $700,000,000 in interim spending authority for August and September pending approval of 1964-65 spending estimates.

Friday's main targets for opposition criticism were the CBC and the immigration department. Liberals broke their week-long silence briefly to discuss Toronto's taxi problems. Others remained in opposition MPs to do most of the talking.

Arnold Peters (NDP — Timiskaming) blasted C. M. Isbister, newly-named deputy minister of citizenship and immigration, as "an autocratic, unqualified official and hinted broadly that he should be replaced.

URGES WITHDRAWAL

They said he was a competent, conscientious and objective official. He also called on Mr. Peters to withdraw his "vicious attack," saying it was uncalled for and contrary to good taste.

Mr. Peters stuck to his guns and wanted he would have more to say about the official when immigration estimates came up for debate. He also called for a parliamentary inquiry into the whole department.

He accused Mr. Isbister of over-stepping the bounds of his position in a recent telephone conversation about a citizenship case in Timiskaming between himself and Mr. Isbister.

Mr. Peters had declared in an earlier debate that Mr. Tremblay was the only one in the Commons who had complete confidence in his senior officials. He said Mr. Isbister called him the following day to protest the statement.

Mr. Isbister is official as saying: "You had a problem and you asked me to do something about it. Now can forget it now because I have no intention of answering your requests in the future."

Mr. Peters said he would have moved to call Mr. Isbister before the bar of the Commons for contempt of Parliament if the remark had not been made in the House of Commons.

RAPS COMPETENCE

"I think he is in a class much below the average of those of us for civil servants and that he has no right whatever to hold the office of deputy minister in that department," said Mr. Peters.

He said Mr. Isbister a 55-

Ink Stains Papers' Top Brass

By JOHN LeBLANC

TORONTO (CP) — When the page one makeup man for the second and third editions of The Telegram finishes his daily stint of fitting pieces of type metal into their forms, he heads for a big office in the modern decor and starts taking a severe look at the product of his handiwork. J. D. MacFarlane, printer two tem. is back as vice-president and editor-in-chief.

Some high - powered help is putting in regular shifts in the mechanical departments of Toronto's three dailies these days as they dig in against a walkout of 680 printers, the city's first in 73 years.

With the strike at the morning Globe and Mail and the evening Star and Telegram in its 25th day, the crews of amateur printers have been turning out editions regularly since the paper lost a key segment of their 4,300 - member working force July 9. By now, they are rolling out a polished product with the help of union men crossing the picket lines of the International Typographical Union (CLC), which claims it has been locked out.

It's being done with a big helping hand, too, from electronics, whose shadow over the future jobs of printers precipitated the strike. The publishers and the printers negotiated for 22 months to replace a contract that expired at the end of 1962 and settled all issues except who was to have jurisdiction over a new type of computer being designed to do many jobs including business office as well as typographical work.

Centralizing Power Favored

OTTAWA (CP)— A whopping 80 per cent of persons participating in a survey in the constituency of Hamilton South favor centralizing power in Ottawa and unifying Canada, Dr. William D. Howe, New Democratic MP for the riding, said Friday night.

Dr. Howe was reporting on a questionnaire sent to his constituents in June and July. He received 1,948 replies.

In a letter to constituents, he also says that because 54 per cent of the replies favor a flag showing a maple leaf, he will vote for a new flag.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis — Mainly sunny weather is expected to continue across southern Ontario today and Sunday, although some cloudiness is likely Sunday as warmer air edges into the region. Variable cloudiness with scattered showers and a few thunderstorms is the forecast for northern areas.

To Probe Windfall Trading

TORONTO (CP) — Windfall Oils and Mines Ltd., suffered a spectacular collapse on the Toronto Stock Exchange Friday following news of a worthless assay on the first drill hole at its Timmins-area holdings.

Sharing the spotlight with the collapse Friday was an announcement by Ontario Attorney-General Arthur Wishart that an investigation into trading of the stock had been ordered July 28, two days before the assay findings were released.

The stock, which had closed at $4.15 Thursday before the assay results were released, opened at 80 cents Friday after a 60-minute delay and later rallied to a $1.20 before slumping to $1.04 at market closing. A total of 1,324,487 shares changed hands.

Speculators have often gambled more than $1,000,000 a day in Windfall since a rumor July 6 that a valuable base metal discovery had been made on its claims four miles from the $2,000,000,000 copper - silver - zinc strike by Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. near Timmins last April. The rumors sent the stock from a March low of 31 cents to a high of $3.60 this month.

But the rumors were denied by Windfall officials when company President George A. Whittaker announced that the first drill hole had failed to find any commercial ore values.

Trading is underway at the Prosser Township site.

The attorney-general said trading in two other stocks, Bunker Hill Extension Mines Ltd., and

Reds Raid Saigon Outpost

VINH LOC, South Viet Nam (AP) — Communist Viet Cong forces struck boldly within three miles of Saigon today in the closest heavy engagement to the capital in the history of the guerrilla war.

Only paddyfields separated suburban Vinh Loc from the fighting that threw three navy boats as an estimated battalion of Viet Cong attacked from the west and used mortars and mortar fire. The Communist guerrillas got as close to Saigon as Tuesday without actually entering the suburbs.

The roar of exploding mortar shells resounded throughout Saigon, touching off fears of an attempt to overthrow the regime of Premier Nguyen Khanh.

U.S. airmen based at Saigon airport said buildings there shook under the barrage and tracer bullets were seen heading into the city.

The small civil guard outpost at Vinh Loc had been smashed by mortar shells and recoilless rifles.

Casualties were light. The outpost held out with the help of a flareship that flew several hours over the post.

The Viet Cong did not enter the village.

Bullets flew around civilian houses, wounding three persons. One civil guard defender was killed and three others wounded.

In another development Prime Minister Nguyen Khanh repudiated Friday his "back to the north" policy statements, apparently bowing to U.S. diplomatic pressure.

'GOOD PICTURES' OF MOON OBTAINED — Harris M. Schurmeier, project manager of Ranger 7, gives an OK sign as he tells a news conference in Pasadena, Calif., that "good pictures" of the moon were received just before the spacecraft landed on the Sea of Clouds. Schurmeier said Ranger 7 crashed 3 to 10 miles from the precise target point circled on an enlarged photo of the moon. (AP Wirephoto)

Queen's Visit One of Contrasts

OTTAWA (CP) — While all the colorful details are still to be filled in, the program for the Queen's visit to Charlottetown and Quebec City in October is one of contrasts between the two provincial capitals.

The outline announced by Prime Minister Pearson's office Friday indicates the Charlottetown visit will be largely informal, with open air ceremonies and a children's rally at the exhibition grounds.

The visit to Quebec will be mostly indoors and more formal —an exchange of addresses in the legislative building, a military ceremony in the Citadel, state dinners, luncheons and receptions.

Friday's announcement said the program for the Queen's subsequent visit to Ottawa will be made public later "when planning is further advanced."

The Queen and Prince Philip will fly by BOAC aircraft to Summerside, P.E.I., arriving in the early evening of Monday, Oct. 5.

After an official welcome, if sea conditions permit, the Royal Couple will go aboard the royal yacht Britannia in Summerside Harbor and sail for Charlottetown. If the sea is too rough, they will drive to Charlottetown and go aboard the yacht in that more-sheltered harbor.

The Charlottetown program for Tuesday starts with ceremonies marking the formal opening of the Fathers of Confederation Memorial Building and unveiling of a commemorative plaque, followed by tea. In the evening the Queen and Prince Philip will attend a special royal performance in the new memorial theatre.

Wednesday the Queen, and Prince Philip will visit the old Confederation chamber in the legislative building where the Fathers of Confederation held their first but unofficial meeting in September, 1864.

The Royal Couple will sail for Quebec City Wednesday night aboard the Britannia.

On arrival Saturday morning,

Britain, Russia Urge Pact To Halt Spread of A-Bombs

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Britain and Russia gave joint backing to the idea of an international treaty to halt the spread of nuclear weapons in a joint communique issued here today.

The communique was signed by British Foreign Secretary R. A. Butler at the end of a visit to Moscow during which he had talks with Premier Khrushchev and other Soviet leaders, the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

Britain and Russia also announced agreement on talks to draw up a consular convention and increase cultural exchanges.

But the communique showed little agreement on other world issues such as Laos, Germany and European security.

The communique said the two sides exchanged views on the subject of Laos, which played an important part in their talks.

Informed sources said Friday night the Soviet Union rejected British conditions for a 14-nation Laos conference, as proposed by Russia.

The communique said the discussions would be "useful and constructive negotiations" on preserving world peace, adding that everything possible should be done to widen areas of agreement.

The communique said both sides again confirmed their conviction that the safeguarding of peace in the nuclear age is of primary interest for all states

Fatal Fire At Ottawa Said Set

OTTAWA (CP) — Arson is suspected in the Beacon Arms Hotel fire that claimed three lives Thursday.

"I'm afraid this was no accident," Hotel Manager Phil Horwitz said Friday. He said he thinks the fire was deliberately set but did not elaborate.

An investigation was launched.

The $1,000,000 fire took the lives of hotel switchboard operator Mrs. Addie McCormack, 56; Cerasem Zenonos, 27, a hotel maintenance worker; and Dr. Earl A. Colvin, 67, of Wasban, Mass., who died of an apparent heart attack after being rescued by firemen from a fourth-floor window.

OTTAWA (CP) — Fireman Patrick Dorion was cited for bravery Friday following his dramatic rescue of two people from a smoke-filled room high in the Beacon Arms Hotel Thursday.

He went beyond the call of duty in risking his life on a lifeline lowered from the room, anchored by unexperienced civilians," said Fire Chief Armand Page in a letter of praise to all units that fought the fire in the downtown Ottawa hotel. Three persons died in the blaze.

The fireman was lowered from the roof of the hotel to a ninth-floor room occupied by and Mrs. Eugene Eckels of New Haven, Conn., were trapped by smoke. He tied the rope around Mrs. Eckels and waited while she was raised to safety, then helped her husband to escape the same way. Finally he was raised back to the roof himself.

Myriad Craters But Little Dust Cover Surface

Ranger Pictures Show Area in Great Detail

By RALPH DIGHTON

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Historic pictures taken by Ranger 7 are pretty good evidence man can land on the moon without much change required for spaceships now being designed.

That's the consensus of a board of scientists who Friday night released 20 of the 4,316 sensational photographs Ranger 7 snapped in the final 16 minutes and 40 seconds before it crashed on the moon at 9.25 a.m. EDT Friday morning.

The first close - up pictures ever taken of the moon — termented 1,000 times better than any made heretofore from spacecraft or with earth telescopes—plowed that even its vast, apparently smooth "seas" are pocked with craters, some as small as dishpans.

There may be some dust on the moon, in layers up to a foot thick, but not deep enough to bury a landing craft, the scientists concluded. And, underneath the dust, evidence indicates, is a hard primary surface. Whether it would support the weight of a larger manned spaceship cannot be determined from photographs alone.

To the conclusions, announced after several hours' study Friday, additional evaluations will be added today at a presidential press conference.

GOES TO WASHINGTON

Dr. William H. Pickering, director of Jet Propulsion Laboratory which made Ranger 7 and released the first pictures, left Friday night to be present at a White House session today.

President Johnson sent a telephone call of congratulations to Pickering and others at the laboratory, which was much criticized in recent months for six straight previous failures in the $250,000,000 Ranger moon research program.

At a press conference, where slides of the historic Ranger moon pictures were shown Friday night, Dr. Gerard Kuiper of the lunar and planetary laboratory of the University of Arizona said the most significant thing about the flight is that they reveal no unanticipated problems to be met in the design of moon landing craft.

At least part of the area photographed by Ranger 7 — the northern extension of the Sea of Clouds southwest of the centre of the face of the moon — would be unsuitable for landing because of the large number of small craters in the area.

The thousands of tiny pock marks, he said, seemed to cluster at some distance from large primary craters such as Copernicus, about 200 miles north of target zone. He said this indicates the big craters were created by meteors and meteorites which exploded on impact and threw out fragments of many sizes.

SPOT 'CLEAN' AREAS

Between the big primary craters and the clusters of secondary craters around them, however, are relatively "clean" areas which could be good landing sites, he said.

Dr. Eugene Shoemaker of the U.S. Geological Survey at Flagstaff, Ariz., another of the top experts who studied Ranger 7's

Magazine Writers Quit Jobs

TORONTO (CP)—Five editorial staff members, including editor Ken Lefolii, resigned Friday from Maclean's Magazine for what they termed management interference in the publication's editorial independence.

R. A. McEachern, vice-president in charge of the magazine division of Maclean-Hunter Publishing Company Limited, said that only Mr. Lefolii's resignation had definitely been accepted.

The other four, Peter Gzowski, managing editor, Harry Bruce, reporter and reviews editor, David Lewis Stein, assistant editor, and Robert Fulford, staff writer, met with Mr. McEachern Friday to discuss their resignations.

In a statement after the meeting, Mr. McEachern said he was unable to confirm any other editorial changes.

Mr. Bruce said he thought further talks with the management are scheduled.

Mr. Lefolii said his resignation was an individual effort and that he was "not leading any walkouts."

CLASH ON POLICY

His action, he said, resulted from a long series of events related to editorial policy that followed the appointment of Mr. McEachern, former editor and publisher of The Financial Post, to his vice-presidential post in June of this year.

He said articles approved on the basis of quality had been turned down because they did not fit in with the policy he followed. He declined to name specific articles, but said they fell into categories of politics, labor and strikes and material "partly social and partly political, such as medical care."

"It is my general view that editorial independence is a most important principle," Mr. Lefolii said.

Two-Car Crash Kills Two Injures Others

PEMBROKE (CP)—Two persons were killed and two others injured in a two-car crash Friday night on Highway 17 just west of this town 60 miles northeast of Ottawa.

The victims were the drivers of the two cars—Frank Gal, 42, of Pembroke, and Melville Leffair, 29, of nearby Petawawa.

WO Andrew Crawford Brunton, 48, stationed at Camp Petawawa with the 1st Hussars, was in critical condition in Trio-Orvice Hospital at Ottawa. He was transferred there after preliminary treatment at Pembroke General Hospital. He suffered extensive head injuries as well as broken ribs and legs.

Miklos Kiss, about 26, of Petawawa, is in fair condition in Pembroke General with chest and possible back injuries. He was a passenger in the car driven by Gal.

The collision occurred about 11:30 p.m. on a hilly stretch. The road had been resurfaced recently and centre white lines had not been painted in.

Johnson Asks Kennedy to Manage His Presidential Campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson has asked Attorney-General Robert F. Kennedy to manage his presidential campaign, informed sources said today.

They said the offer was made Wednesday at the same time Johnson told Kennedy he was eliminating him from consideration as a vice-presidential candidate. The offer is reported to be under consideration.

"I don't want to get into that," Kennedy said Friday when asked about reports the offer before he left for Hyannis Port, Mass., for the weekend.

The meeting to account of the White House meeting has come to light from several sources in a position to know about it:

Johnson summoned the 38-year-old attorney-general to the White House and told him he was not being considered for the second spot on the Democratic ticket. And then the president suggested that Kennedy consider taking the job of campaign manager — the task he handled for his brother, the late president John F. Kennedy, in 1960.

Later, presidential adviser McGeorge Bundy, a carryover from the Kennedy administration, called the attorney-general, presumably at Johnson's behest. He wondered whether Kennedy shouldn't voluntarily withdraw from vice - presidential considerations — perhaps by "leaking" such a decision to a newspaper columnist.

Kennedy declined, pointing out that as attorney-general he shouldn't be and wasn't runningfor the vice-presidency and that announce a "withdrawal" would seem ridiculous.

Kennedy is believed to wield considerable influence over Democratic machinery in a number of key states and it is this knowledge, several sources suggest, which most likely led Johnson to ask Kennedy's services as campaign manager.

According to the most reliable reports Kennedy is not, but not bitter, over the way Johnson handled the matter. He is likely to campaign for Johnson as he promised last January. Whether he will manage that campaign remains to be seen.

Kennedy has told political supporters for weeks that he would not fight for the nomination he felt was Johnson's to bestow. He never planned nor will he attempt a convention fight because he feels it would hurt the party and his future.

After being missed for several months, the Elmer Street is again back on the city of Belleville map.

Also the name Elmer Street has a historical interest, much appreciated by the older residents in that section of the city.

The street was named after one of three sons of Asa Yeoman, who settled at one time took in most of what is now the West hill district.

CAUSED TROUBLE

A change in street name can cause no amount of trouble and inconvenience, according to one Elmer Street resident.

"You have to change the address on your driver's licence, get your insurance changed, in this case change your house number, change your mailing address, and for property owners, it is also a matter of getting deeds changed with resultant lawyers' fees," he said.

Planning department officials had no objection to "renaming" part of Wallbridge Crescent that runs from Elmer and this week council made it official.

Pasture, Swine Clubs Visit District Farms

On Thursday, July 30 members of the Hastings 4-H Hay-Pasture and Hastings 4-H Swine Clubs and Club leaders, Harold Harris and Ross Moorcroft of Madoc, accompanied by Lyall MacLachlan, assistant agricultural representative of Hastings County, visited some of the outstanding farms with regards to swine and forage management in Hastings and Prince Edward Counties. The first stop for the tour was at Vermilyea Farms where members viewed a zero grazing program where the pasture is stored in silos and fed automatically to the cattle. Also, at this stop, they had an opportunity to view mor-su, a hybrid sudan grass, a new crop to the area.

Mr. Allen Gowthorpe's farm at Corbyville proved most interesting to the group members, as his pigs are in a new building equipped with automatic, limited feeding and partially slatted floors for manure removal.

The third stop of the morning was a visit to Marysville where William Latchford is constructing a beef feedlot. Here the members were able to see four large upright silos which are being filled with pea and corn silage.

The lunch at Zwicky's Island the tour moved to Prince Edward County to visit the farm of Ross William Bloomfield, where a good forage program is carried out involving zero grazing. Members also saw at the farm of Robert Williams, who has a pure-bred Yorkshire herd with advanced registry testing. The day was completed with a stop at James Alexander's farm at Picton. Here members were able to inspect some excellent pasture management, zero grazing and irrigation. Members were impressed by the high quality hay harvested on Mr. Alexander's farm with the use of a hay conditioner and crop drier.

This concluded a very educational day of different farming operations in the quinte area.

Uncover Clue In Search for Bank Robber

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto police say they have uncovered their most important clue so far in the search for the lone robber who killed John Blanc, 35, in a St. week's holdup in suburban Downsview.

Police have found witnesses who testified the get-away car driven by the masked bandit almost collided with another car 10 minutes after the robbery.

Staff Inspector Adolphus Payne has learned that the bandit removed his mask long enough to exchange angry words and shake his fist at the other motorist. This motorist is the only person who saw the bandit's face.

He is being urged to come forward and police have said they will keep his identity a secret.

Soviet, Chinese Word War Marks Ban-the-Bomb Parley

TOKYO (AP)—The world ban-the-bomb conference here has exploded into a war of words with Soviet and Red Chinese factions grappling for control of the world peace movement.

The two Communist giants, called rival press conferences Friday and accused each other of torpedoing the 10th International ban-the-bomb conference.

The Soviet - bloc delegation's representatives from 28 other countries, including Canada, and three other front organizations bolted from the uproarious meeting Friday after the Chinese succeeded in freezing the Russians out of a share in the leadership.

Some African and Asian delegates backed Soviet charges that the Chinese had packed the conference leadership.

The delegation leader Georgy Zhukov told a three-hour press conference in a Japanese hotel the responsibility for the walkout was that of the Red Chinese "splinters" who formed it into "an arena for an unbridled slanderous campaign against the Soviet Union."

Chinese delegate Tan Ming-chao, in a separate 3½ - hour press conference at a nearby hotel, replied that Zhukov was guilty of "hypocrisy" and "double-faced tactics."

SAY FORCED OUT

The Russians and their friends charged they were forced out because they plan to take part in a new ban-the-bomb conference run by the Japanese socialists.

The Japan Council Against Atomic and Hydrogen Bombs sponsored the conference the Russians walked out of. Although the council is headed by Mr. Kaoru Yasui, a winner of the Soviet Union's Lenin Peace Prize, it issued a statement saying:

"The Russians have insulted the Japanese people, foreign delegates and those concerned by denouncing the conference as the puppet of Communist China and saying that the conference was trying to kick them out. The Russians came here on false fuse and disrupt. That is obvious."

TRAFFIC FATALITIES

Two-thirds of all traffic fatalities occur after dark, although only one-third of the driving is done in this period.

COOL ME, MADAM

Old women once held curative powers—or so folks believed. Their wrinkled hands laid on feverish brows were thought to cool the fever. Now, in this golden era of modern medicine, we have more reliable methods of reducing temperatures. But, remember, a temperature is only a symptom . . . not an illness in itself. Fevers have many causes . . . some minor . . . some serious. So, be sensible. When you or a member of your family is ill, let your doctor do the diagnosing and prescribing. Vast Potential For Sale of Goods in U. S.

WOODSTOCK (CP)There is a vast potential for the sale of Canadian semi - manufactured goods to the United States, Arthur Laing, federal minister of northern affairs and national resources, said Friday at examining ceremonies at the site of the Gordon Pitock Dam and reservoir.

Mr. Laing said the U.S. is expected to double its population by the year 2010, providing massive new markets for semi-manufactured goods.

"They've got to look to Canada, there's nowhere else to look," he said.

Canadians will prosper more if they slow down sale of their resources in order to develop the minister said, adding that Canada has been "alienating its resources at a terrific rate.

"Ninety per cent of the oil industry is foreign owned, 50 per cent of the mining industry 50 per cent of the forests in British Columbia."

However he said, governments in Canada are attempting to slow down this trend.

The minister was speaking at Gordon Pittock, Conservative MPP for Oxford and chairman of the Upper Thames River Conservation Authority. Due to be completed in 1966, the $4,250,000 dam will create a five - mile long reservoir just north of Woodstock. It is part of a $10,000,000 flood control scheme by the UTRCA.

Can't Keep Kangaroo Down, Mate

SYDNEY, Australia (CP) — Kangaroos are being shot at the rate of 200,000 a week in the southwest of New South Wales, but hunters say their numbers are still increasing.

Hunters, operating with special permits, are killing the big kangaroos in a 90,000-square-mile area, where they are claiming in the last three years there is green grass in the dry land.

Kangaroo slaughtering has developed into an industry worth about £750,000 a year. Kangaroo meat is salable only for pet food.

Destruction of kangaroos is permitted only in certain areas where they have become a menace to farmers and ranchers. In some districts ranch owners offer a bounty to kangaroo hunters to help keep them under control.

UNEXPECTED AIRDROP for this obsolete Sabre jet came at Mountain View yesterday when cable snapped as it was being airlifted in helicopter test.

Airlift Test of Helicopter Dumps Old Sabre in Field

An unexpected airdrop dumped 9,000 pounds of obsolete aircraft in a farmer's field at Mt. View yesterday.

The incident occurred as the RCAF ran an airlift test on a helicopter at Mountain View airport, now a home for planes in mothballs.

For the test the airmen decided to use an obsolete Sabre F 86, slung it under the helicopter by cable and took off.

The event attracted some excitement. Motorists on the nearby Highway 14 ground to a halt to watch the operation. The airlift was shortlived.

Just north of the highway, where the land falls off to the Bay of Quinte, the cable snapped and the Sabre plunged to a field on the farm of J. Miller.

It was a total wreck.

Breezes Upset Small Boats, Dunking Crews

All were rescued within short order with nothing worse to show for the dunking than wet clothes.

A club official said later they were never in any danger and that the incident was part and parcel of learning sailing.

However, the incident brought city police, firemen and the St. John Ambulance rushing to the government docks to observe the rescue. Firemen went to the scene in a boat, and, after sorting the situation out, towed three of the junior mariners back to the club.

Local Family 'Adopts' Colombian Child

F/L and Mrs. E. B. Sluce, 44 Melrose Crescent, Belleville have financially "adopted" Alonso Rodrigues of Colombia through Foster Parents' Plan, Montreal. The Foster Parents have promised to contribute $16 a month for the child's support for at least a year. They have already received a picture of the new overseas relative. A complete case history of the child accompanied the picture.

In addition, monthly letters are being received from overseas, both original and translation.

"Adoption" through the Plan is financial not legal. Of the $16 monthly that the Foster Parent agrees to contribute for at least a year, the child receives $8 a month as a cash grant. The rest is spent for food and new clothing, medical care, school fees and equipment and translations of letters. Because each child is different, the Plan meets any special needs through its General Fund which is made up of contributions from donors. Full information may be had by writing Foster Parents' Plan, P.O. Box 63, Station B, Montreal.

Alarms, Yes Burglars, No

TRENTON — Twice this week, Trenton police have had burglar alarms in business offices to cope with. Both alarms were set off inadvertently, and no burglars were involved.

On Wednesday, a police cruiser was sent to the Toronto-Dominion Bank when the alarm sounded after business hours.

Thursday night, a patrol-ing constable tried the door to the Gould Jewellery Store on Dundas St. East, and set off the alarm.

This time, the neighbors for blocks around gathered in front of the store and heaven help the burglar who might have been trying to break in.

Planning Board Vindicated By Official

TRENTON — Trenton's oft-maligned planning board was given vindication Thursday night by Alex Thompson of Montreal, assistant secretary of the Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd., in a speech before the Trenton Kiwanis Club.

Mr. Thompson stressed the need of a "master plan" for municipal development. (Trenton was one of the first communities of its size in the province to adopt an official plan), and the need for the plan to retain its "rigidity" in some instances while remaining flexible enough to cope with unexpected developments.

"The community which gives constant attention to town planning is the community which is getting the most out of its tax dollar," Mr. Thompson said.

Topless Suit Gets Wide Publicity

TRENTON — A reproduction of a picture of a shapely mannequin, modelling a topless bathing suit in the show window of F. J. Aziz's Dundas St. West specialty shop in Trenton, printed in the Trenton column of The Ontario Intelligencer earlier this month, has been shown on TV screens in Toronto, Ottawa and in France, according to the store owner. The original picture was taken for The Intelligencer by Trenton photographer, Vern Larocque.

Mr. Aziz was told by an air force man, recently returned from overseas, that he had seen the picture displayed on TV, while in France, and that the commentator had mentioned the name of the Trenton store. Other friends told Mr. Aziz they had seen the picture on TV in the Canadian cities.

Mr. Aziz reiterated his earlier statement to a reporter yesterday that he "did not necessarily approve of the style, but had displayed it to satisfy the curious."

Asked point-blank if any Trenton ladies had ordered the suit, Mr. Aziz replied that this was the ladies' secret, and he wasn't telling.

Should Know Exam Results By Aug. 12

TRENTON — Grade 13 students from Trenton High School should know the results from final examinations, tried in June, by August 12, give or take a day or so.

That's the latest word from the high school office, and it's good news for the students who have been on pins and needles ever since the summer holidays started.

Many of the students are planning to go to university or teachers' college this fall—that's if they pass—and it's back to the salt mines, if they don't.

At least, knowing will be better than not knowing — or will it?

Simplified Science

A German scientist thinks that hormones may be chemical pushbuttons that call forth only particular bits of all the inherited "wisdom" contained in all living cells.

That is how Alton Blakeslee describes some of the latest experiments in biochemistry. Blakeslee, is a writer on science for the Associated Press, following in the field in which his father pioneered and endeavoring to make understandable to laymen the latest discoveries of specialists in widely varying fields.

Such a task demands at one and the same time an encyclopedic knowledge and a gift for simplification. It may be that the reference to the "wisdom" contained in cells is part of this simplification, a product of Blakslee himself. However, we doubt this, for we have seen the same or similar words and phrases used by other writers to describe similar phenomena.

Nor is this the only time in one article in which Blakeslee speaks in this vein. "Every cell in your body contains exactly the same total amount of genetic information or wisdom, Scientists think this knowledge is carried in a 'code' of nucleic acids—known as DNA—making up a long string of thousands of 'words' or genes to instruct the cell what to do and what to be."

Note the use of these words in these two short sentences — "information," "wisdom," "knowledge," "words," "instruct," "to do."

How they simplify our understanding of the process Blakeslee is describing!

If the cells "know," if they possess "knowledge," if they can be "instructed" then perhaps what human beings have considered they know, what they have regarded as knowledge, their ability to be instructed, are like that of the cell's no more than the automatic reaction to a stimulus. There is really little difference if this stimulus be provided by some chemical, some hormone, or by the response to some psychological pressure—which probably results in the stimulation of some gland anyway.

Thus kindness, tolerance, patience, anger, deduction, recollection, love, hate, reasoning—all may be born in us, awaiting the appropriate message from some outside stimulus.

It is rather humiliating to realize that the writing of editorials may be the product of an efficient gland, instead of a reasoned distike for that gnawing feeling in the pit of the stomach which denotes hunger.

For the Death Penalty

The Canadian Society for the Abolition of the Death Penalty has been founded. Arthur Maloney, a distinguished Toronto lawyer, is the first president.

Those opposed to the death penalty argue, with considerable force, that it is not an efficient deterrent to murder.

There is, however, no record of a convicted murderer having committed another murder after his execution.

This sometimes happens when convicted murderers are given life imprisonment and later released on parole. Mr. Maloney says that paroled murderers have proved to be the most successful (parole) risks. This may be, but there are exceptions.

The writer, as a young newspaperman, once played a small part in a "crusade" by a Toronto newspaper for the release of a man who had been sentenced to life imprisonment in the United States for a murder on the plains, while the West was still wilder than our big cities. The "crusade" succeeded. The man was released. He returned to a small Ontario city, where his wife had been living common law with another man, as a respected member of the community. A short time later a man was found murdered. The freed man was charged. Shortly before the trial the chief witness committed suicide. The accused went free. We have always felt that for a few dollars, (in additional circulation and in free-lance cheques), the Toronto newspaper and we set the stage for the deaths of two innocent and unoffending persons.

Charity begins at home, truly, but charity should not stay at home for ever. It would be wrong, surely, to disregard the needs of people whose standard of living actually is much lower even than the poor members of our own society. I think we ought to be able to deal with both problems.—Andrew Shonfield, British economist.

From the French-Canadian Viewpoint

LE SOLEIL

Quebec Le Soleil—As a result of the new formula of federalism being extended to many federal programs, the Quebec government's refusal (to participate in two new federal grants to aid education) will not deprive the province of the sums it normally would have received if it had joined.

Thus Quebec, while keeping its autonomy intact, while maintaining all its prerogatives, does not make its residents pay taxes for federal programs from which only the populations of other provinces will benefit, as has happened in the past.

This is the aim of co-operative federalism through which an attempt is being made to take more account of the difference between the various provinces of the country without expanding them to penalties because they decide to stay outside federal programs for reasons of principle.

It is a formula for constant compromise between the various governments of the country. It may not be an ideal formula, but at the moment it is the most realistic.

Our province belongs to a confederation where its governments must continually deal with one another. There can be no question of Quebec imposing its will, its conception of federalism, on the other 9 governments. There can be no question of Quebec governments, through overrigid attitudes, preventing other provinces from benefiting from federal programs to which they have no objection because they haven't the same problems as we for opposing them.

Some people contend that Quebec is benefiting financially from the rest of the country by withdrawing too often from federal government programs. Is such a situation likely to loosen the links which unite Quebec to the central government and the other provinces? Perhaps, but until such time as they are capable of finding final and equitable solutions to the problems of confederation under one central government, a more supple formula than the one that existed in the past is more likely to eliminate the resentment Quebec had against the central government. (June 22)

L'EVENEMENT

Quebec L'Evenement—The meeting of health ministers was unanimous on the principle of the need for a health insurance program, even though it's adoption was put off for an indefinite time.

For all practical purposes one can conclude that Canada is on the road towards health insurance and that it can do nothing for work (or education) will not deprive the province of the sums it normally would have received if it had joined.

Thus Quebec, while keeping its autonomy intact, while maintaining all its prerogatives, does not make its residents pay taxes for federal programs from which only the populations of other provinces will benefit, as has happened in the past.

This is the aim of co-operative federalism through which an attempt is being made to take more account of the difference between the various provinces of the country without expanding them to penalties because they decide to stay outside federal programs for reasons of principle.

L'ACTION

Quebec L'Action — French-speaking Canadians suffer from collective frustration when they find that their language is ignored in their own country. But have they ever considered the frustration of thousands of their English-speaking fellow citizens suffer a correspondingly humiliation because of their ignorance of French? All young English-speaking Canadians receive a higher education than French-Canadians, are those who can speak it, even if they can read it. And we are guilty in large part.

"You learned English at our expense and you never give us a chance to learn your language." How often has this reproach been made against us, for example in the Press Gallery in Ottawa where all our English colleagues complain that they spent years taking French lessons with no more practical results than those who studied dead languages.

This phenomenon is often repeated. As soon as an English person joins a group of French Canadians, they launch into English, is it courtesy? They say so, is it unconsciously a ruling superior? This is doubtful. It is mainly laziness. We refuse to make the effort needed to help the person speaking slowly and distinctly the strange language he wants to learn. . . .

French at present is making a surprising conquests in Canada. Recently we were able to go from Quebec to Vancouver, without speaking a word of English.

If the French - Canadians spoke their language first, everywhere, the tendency would be irresistible and many big salaried positions would be nearing a solution. But in Quebec, to speak French becomes a duty towards those who want to learn our language. Lorenzo Pare (July 22)

L'EVANGELINE

Moncton L'Evangeline—The Commons has adopted the bill enfranchise 900 new electorial limits to 12 miles.

This question of territorial waters for Canada is not new. It has been discussed for several years without a decision being taken for agreement. Canadian authorities have always feared unfavorable reactions from other countries with the result that Canadian fisherman have lost thousands of dollars each year.

The fishing industry has undergone great progress especially in the last few years. With construction of larger and stronger trawlers, the discovery of new fishing methods and the help of governments, our Canadian fishermen now are in a position to compete with the foreign fishermen, both on the fishing grounds and on the markets.

The adoption of this bill by Parliament marks the beginning of a new era for the fishing industry in Canada. Bernard Poirier (July 22).

LE DEVOIR

Montreal Le Devoir — At each of his press conferences, General de Gaulle discusses themes as much as world involving not only tactical considerations but also a profoundly ambitious vision of politics, in the widest sense of the word.

This time de Gaulle spoke of Europe's vocation. He said, without hedging, that he was not in favor of a break from both the United States and its closest partners. . . .

De Gaulle spoke about a Europe that should "exist by itself, for itself" and have its own policy. He described this Europe as living its own life, not in opposition to the New World but "beside it."

It should be "another force" within the Atlantic world, "classic division of two camps dominated by Washington and Moscow" does not less European for all that. But they must be "a European formula that would be something more than a return to the classic hegemonies of yesterday."

Between France and her partners "ties and daily differences have grown up. The Italian, Dutch and Belgian economy are becoming more progressively a real supranational political authority. To a formula like this, which is abstract and hazardous, de Gaulle prefers what he calls a "confederation," which that is a Europe where each nation would preserve its full sovereignty.

In recent months de Gaulle has increased his influence around the world, at the same time he seems to have distanced himself from his nearest neighbors.

In any other man this paradox would be disturbing. With de Gaulle one certainty remains. Over and above all differences of strategy or tactics, he remains, basically, a man of the West, a man of the Atlantic. (July 22)

Nerve Block Not Complete Answer to Ulcer Problem

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please explain a nerve block, and how it is done. I have a peptic ulcer and the doctor says a nerve block would help. At times I have very severe pain. — L. C.

A nerve block can be done by various means in areas of the body. Since pain sensations travel over the nerves, pain sensations can be interrupted by "blocking" the nerves over which they travel. In other words, you don't feel the pain.

The simplest example of this is an injection of novocaine before having a tooth pulled. In this case, the medication temporarily deadens the nerve.

A sacral or "saddle" block is sometimes used in childbirth to numb the genital area. Spinal anesthesia is much the same: a temporary shutting off of the transmission of pain from areas below the point at which the nerve is blocked.

Since other nerves control muscular activity rather than carry sensations, sometimes nerve blocks can make certain muscles stop moving, or reduce their activity.

The phrenic nerve, for example, is sometimes interrupted to paralyze artificially the diaphragm. This is done in certain cases of tuberculosis, in order to let a lung collapse, at rest and heal.

In ulcer cases, a vagotomy, or cutting of the vagus nerve, is frequently employed since this nerve leads to the stomach and pain area. Reducing the physical motion of the affected part of the digestive tract, it helps the goal of course being to lessen irritation of the ulcerated area.

Whether medication is used for relatively brief interruption of the nerve, or crushing or cutting the nerve for longer-term interruption, it is still a nerve block. There are similar uses of a nerve block in other areas which I have not mentioned.

A nerve block is by no means a complete answer to the ulcer problem. Doctors have used several factors to be employed together. I strongly suggest that you read my booklet, "How to Heal Peptic Ulcers and Keep them Healed." (For a copy send 25 cents in coin and a long, unstamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.)

There is much that you can do to enhance the treatment by your doctor, not only to heal the ulcer but to keep it from flaping up again.

Dear Dr. Molner: A friend of mine died recently of malignant melanoma. Could you tell me anything about it? I have never heard of it. — O.

I'm not surprised that you haven't heard of it. It is a relatively rare type of cancer which, for reasons not known, contains dark pigment cells. (The name comes from the Greek word melas, meaning black.)

Anyway, this is why blue black moles, under certain conditions, are viewed with more suspicion than other moles. If cancer starts in a mole, it tends to spread with extreme rapidity. My advice is not to fret about melanoma, for it is rare, but if you have such very dark moles, tell your doctor so he can advise you what to do, what to watch out for. A very technical, quite rare problem.

Dear Dr. Molner: Are there bacterial hazards in frozen foods? — Mrs. J.

Frozen foods are kept at a low enough temperature so there is no fear of bacterial growth. But if food becomes contaminated, it will remain that way when frozen. Freezing by no means eliminates the need for proper handling of food. The examination of germ becomes active when the food is defrosted.

Just why any person would want to take a hairdresser's daily diary is the problem city police were confronted with in Belleville on Saturday when Harbormaster Jos. Waddell reported his "nautical writings" missing from the Government Dock building offices. Inspector J. C. Hayes investigated the matter of the missing diary and later found it in the possession of a 13-year-old girl. She will be arraigned before Chief Platten for an explanation, as valuable information as to shipping, nautical reports, weather conditions and water levels are kept in the Harbormaster's report books.

Alertness of the night watchman, Mr. Arthur Sharpe, prevented what might have resulted in a very serious fire at the Riggs Motors garage early Sunday morning when in making his rounds at the Chief Plane, the o'clock he discovered the cab of a C. N. Express delivery truck to be a mass of flames. The alarm was quickly turned in with members of the local fire department confining the blaze to the truck, although it was parked amongst other cars and the roof of the garage was only a few feet above the truck.

Ottawa Offbeat

Parliamentary Travel Bureau Offers Good Pay, Pensions

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — This particular Parliament has been sitting for precisely 238 days through two Sessions.

It put in 121 days last year, sitting in two shifts from May through July, and from September to December.

And this year, from February until this very date, it has served another 117 days.

So how is it doing?

For the answer . . . well, that remains a live subject for continuing national debate. But there are two clues:

1. Parliament, admittedly, has never been further from winning any public popularity poll.

2. And it seldom has been so worried about its blurred image.

But how is it doing for itself . . . well, that is a much easier question to answer.

There are more than mere clues . . . there is hard evidence that in this self-help department Parliament has never done better.

THE EVIDENCE!

1. Its pay.

2. Fringe benefits.

Oddly, this applies to Parliament collectively, but not individually. For while the consensus is that the whole is good, the parts are not bad. In fact, in this Parliament of talented reputation, there are many good and sincere able and industrious MPs — yours could be one of them.

TOP OF THE HEAP

After 18 post-war years of lecturing others on the virtues of moderation in pay demands to keep the brakes on the ever-accelerating cost of living, Parliament, which usually dawdles and haggles over other people's business, all in a day:

1. Doubled its own pay from $10,000 to $18,000-plus with $6,000 of it tax-free.

2. Tripled its pension from $3,000 to $9,000 for 15 years of service.

Wisely wary of public reaction it conspired, as between its members, privately, first to put the pay deal on ice, and then rammed it through in record hours, before the taxpayers had time to get much as blink.

But these ever-loving taxpayers (and voters, too, the Parliamentarians apparently wise to remember) weren't entirely forgotten.

No siree.

In Taxes. Income taxes, that is.

Nobody's mentioned it before — least of all the MPs themselves — but they have emerged as the nation's most highly paid group.

Who says so?

In its "Green Book" of Taxation Statistics for 1961, the Revenue Department reported that stock brokers, bond dealers and investment bankers enjoyed the nation's top average income of $18,810 — followed by doctors and dentists averaging $14,000-plus years at $15,364, engineers and architects at $14,545, dentists at $13,707 and accountants at $811-180.

GLOBETROTTERS

So there they are, the MPs, top income dogs in all Canada, with $6,000 of their $18,000-plus tax-free, which, in any National Revenue calculation, puts them far ahead even of the front-running stock brokers, bond dealers and money lenders.

And that is not accounting for all the profitable . . . ing" many of the MPs do, despite the clear directive from Prime Minister Pearson that now, at their high pay plateau, what is what they called a full-time occupation." (Hansard, page 2736, of July 29, 1963.)

Could be that Parliament's more in need of assistance than the rest of the country because it is so out of economic touch with the people it should let alone the average Canadian.

But that is far from all.

There are the MPs' pensions, first from $3,000 pension to junkets here, there and everywhere around the world.

Item: an MP delegation has been to Malaysia.

Item: the Commons Defence committee has been to Germany, France, Britain; west to the American Rockies en-route to Washington and now is off to Virginia and Bermuda.

Item: from the annual Parliamentary magic carpet excursions to Geneva, London, Paris, Rome, Berlin, Cairo and assorted other Faraway Places.

Item: one more refreshing change-of-travel-pace, the Agriculture Committee of the Commons, followed by chartered motorcade, is going to tour — of all places — Canada.

Why not? Why not visit the world? Don't be a piker.

Get to Parliament and travel in style — then and pension are so much better.

Perhaps Cow Was Churnsy

Montreal Star

For years a lot of people daring enough to try it have wondered why cows jump just what Calgary's Harry Hays uses to make his concoction of syllabub. It's his milk, apparently, so dreadful that he uses it just once a year when he throws a tremendous shindig in connection with the opening of Stampede Week.

But as he is minister of agriculture in the federal government. And the news stories in that Calgary indicate that he also has a secret of animal husbandry, and which in his official capacity he is a secret draub-bound to share with farmers everywhere. That's a secret that could make life so much easier for few-cow farmers, and cheaper in the long run for major dairy producers.

Or, should it all just be blamed on a silly slicker report.

Mohawk Model Is Routed As Indians Hold Election

GARDEN RIVER, Ont. (CP) — The long knives of political dispute were sheathed Friday night as the end of the annual conference of the National Indian Council.

But the peace pipes were left aside following the rout of Mohawk fashion model Kahn-tineta Horn in her bid to oust the present leadership headed by Ca'gary lawyer William Wuttunee in a final volley of fire at the windup party, Miss Horn said:

"I hope we will remember what happened here and see what we can do about it in the future."

Mr. Wuttunee was re-elected chief of the council by a 454-to-42 vote margin. His closest opponent was Chief John Tootoosis, a dark-horse candidate from Cuthkille, Sask.

Chief Richard Pine of the Garden River reserve, near Sault Ste. Marie, who was supported by Miss Horn, had only 11 votes in the first of three ballots and slipped to eight in the second.

Miss Horn and her supporters were also shut out in two other elections — three sachems (assistants to the president) and 12 council seats.

LAST IN VOTE

In her bid for a sachems post she finished last in a six-candidate field, tied with another rival, Alanis Obomsawin. Abenaki folksinger from the Odanak reserve near Sorel, Que.

Both had traded insults at the conference opening Wednesday.

Miss Horn, her brother Frank and Chief Pine were among the 11 unsuccessful candidates for the council seats.

Chief Tootoosis, 65, head of the Saskatchewan Federation of Indians, was elected sachem, along with Fred Belleau of Caughnawaga and Philip Thompson, executive director of the Edmonton Native Centre.

Miss Horn said that although she was no longer on the executive she would still participate as a member of the council.

She later attended, but took no part in, a contest which selected Irene Seenesquasis, 20-year-old Cree secretarial student from Saskatoon, as her successor to the title of Indian Princess of Canada.

Miss Seenesquasis, originally from the Duck Lake reserve in Saskatchewan, won out over seven other girls in a contest judged on beauty, character and appearance in native costume.

The last National Indian Council had named Miss Horn Princess Canada 1963-64 by straight appointment, but stripped the Caughnawaga model of her title in June.

However, Miss Horn did go to the platform at the end of the ceremony to extend thanks to the hosts of the conference.

WANTS PROBE

Miss Horn continued her battle with Mr. Wuttunee throughout the day, demanding at one point a formal investigation into what she claimed were falsehoods uttered by Mr. Wuttunee during their rivalry developed early this year.

But the council took no action when she did not specify what statements she was referring.

Recommendations for constitution revisions were shelved when the council decided to appoint a seven-member executive committee to draw up proposed amendments for a later conference. This was suggested by Mr. Wuttunee.

The conference did vote to apply for a federal government charter, a recommendation by Miss Horn that provided a rare moment of agreement when it was supported by Mr. Wuttunee.

The common goal, therefore, should be patient and constructive talks, aimed at seeking a peaceful and mutually acceptable solution of disputed international problems.

The communique said a broad exchange of views on international problems took place.

The sides discussed questions on which exchanges of views now are under way in respect of the consolidation of the United Nations mechanism for maintaining peace.

They expressed readiness to take part in further exchange of views on these questions.

Both sides explained their views on questions of European security, including questions connected with a German peace settlement.

The sides exchanged views, in general, on the state of British - Soviet relations, and discussed steps for the achievement of further progress.

The communique said Russia and Britain agreed the talks, held in a spirit of co-operation and cordiality, offered a valuable opportunity to discuss questions of mutual interest and "that it would be useful to maintain contacts whenever there is a chance for this."

Consecrate Famous Shrine

NEW BASILICA FOR OUR LADY — This modern granite basilica is the offshoot of a small 250-year-old chapel called Our Lady of the Cape which has been the inspiration for pilgrimages to Cap-de-la-Madeleine, Que., on the St. Lawrence River. The new building has automatic elevators, built-in ramps for wheelchairs and air-conditioning. The shrine will be consecrated Aug. 14. (CP Photo)

CAP-de-la-MADELEINE, Que. (CP)—The Roman Catholic shrine of Our Lady of the Cape, welcoming pilgrims to this town on the St. Lawrence River for 200 years, has suddenly sprouted into a big granite basilica from a little fieldstone chapel.

Leading dignitaries of the church will be present Aug. 14 when Msgr. Georges-Leon Pelletier, Bishop of Trois-Rivieres, consecrates the new basilica at a 9:30 a.m. service to begin three days of ceremonies.

The chapel built in 1714 still stands here, on the north shore of the river halfway between Montreal and Quebec City, in the shadow of the basilica.

Paul - Emile Cardinal Leger, Archbishop of Montreal, will celebrate mass in the basilica; bishop Sergio Pignedoli, the recently appointed apostolic delegate to Canada, Aug. 16.

Visitors will or struck by the contrast between the old, vine-covered chapel, which seats barely 100 persons and has no amenities, and the basilica with its automatic doors, built-in ramps for wheelchairs, air-conditioning, three sacristies and space for a few thousand worshippers.

1,500,000 VISITORS

Church authorities have long known the 1714 chapel to be inadequate. Last year the shrine had 1,500,000 visitors, of whom 400,000 received communion, and 11,475 masses were celebrated.

Work on the basilica began in 1955. Its opening and consecration this summer will simultaneously mark the 250th anniversary of the chapel, the 100th anniversary of the dedication of the shrine to the Virgin Mary, and the 10th anniversary of the national Marian congress at Our Lady of the Cape.

One of the basilica's most striking features is the stained glass window designed by Dutch artist Jan Tillemans, a Dutch Oblate father, which tell the catechism in picture form.

The top of the cross surmounting the basilica's pyramidal dome is 256 feet above the ground. The basilica is 273 feet long by 167 feet wide.

Inside the basilica comprises an upper church, with seven private chapels, and a crypt or basement church.

The Way of the Cross in the basement church, painted on the walls by Paul Lacroix of Quebec City, has 15 stations instead of the traditional 14. The extra one calls attention to the mystery of Christ's resurrection.

Robt. Nixon Says Support Pledged by 200 Delegates

ST. GEORGE, Ont. (CP)—Robert Nixon (L — Brant) claimed Friday to have nearly 200 delegates committed to vote for him at the September leadership convention of the Ontario Liberal party.

This was the first word from Mr. Nixon, 36, on known delegate support. A statement issued from his campaign headquarters estimated that with another 250 committed delegates, Nixon would have the leadership sewed up.

Mr. Nixon's headquarters figured on about 1,200 delegates being accredited to vote at the convention, starting in Toronto Sept. 17. For an eventual victory, Mr. Nixon would need about 600 votes on the first ballot, the statement said.

Son of Harry Nixon, one-time Liberal premier of Ontario, young Bob Nixon entered the legislature in 1962, winning the seat left vacant by his father's death.

As a farmer, he is counting heavily on rural support. The two other main leadership contenders, Andy Thompson, 39, and Charles Templeton, 48, both are from Toronto.

Nixon headquarters said that about one-half of the delegates already committed to him are from urban areas.

PARK DALE CUBS HOLD CAMP

Forty-five boys of the 182nd Belleville Park Dale A and B Packs with six guest Cubs from the 91st Glenmount A Pack (Toronto) enjoyed a rousing camp out at Consecon Children's Camp recently.

An advance party reached the camp site on the evening of June 26 to prepare for the arrival of the main group the next day.

Akela Dreesman and Bageera Crone with six senior boys, along with volunteer cooks from the Women's Auxiliary, Vera Moon, Earla Whitney, Madelaine Blute and Grace Morman, made up the group.

At 8.00 a.m. on Saturday morning the main body met at Park Dale Community Centre under the direction of C. M. Nickle and ACM J. Robinson. Flag raising at 9.30 a.m. heralded the official opening of camp when the Packs arrived.

Then it was into camp clothes and out the games began. The remainder of the day saw swimming, ball games and relays with the Cubs were later joined by their parents for a sing-song.

At the close of camp fire the Cubs took their parents on a tour of the camp site and excitedly told of the cowboys and Indian film that they had been seeing along with their many other activities. This film will be shown to the parents later in the Park Dale Hall.

Sunday saw more sports activities, then it was into uniform for the church service. Roman Catholic members proceeded to morning Mass.

Following lunch the camp reluctantly broke up; but it was a happy group of Cubs who returned to their homes.

Supervisors for the Camp were C. Drennan, C. Nickle, J. Robinson, H. MacDonald, B. Reynolds, F. Green (Toronto), Wally Delong (Toronto) and N. Crone

British Parliament Ends, Expect Vote on October 15

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP) — Britain's 42nd Parliament came to an end yesterday with sex and security scandals merely an echo and the Tory government stressing social security matters.

Sir Alec Douglas-Home's cabinet let it be known that it sees bread-and-butter issues as the dominant theme in the campaign for the general election expected in October or Oct. 15 seems the most likely date, following the Queen's visit to Canada.

The last weeks of the Parliament that began with Harold Macmillan's big 1959 victory passed in a sort of pre-election torpor vastly different from earlier debates when the government was rocked by successive security scandals famed as the Vassal and Profumo affairs.

Now Prime Minister Douglas-Home is reported planning to increase the patient's social security benefits laid down by the 1945 Labor government so that more is paid to the needy and less to the well-to-do, particularly in pensions.

This would mean a major change in the present system of universal flat-rate benefits irrespective of need. Some experts even mention re-institution of the old means test but every effort would likely be made to avoid this.

OUTLINE CAMPAIGN

Anyway, informed sources say Sir Alec will fight the campaign mainly on education, pensions, housing and land prices, employment and, above all, plans to combat the rising cost of living. These issues have already been pushed into the background by debates on defence and Britain's independent nuclear deterrent and Labor's plans to nationalize building land and re-nationalize steel.

In one view, all the efforts by Macmillan and Douglas-Home, his successor, to make the deterrent an election issue have not persuaded Tory backroom strategists that the voters have abandoned bread and butter as their chief interest.

Certainly the most poignant moment of the Parliament came this week when the House of Commons voted its unbounded admiration and gratitude to Sir Winston Churchill, who in his 90th year visited the House for perhaps the last time.

That occasion also marked the last speech before the House of former Premier Macmillan after 40 years of service. Neither Churchill nor Macmillan is standing for re-election.

The Tories — now in power for 13 years — stretched out the life of Parliament as long as possible in the face of Labor's popularity in opinion polls.

Present standing in the 630-seat house is: Conservatives 353; Labor 261; Liberals 7; Independents 2; vacant 7.

Educated Hubby's Clueless When It Comes to the Law

DEAR DORIS — My husband of ten years has a good job with good salary and car expenses. He has had one affair after another; is completely indifferent to the three children and myself.

Some weeks all I get to feed us is ten dollars. This week he never showed up at all. But for my baby bonus cheque we would have starved. The children drank water for four days and dry toast; even the peanut butter was all gone.

We are not Canadian and I threaten to take the children home to Scotland. He says I can't do that, even though he only wants to see them every six months. He says he doesn't have to support me at all. I'm capable of caring for myself!

DORIS CLARK

Miss Clark, this is an educated man. I think he is sick in the head. I need your advice before I lose my sanity. — NO MORE PATIENCE.

DEAR NO MORE — For an educated man he is surprisingly clueless when it comes to knowing the law. A man supports his wife and family or else may see him. A man is faithful to his wife or she may divorce him. And I find it hard to imagine how he could stop you if you took your brood and hied back to the Highlands!

For legal aid, see Mr. Ross Bailey, Sheriff and Legal Aid Director for the County of Hastings, Belleville.

DEAR DORIS — There is a couple who have lived together for 20 years as man and wife. This man is married and has not seen or heard anything about his wife in the last 19 years.

Could he get married to the woman he is living with or would this be begamy? They would-beth like to get married. — A FRIEND.

DEAR FRIEND — Can the man prove he has sought his wife without success? After an absence of seven years, such proof may mean she can be declared legally dead. The action is taken in court, by his lawyer. Then he may marry.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: When we have company for dinner, I usually serve coffee in the living room and, while guests are making themselves comfortable, take the opportunity to put the dishes in to soak and put away any leftovers. My sister-in-law took me to task for this one evening, and said it's impolite to pull a disappearing act so soon, and for so long, after dinner, and that it looks as though I want the women guests to lend a hand in cleaning up, which I certainly don't. What do you think about her remark? — Mrs. S. A., Ithaca, N.Y.

Answer: When you leave guests too long, some of the women might feel guilty about your working in the kitchen and feel they should help out. However, if you have the kitchen organized beforehand — with the water ready and a pail handy for scraping — no one should miss you for ten minutes or so while you run the oversee and done But It is rather impolite to disappear for the rest of the evening and let the guests entertain while you do a full cleaning-up job. It's more courteous to devote the bulk of your attention to them and finish washing up after every one has departed.

Question: We've invited a couple to our daughter's wedding who are old and dear friends. They accepted, but now I've received a note from them asking if they might bring a couple with them. The couple, who will be house guests of theirs at the time, are known to know only slightly, but to like to be accommodating, but to keep the guest list down. I've had to overlook many friends who are much closer. If you have any suggestions I have additional guests, do you think this will deter the original couple from coming? Also, should I do about it without appearing ungracious or rigfit? — Mrs. C. L., Hamilton, N. J.

Answer: In the first place, it's thoughtless of guests to try to have friends included in a wedding invitation. The best way to handle the situation is to have those friends send your friend that the guest list, unfortunately, is closed and that there is no way of fitting in additional people. Add that you hope she will be invited and will be able to attend anyway.

It's then squarely up to them to let you know if they can still be at the wedding and reception and to make other plans for their house guests if they must.

Dealer's Choice In Waists, High, Low or None at All

By PEGGY MASSIN

PARIS (Reuters) — Silhouettes of Castillo, Laroche and Cardina are "dealer's choice," with high waistline, low waistline or no waistline.

Castillo's young, raised waistlines and short cropped jackets contrast with the low-waisted dresses at Laroche and long straight tunics and middies shown by Cardin.

All designers tend to enforce individuality only for skirts, via the low-set flares or inverted pleats.

Castillo's "bekirka," evolved from full-legged culottes, adds a new dimension to the fashion of pants as well as a new word to the fashion vocabulary.

Although Pierre Balmain and Jacques Heim showed shorter skirts at the Ritz, Castillo remained a model day in Bermudas, Friday's showings all kept clear of knees.

Second Glance

By Viva Richmond Graham

HOLIDAY TIME

"Travel, in the younger sort, is part of education; in the elder, a part of experience." — Francis Bacon.

Enroule from the New York World's Fair back to their home in Utah via Canada, dear friends of ours stopped briefly to say us a visit in Belleville.

This is our first trip abroad, so to speak," they exclaimed in admiration for our beautiful country and fair city.

UNCONVINCED

We in turn were duly impressed by their appearance on arrival. Though the day was hot and humid, the women stepped from the car wearing sweaters. The men looked cool as cucumbers in business suits, fresh collar, tie and all.

The mystery was soon solved. For they rode in an air-conditioned car; certainly a perfect idea for cross country motoring!

Driving in the lap of luxury, however, doesn't necessarily insure freedom from driving hazards, for one of the men of the party related:

"While driving, concerned over a road sign to indicate our particular highway, I unwittingly violated a red light regulation in a small town in Michigan. The penalty for such an offence, the traffic officer informed us, was a $15 fine along with a four day driver's licence suspension.

"Since it was necessary, for the amount of time we had at our disposal to see the Fair, to make every minute count, this constituted a major crisis in our plans.

"Finally, we went to the judge to lay our case before him. It was agreed since others in our party could drive, we might proceed to New York, where my licence would be forwarded to our hotel, upon the lapse of the four day period.

TAUGHT LESSON

"We were thus allowed to go on our way, and in due time the sentence was served.

"Though no harm was actually done, still this matter gave me to some thought. One expects to pay a fine for an offense, as a matter of course. To have to remain in Michigan is neither here nor there. One simply goes on until the next time, without too much concern. Money is usually quite easily replaceable. But time! That's quite a different matter. For it is taken from one by suspension of a driving licence all kinds of inconveniences arise, and relentlessly so. Time can never be replaced.

"Driving being what it is today, I feel on this trip I've had an experience that'll stand me in good stead for the rest of my days, and I'm grateful for it."

QUILTING TIME

Summertime isn't usually considered the time or season for quilting. Yet, when Mrs. Ross Burr, 230 William Street, kindly drew our attention to a patchwork quilt which, "... I thought might interest you after reading your article some years ago on handwoven spreads and quilt patterns..." right now seems just a splendid time to discuss it, especially if anyone might be holidaying "out west."

In one patchwork quilt, which is the hobby of Mrs. "Granny" McKinnon of Bassano, Alberta, she not only reproduced the buildings on her home ranch, but incorporated 100 Alberta brands.

Brands were as coals of arms of the great feudal lords in the old days of Europe in the early days of the great ranching empires. In fact branding is older. It may be traced to the early Greeks who branded their slaves. Later in England army deserters were branded with a D — criminals with B C - bad character, and persisted as late as 1870.

CATTLE BRANDING

Cattle were invariable branded on the great North American cattle ranges. Today laws provide for registering brands of which there're around 25,000 in Alberta, and some of these, but they some distinctive mark, letter or other device which is burnt on the skin of an animal to indicate ownership, are stitched on "Granny" McKinnon's patchwork quilt. The fame of her handiwork has spread and was featured in color on the cover of The Imperial Farm News not long ago.

And this is another hearty warming instance where a woman's needle runs a close race with the mighty pen in preserving and recording the history which is the glory of this wonderful land of ours. And as such, may prove of interest, should you chance to roam the prairies this summer. As Bacon reminds us "he that travelleth into a country before he hath some entrance into the language, goeth to school and not to travel."

Again, thank you for your hospitality interest, Mrs. Burr. A happy holiday, everyone!

Student Prince Still Echoes Through 'Dear Old Heidelberg'

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

HEIDELBERG, Germany — Dear Old Heidelberg. . . The Student Prince. . . drinking songs and dueling scars. . . bearded professors musing their ways down cobbled alleys. . . caps and cloaks.

Cocktail bars and Der Golden Westen Cafe. . . women students. . . drinking halls with Coke on the tables. . . Porsches roaring down the cobbled streets . . . shop windows with microscopes and typewriters. . .

The image and the actuality the eternal conflict of travel. Yet in few places is both said as palpably as in Heidelberg.

For Heidelberg is literally all of these, for the very next war and the very old, which dates to the misty days of Franks and Celts and was the seat of the Holy Roman Emperor's Palatine Electors, the focal point of the bitter wars of the Reformation. Most of all, it is the home of Europe's most famous university.

The two cities are divided by a ridge. On the other side of the highway tunnel boring through it, along the lush green banks of the Neckar, is the old city, dominated from an imposing height by Heidelberg Castle. Battered by storms, war and fire, the castle was built by three centuries of princes and saw most of the history that ultimately shaped modern Europe.

Except for a section restored in the 19th century, the red sandstone Renaissance bastion is as imposing ruin today. But its gardens and battlements command lovely views of the city and river winding beneath.

LARGEST WINE CASK

There is little to see inside except the world's largest wine cask. Built in 1750 and filled only four times, it can hold 60,000 gallons and was made in that size to be as big as a considerable tithes of 18th Century royalty's sprawling feudal lands. The cask is as high as a three storey house. On top, accessible by a spiral staircase, is a dance floor used for parties by students. Plumbing from the vats to the dining room still is visible.

Alongside the cask is a wooden statue of Perkeo, Heidelberg's gnome-like symbol. Perkeo was a Spanish jester to the Elector Palatine Karl Philipp.

When asked if he'd like a glass of wine, he'd answer "Por que no?", why not? Hence his name. Next to the statue is a favorite toy of the jester, a wooden box with a pull-out drawer. Inside, the chain opens a door and a fox tail pops out to brush the face of the drinker.

In the old city beneath the castle, touristic history and bustling student life combine to make Heidelberg cosmopolitan and lively. In the central square lined with book stalls and beer stein vendors, is probably the only church in the world that existed half Protestant and half Catholic for 200 years. In fact, the Catholic Church of the Holy Ghost even accommodated a third sect, the Old Catholics, a Roman offshoot.

Opposite the church is the Zum Ritter Hotel. Its Renaissance facade, dating to the 15th Century, is covered with carved stone tiers, statuary and medieval buildings.

DUELLING HIS REBIRTH

Student life goes on much as it always has — and occasionally is having a rebirth — though the colorful gowns and dinky caps were today worn mostly during holidays. The favorite haunt of students, with whom it is almost as popular as with tourists, is the Roter Ochsen — Red Ox — Tavern. If it didn't come out of the Student Prince, it should have.

The ancient stone-and-beam walls and ceiling of the tavern are lined with antique steins, the evening air of duelling and student life scenes, portraits of Bismarck, currency of most of Europe's past and countless calling cards of practically everyone who has ever been in the place. Above the entrance, at a honky-tonk piano bangs out melodies ranging from Gaudeamus Igitur — the classic Heidelberg drinking song — to something identified in his tattered song book as "Scott Bleas Amerika."

Rounds of beer are marked off in chalk on the initial-scarred wooden table tops. The prime evening entertainment among students centres about a glass boat brimming with half a gallon of beer. Each toper takes his turn, accompanied by a bang of an elbow on a table top, a rap of a fist, and a slap on the boat, a traditional invitation of which have long since been forgotten. Drinking over the beer gets down towards the toe of the boat, can produce a faceful of foam if the container isn't tilted just so.

STUDENT PRISON

Among the weathered old buildings in Heidelberg's narrow side streets, is the Student Prison, used for two centuries, until 1914. To be consigned for a few days or two weeks in these dank rooms was an honor among the high-spirited scions of the world's best families.

The cells bear such grand names as Grand Hotel and Palais Royal. The commode, mounted on three steps inevitably was named the Throne Room. The walls of the cells are decorated with glorifying self-portraits of the inmates. All were painted with primitive colors fashioned from such materials as candles and soot, and were framed with mixtures of bread, wax and saliva which are as hard as cement today.

Magorialized on the walls are "unjust" punishments for such offenses as "overturning the police station "lost" bricks, which the students had conveniently "found."

Before serving his sentence, a student was allowed to have a beer blast with his friends, and after two or three days on bread and water could have meals delivered by the landlord or a restaurant. Ach, those were the days in Dear Old Heidelberg.

Lodges Visit Home for Senior Citizens

STIRLING — On July 26 over 20 members of Stirling Rawdon Lodge No. 429 motored along with a few members of the Campbellford Lodge, travelled to Centreherbaud Barrio to visit the Odd Fellows Home for senior citizens.

The members took their dinner along and enough to share with the aged people at the home. They arranged picnic tables on the spacious lawn and here the group sat down to a sumptuous picnic dinner.

During the afternoon tours of the home were arranged in order that each member could view the various parts of the building which is in charge of the order. The bus arrived about 12.30 and dinner followed immediately. The group also enjoyed visiting with the residents and found the home ideal for an out-of-doors gathering.

The aged people were most grateful for their kindly care at the home and also for the entertainment provided by the travellers. The group left for home at the supper hour and felt that it was a day to be remembered in Oddfellowship.

Readers' Saturday Column

Question: I have a beautiful new freezer which is the delight of my life. Please give instructions for freezing fruits in season.... Doris J.

Answer: With pleasure. We believe dry sugar pack is the best method for freezing most fruits. If packing fruit in dry sugar, stir gently until enough juice is drawn from fruit to partially dissolve sugar. A soft rubber spatula is a good tool for the job. Handle fruits gently, hold frozen fruits at 0 deg. Fahr. or colder. Thaw quickly and use immediately to conserve optimum color and flavor. Pack in freezer containers, seal, label, date and freeze.

SATURDAY

Dinner Menu

Chilled Red Currant Juice Cocktail; Marinated Pork Chops; Buttered Noodles; Green Beans; Compote of Red Plums; Cocoanut Macaroons (see Friday); Tea.

TO FREEZE RASPBERRIES (black and red): Choose firm, fully ripe berries. Pick over and wash if necessary in colander (draining well). Pack in dry sugar, using 1 lbs. prepared fruit (about 16 cups) to one lb. sugar (4 cups) or pack in cold, firm syrup to cover (1 cup sugar, 3 cups water).

TO FREEZE CHERRIES: Choose firm, ripe cherries. Wash stem and pit. Pack in dry sugar, using 3 lbs. prepared fruit (about 8 cups) to one lb. sugar (2 cups) or a little less. Or pack in cold, heavy syrup to cover (1 cup sugar, 2½ cups water).

TO FREEZE BLUEBERRIES: Wash, sort, drain and dry as well as possible. Same as raspberries above. Note: for blueberries to be served uncooked the syrup pack is recommended: To each 3 cups cold water add 1 cup granulated sugar, stir until all sugar granules are dissolved. We find an advantage in boiling the syrup and since it should be as cold as possible when poured over fresh blueberries in container, the coldness is an advantage.

TO FREEZE FRESH CURRANTS (red and black): Wash, stem, eliminate poor fruit. Currants are usually frozen for use in pies or tarts. We prefer to add enough sugar for use in pies or tarts and to lightly crush the fruit so that most of the sugar is dissolved before freezing (use 1 lb. sugar to 3 lbs. fruit). Frozen black currants are a good source of vitamin C and most varieties, when ripe, freeze with excellent quality.

TO FREEZE GOOSEBERRIES: Remove, stem and blossom ends, wash, and eliminate poor fruit. Cut the berries in half and add the amount of sugar necessary for pies or tarts (use 1 lb. sugar to 3 lbs. fruit).

TO FREEZE PEACHES: Peel and pit firm-ripe peaches (fairly good results are obtained from Envoy, Redhaven, Sunbeam, Veteran varieties). Slice into eighths or twelfths, add sugar (about 1 lb. to 8 lbs. of sliced peaches), turn into mixture with a rubber scraper a few times, carefully, until sugar is dissolved. Pack in freezer containers, cover and seal and freeze. Vitamin C (ascorbic acid crystals) may be added if desired to preserve color - not more than ½ teaspoon to sugar-fruit mixture in each container.

A Lift for Living
Painful Conscience Indicates It's Still Alive, Functioning

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

A recent news item tells that an American municipal court had to close temporarily because the presiding judge suffered severe burns on his left foot when he stepped into a beach fire. The judge had incurred a war injury which left his foot with dead nerves, and he was not aware that he was standing on hot coals until he had been severely burned. The man's freedom from pain almost destroyed his foot and leg.

Many children afflicted with the mental disease schizophrenia do not react to injury and pain as normal children do. Of a group of 31 schizophrenic children observed in one child research centre, only six reacted normally in response to pain. One child cut and bruised her finger when a door slammed shut on it, and she looked at the finger with a wan smile and with no sign of distress. Another child sat on a very hot radiator unaware she was being burned. Childhood accidents that make other children cry out in anguish left schizophrenic youngsters undisturbed.

Pain is generally regarded as one of man's worst enemies, but it is often our good friend. It shouts a warning, "You are hurt! You need attention." Thus pain is one of God's mercies built into our bodies. Its function is to signal that something is wrong and the wrong needs correction. If you felt no pain when you cut your fingers, soon you might have no fingers, soon if you were unaffected by pain when foreign matter lodged in your eyes, soon you might have no sight. If there were no toothache, many people would let teeth rot in their mouths without seeking dental help.

ALL ALIVE

A painful conscience indicates that it is still alive, functioning, vital. It is still capable of rebuking a man and alerting him to his wrongdoing. An Indian who bartered at a trading post on the wilderness edge returned home with his goods and found a silver coin in a package of tobacco. The coin did not belong there. Someone had lost it. The Indian was so troubled about the matter that he returned to the trading post and gave the coin back to the trader who laughed teasingly at the red man's scruples. But the Indian insisted on giving the coin to the trader, explaining, "I got a good man and a bad man in my heart. Good man say, 'Coin not yours.' Bad man say, 'No body will know.' Good man say, 'Take coin back to trading post.' Bad man say, 'never mind.' Then I think maybe I go to sleep. But good man and bad man quarrel all night and bother me. So I bring back coin and stop the quarrel." Such self-criticism of the bad in us by the good in us is painful, but, like a hurt in the body, the distress is requisite to a remedy. It gives us cause and incentive for amendment and redemption.

Is conscience a reliable, wholly infallible guide to right conduct? No, not hardly reliable. If it were unerring, how could we explain the fact that two men with equally clear consciences will find themselves on opposite sides of the same issue? John Woolman and John Newton lived in the 17 hundreds, and both were eminent religious leaders of their time. Woolman protested vehemently against the African slave trade and militantly led his followers to protest it. Newton, the author of many a beautiful English hymn, had been a captain on a slave ship, and observed his devotions within a few feet of the ship's hold where the slaves were bound and where many sickened and died before their voyage ended. Obviously both conscience and God are infallible guides and still lead Woolman and Newton in opposite directions.

FAR FROM UNERRING

The fact is, conscience, like pain is far from unerring in voicing voice. It must be trained to hurt when it should hurt and to be silent when it should be untroubled. No one at six months of age detests dishonesty. Many do at 16 years of age. No one at nine months of age is troubled by taking something that does not belong to him. Many are at nine years of age and more still at 16. Saint Paul, writing his First Letter to Timothy urged him to teach a "love that issues from a pure heart and a good conscience and sincere faith." A "good conscience." In Christian terms, is one that is trained to feel at peace only when one's conscience is healthily Christlike and to hurt when unChristlike acts are committed or contemplated.

At Christian's conscience is at rest only when the "good man" wins the argument within him.

Stories of Famous Hymns

RING THE BELLS OF HEAVEN!

Ring the bells of heaven! there is joy today,
For a soul returning from the wild!
See! the Father meets him out upon the way,
Welcoming His weary, wand'ring child.
Ring the bells of heaven! there is joy today,
For the wand'rer now is reconciled;
Yes, a soul is rescued from his sinful way,
And is born a new a ransomed child.
Ring the bells of heaven! spread the feast today!
Angels, swell the glad, triumphant strain!
Tell the joyful tidings, bear it far away!
For a precious soul is born again.
CHORUS:
Glory! glory! bow the angels sing;
Glory! glory! bow the loud harps ring!
the ransomed army, like a mighty sea,
Pealing forth the anthem of the free.

"Ring The Bells Of Heaven" is missing from most twentieth century hymnals but it was exceedingly popular for several decades during the years that followed the War between the States.

It was written by William O. Cushing, whose gospel hymns — "Under His Wings", "Follow On," "Beautiful Valley of Eden" and a host of others — were still going up and down America with leading evangelists at the turn of the century.

Mr. Cushing received one day from George Frederick Root, the composer, a fascinating tune which kept singing in his mind for days while he tried to give it a religious setting. Those who have sung the choruses of "Ring The Bell of Heaven" can understand why Mr. Cushing was attracted by the melody. So one day how, he decided, it must be saved for a Sunday School song or some other religious purpose.

As a writer of soul-winning hymns, Mr. Cushing was interested in drawing men and women to Christ and one day, as he saw a man at the altar at the close of an evangelistic meeting, he thought of how the bells of heaven must be ringing in gladness for a sinner's return.

"Then," according to his own report, "the words, 'Ring the bells of heaven' flowed at once into the waiting melody" and the new hymn was made.

George Root, who composed the tune, wrote other gospel song music and many patriotic songs including "The Battle Cry of Freedom" and "Just Before The Battle, Mother."

STATELESS CAR

VALPARAISO (AP) — A car without a country has gone to a watery grave off this Chilean Pacific port, victim of a lack of documents. The 1953-model American car had toured half the world on a Dutch freighter after a U.S. passenger had donated it to the ship's second mate at Yokohama. No customs officials would pass it without proper documents and the car was finally sold into the sea.

In the office of Mining Recorder in Timmins men wait to buy prospector licences. Size of discovery is 400 miles north of Toronto.

Canadian Mineral Industry Adds Exciting Chapter

Timmins, Ontario - Boom Town '64

Reverberating with shock-wave intensity through mining circles and stock markets around the world, the discovery of new riches in the Timmins area of Ontario is adding yet another chapter to the dramatic epic of Canadian mining. For more than a century across the rugged landscape of a giant land the fabulous story of hardship and toil, heart-break and jubilation, which underlies the discovery and development of Canadian mineral deposits has captured the imagination of adventurous men. Even cold economic facts that show mineral production brings the nation $3,000,000,000 annually and that a third of the value of all exports comes from goods of mineral origin can only add to the glamour of probing for hidden wealth. Already, the copper-zinc-silver discovery that drew a flood of people from across Canada and around the world to Timmins has been doubled in estimated value, sending the original excitement and energy surging still higher. Drill rigs rising with fresh impetus to pin down vast new ore deposits, the drone of aircraft carrying geophysical-detection instruments, the clattering rotors of swarms of helicopters, the rush at the mining recorder's office, the crowded hotels, stores and business offices, the urgent ring of axes blazing marks in the forests depths—these form the background to one of the most thrilling shows on earth. Timmins, an example of the massive resources which have enabled the nation to triple mineral production in a dozen years, proves that Canada is one place where the romance of the Klondike can still be enjoyed.

Drill parts go into exploration area by helicopter in northern Ontario bushland. Mining claims staked even included the local airport.

cess of being replaced by ultra-sophisticated models — have been trained to do at high speed one of the main jobs of the printers. This is in the production of the little type-metal slugs that form each line of type.

Since the strike started, girls from the office staff type these lines, simultaneously producing perforated tape. The computer takes the tape and "justifies" the lines to make them fit the exact width of a column, using its "memorized" linotype operator's craft, and turns out new tape. This tape runs through a typesetting machine to produce the slugs automatically and swiftly.

Type for news and classified adds is also handled this way. Ready-to-use tape on other material—national and world news and stock market quotations—comes into the papers from news agency machines.

Much material normally set by printers, too, is reproduced by photo-engraving. Many picture captions are typed and photographed. So are boiler-race form charts, normally an intricate typesetting job. Some long feature stories written by staff writers also are handled this way.

Many big "display" advertisements, a major part of the financial life-blood of the papers, are put together in non-union shops. In many cases, the same advertising material is exchanged among the papers.

The future of this practice is a major point at issue between the disputants, since the computer, jurisdiction was settled this week on apparently about the same terms as the publishers proposed before the walkout. For years the typographical union has maintained a "mat restriction" clause in its contracts. A newspaper receiving an ad in matrix form — just about ready for publication — could use this but would have to have the whole ad assembled again in its own plant, to make work. The type would then be thrown away.

The publishers call this featherbedding but had agreed to do it as customary before the strike. Since the walkout began, they have called for its elimination and now are insisting on it. And since the pre-strike negotations, when agreement on the computer issue would have settled the whole dispute, they have opened up other vital issues.

They are asking the ITU to give up its traditional membership jurisdiction over foremen and assistant foremen in the composing room and also want to be able to use an unlimited amount of tape for automatic typesetting in future.

In return, the papers are offering to their present printers a "lifetime" guarantee —pre-sumably up to normal retirement age — against unemployment resulting from automation.

Myriad

photographs, suggested that future moon probes study the texture of the surface in the centres of large craters.

The photographs, taken from 1,300 miles out down to 1,000 feet, seemed to resolve an old controversy over whether dust on the moon is thick enough to swallow a landing craft. The fact that rocks thrown from the big craters often were still visible in the bottoms of the shallow craters they created indicated, the scientists said, that the dust layer ranges from a few inches to no more than a foot in depth.

One of the surprising things the photographs showed, Kuiper said, was that the smaller craters were all rounded and soft-looking, completely lacking the sharp jaggedness of the big craters. One explanation, he said, would be that they were made in dust, not in the hard basic material which seems to underly the dust.

Shoemaker said the actual material of the hard layer and the dust could not be determined by photographic analysis. He said the light-reflecting qualities of the dust layer indicated, however, that it was quite porous and pulverized into tiny bits.

The porosity was one indication that much of the moon's crust is lava, hardened while still in a foamy state.

Kuiper said there were many evidences of vulcanism — volcano activity — in the moon's crust and that some of the steeper craters might be extinct volcanos, not the result of impacts.

To Probe

Glenn Uranium Mines Ltd., will be included in the investigation by the Ontario Securities Commission.

The investigation will try to establish a trading pattern in the companies' shares and then track down rumors. Norman Cox, chief OSC investigator, will head the inquiry.

Both Bunker Hill and Glenn Uranium also recorded losses Friday as other companies with properties in the Timmins area fell with Windfall, although many regained ground late in the day. Bunker Hill dropped 5½ cents to 27 cents on a turnover of 232,400 shares, while Glenn fell 10 cents to 21 on 257,000 shares.

One odd note was struck when some stockholders affected by the panic selling apparently got their geography mixed up. Ragian Nickel, with property in Labrador's Ungava area, was sold down to 52.05 at one point. But when traders realized what was happening, they snapped up the stock and it closed at $2.95, a six-cent gain for the day.

Meanwhile, Glenn shareholders have approved an increase in authorized capital of 2,000,000 shares to 7,000,000 shares and a change in the company's name to Glenn Explorations Ltd.

Company President P. C. A. Giardine said the second drill hole at Timmins - area property should be completed in three or four days, but no reports have been received so far.

Mr. Wishart said he had asked for the investigation because Windfall seemed slow in making known the results of its drilling.

He said: "It would be interesting to know whether someone was manipulating it (the stock). I don't say Windfall has done anything wrong. But I think it would be worth while to know what stock was sold and who was purchasing it."

John Campbell, director of the OSC, said Friday the commission will give priority to the Windfall investigation which "will last between one and two months if we're lucky."

Mr. MacMillan and his wife, Viola, a Windfall director, could not be reached for comment.

Mrs. MacMillan, who sold the claims to Windfall, is currently president of the Prospectors and Developers Association.

There was one subject on which most securities analysts agreed: The immediate future of the speculative mining market is not bright.

One veteran said the Windfall fall "ought to kick hell out of the speculative market," although another felt stock with merit would weather the storm.

A third said it will be harder in the immediate future for small mining firms to raise money.

JOINS CABINET

EDMONTON (CP) — Randolph H. McKinnon, Social Credit member of the Alberta legislature for the Edmonton constituency of Strathcona West, was sworn-in Friday as minister of education. He succeeds Anders O. Aalborg, education minister for 12 years until his appointment Wednesday as provincial treasurer to fill the vacancy created by the sudden dismissal from cabinet of E. W. Hinman.

NOW HORSELESS TOO?

HADDINGTON, England (CP)—Former film actor and naval officer Clement David Marlowe - Howells bought a horse after losing his driver's licence in-1962 for drunk driving. He now has been fined of being drunk while in charge of a horse.

TO MARK ANNIVERSARY

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul will travel to Orvieto, 62 miles north of Rome, to commemorate the 700th anniversary on Aug. 11 of the institution of the Corpus Christi religious feast. The city will present him with a golden chalice.

Boothby Denies Association With Gangster

LONDON (Reuters) — Lord Boothby, 64, denies in a letter to London Times rumors circulating here that he is the British peer alleged by a Sunday newspaper to have had a homosexual relationship with a gangster boss.

"The whole affair is a tissue of atrocious lies," says Boothby.

In his letter Boothby says he returned to London from France July 17 and "found, to his amazement," Parliament, Fleet Street (centre of Britain's national press), and other informed quarters seething with the rumors.

His letter says the rumors linked him with "a leading thug" involved in the protection racket and said Boothby went to "all-male" parties with him; was photographed with him in a compromising position on a sofa; that a homosexual relationship existed between Boothby, some of London's East End gangsters and a number of clergymen in Brighton; that some people who knew at the relationship were being blackmailed; and that Scotland Yard had for months been watching meetings between the peer and the underworld thug.

Burundi Irate As Defecting Red Vanishes

BUJUMBURA (AP)—A Communist Chinese diplomat who received political asylum at the United States Embassy here on May 25 has vanished and the Burundi government is angry.

The disappearance amounts to "an unfriendly act which could damage relations between Burundi and the United States," the government radio said Friday. It called shameless the embassy's delay of the news to the administration of Mwami (King) Mwambutsi VI.

Tung defected the next day. He hailed a cab, drove to U.S. Embassy and asked for American help in obtaining asylum.

The Burundi government, which has been charmed by emissaries of Peking, wanted to question Tung. The U.S. embassy insisted its officials should be present at any such interrogation.

An embassy spokesman said Tung had expressed a desire to go to the United States. "His breakfast was eaten in the Wednesday morning and he was found to be gone."

Union and GM End Contract

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers union and General Motors Corp. served contract termination notices on each other Friday.

This means bargaining agreement on a new pact or mutual extension of the current one beyond its Aug. 31 expiration that the union either will have to strike or work without a contract.

GM and the UAW swapped termination notices in 1961, but twice mutually extended the old contract. In 1958, a poor auto year, GM made its termination notice stick, and the UAW worked for weeks without a contract rather than strike.

The UAW has notified both Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. of "intent to serve" termination notices.

Negotiations for new contracts have been under way for five weeks.

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Louis Leddy, president of the University of Windsor, was elected vice - president of the World University Service at the recent conclusion of its biennial meeting in Lund, Sweden. It was announced Friday. The WUS is concerned with education and relief projects on behalf of university students in difficult circumstances in various parts of the world.

We've Never Had It So Good - - for So Long

Canada is in the midst of the longest period of economic buoyancy since the war and government economists say the end isn't in sight. In this story a Canadian Press reporter examines the factors that spell economic prosperity.

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP) — The economy is still running fast and good.

Government economists see no end in sight for the surge that began 40 months ago. Nor do they detect any signs of excesses or imbalance.

In short, these are good times, the longest run of good times since the immediate post-war years.

The current expansion has far exceeded the 1958-60 upturn. It also has lasted longer than the 1954-57 cycle, though it may not be quite as strong; in that one was based on an investment boom.

This summer may produce some weak spots, the experts say. New car sales, while still declining, may climb a bit slower than last year. Summer house - building certainly has run off after a record winter activity, spurred by the federal "bonus" scheme.

But these are not enough to sap the real strength from the whole economy. And in any event the forecasts are for another pickup in the fall.

As the professionals see it, the adventure in the first quarter of this year was so powerful that even if the economy were to flatten out completely for the rest of the year, Canada still could end 1964 with a good grin of what is now a record income.

Canadian businessmen are confident, judging from their plans to spend more dollars into new plants, plant expansion, new machinery and equipment.

Total investment of this type was forecast by the trade department last December at $10,100,000,000, an eight-per-cent increase over 1963.

But the department had scarcely published the forecast when it became clear that it was too low. Investment will almost certainly be higher.

The explanation is fraught with hazards. One is excessive demand. Spending could run high, creating a short supply of labor and materials, forcing prices and costs to rise.

Economists see trouble ahead in the wage demands of industries that are currently in bending contract negotiations will be influenced by the steady rise in corporate profits.

NEW RAIL CONTRACT

Railway workers have won a new contract with higher pay. Just ahead are negotiations involving steel and auto workers, men in industries that have an important influence on prices generally.

Rising prices have been described officially as "relatively stable." But to the economists, stability means that prices are holding steady—only that they aren't rising too fast. How much is too fast?

Consumer prices have risen about two per cent in the last year. They have gone up about 4.6 per cent since the economy began rising in the second quarter of 1961.

No one here is perturbed. They say that the pressure on prices was greater in some of the previous, shorter upswings. This doesn't imply complacency. The consumer price index is being watched closely. There is no suggestion that the dollar will be sacrificed for the sake of bigger economic gains. The forces behind this expansion are numerous.

Certainly one factor has been the U.S. economy, which emerged from the upswing in the United States, now further stimulated by tax cuts.

GRAIN SALES HELP

Dr. Walter Heller, chairman of President Johnson's council of economic advisers, saw gone a far as to predict solid expansion into the first half of 1965.

Another element is the big $500,000,000 wheat sale to Russia, combined with last fall's record Prairie harvest. Western farmers have more money. Transportation facilities were operating full-out all winter.

How big a factor was this? "I think we would be moving along quite nicely right now if we had never swung that deal," says one senior government economist. "It was icing on the cake."

The big stimulant to which the Canadian economy has responded with gusto was undoubtedly the progressive 1961 devaluation of the Canadian dollar which led to its pegging in early 1962 at an exchange rate of 92½ cents in terms of the U.S. dollar.

Canadian manufacturers thereby obtained a special competitive advantage for sales both at home and abroad. This last was a factor in the recent export push. It also helped to displace some imports with domestic production.

INCENTIVE WEARS OFF

One of the devaluation benefits may be slowly seeping away. Economists say the special incentive it provided to start Canadian production of items previously had been imported was good for only two or three years. So that stimulant now is starting to wear off in the body economic.

Having a different cross-section of the economy, the two previous upswings in the country have been capital investment and consumer spending.

This time always the case. Some previous business cycles

Southern Rhodesia Explains Defence Costs Not Doubled

SALISBURY (Reuters) — A Southern Rhodesian government spokesman Friday denied press reports that the territory's defence expenditure for 1964-65 presented in Thursday's budget was "more than double" the figure of 1963-64.

Reuters Thursday erroneously reported the new figure was "more than double" because of a misunderstanding over the period covered by the figure shown in a government document.

The spokesman said the figure shown in this category was in fact only for the six month period following the dissolution of the federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland last Dec. 31.

The figure for the past-federation period given in the document is £2,500,676 ($5,000,952) and that announced in Thursday's budget is £5,994,417 ($11,988,834).

Burundi Irate As Defecting Red Vanishes

BUJUMBURA (AP)—A Communist Chinese diplomat who received political asylum at the United States Embassy here on May 25 has vanished and the Burundi government is angry.

The disappearance amounts to "an unfriendly act which could damage relations between Burundi and the United States," the government radio said Friday. It called shameless the embassy's delay of the news to the administration of Mwami (King) Mwambutsi VI.

Tung defected the next day. He hailed a cab, drove to U.S. Embassy and asked for American help in obtaining asylum.

The Burundi government, which has been charmed by emissaries of Peking, wanted to question Tung. The U.S. embassy insisted its officials should be present at any such interrogation.

An embassy spokesman said Tung had expressed a desire to go to the United States. "His breakfast was eaten in the Wednesday morning and he was found to be gone."

Union and GM End Contract

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers union and General Motors Corp. served contract termination notices on each other Friday.

This means bargaining agreement on a new pact or mutual extension of the current one beyond its Aug. 31 expiration that the union either will have to strike or work without a contract.

GM and the UAW swapped termination notices in 1961, but twice mutually extended the old contract. In 1958, a poor auto year, GM made its termination notice stick, and the UAW worked for weeks without a contract rather than strike.

The UAW has notified both Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. of "intent to serve" termination notices.

Negotiations for new contracts have been under way for five weeks.

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Louis Leddy, president of the University of Windsor, was elected vice - president of the World University Service at the recent conclusion of its biennial meeting in Lund, Sweden. It was announced Friday. The WUS is concerned with education and relief projects on behalf of university students in difficult circumstances in various parts of the world.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The prince was a princess of old — lay fast asleep and locked up tight.

The lovely Lady Jennie, three years old, lay in her crib, unaware she was the object of concern of a self-confessed babysitter and the London city fire department.

Her plight began when the sitter stepped out of the house a moment Thursday night and the front door swung shut behind her, leaving her charge alone in the locked house.

The sitter called the fire department who, bathe to break into the home of Jennie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Caughlin, sought about for a cannier means of rescue.

As long as this situation lasts, there is no indication that the Bank of Canada in concert with the government will change monetary policy.

MONEY AVAILABLE

This policy has been clearly expansionist — "easy money," if you like.

The money supply, as measured by total currency and chartered bank deposits, has risen by $1,281,000,000 in the year.

The central bank reports that in this period $73,000,000 in new paper currency and $20,000,000 in coins have been put into circulation.

The public's bank deposits were up $202,000,000, over the year. The federal government's deposits were $286,000,000 higher.

Good times indeed.

But what of Canada's international standing?

Through the eyes of the financial journals, it seems to be pretty high. The Wall Street Journal has spoken of a "boom in Canada." The headline in a recent monthly survey by the respected Morgan Guaranty Trust Company of New York said "Gloom to Boom — the Change in Canada."

Meanwhile, our actual financial standing in international transactions in goods and services, while improving, has shown some trouble spots.

The Canadian deficit in all this trade in commodities and "invisibles" in the first quarter was $341,000,000, rather a turn for the worse after a $106,000,000 deficit in the last quarter of 1963.

IMPORTS RISE

This setback was due in large measure to statistical adjustments.

But that doesnt explain this dramatic turn of events:

Canada's deficit with the United States balloons to $543,000,000, the highest for any quarter in history. The major reason was a startling 18-per-cent increase in Canadian imports from the U.S., while our exports to the States advanced only seven per cent, from the first quarter of 1963.

The real explanation would seem to be that consumer demand in Canada is simply so strong that it is pulling in imported goods in much greater volume than before.

And this, despite the governmental stated objective of trying to whittle the over-all payments deficit by concentrating on winning a bigger share of the American market for both manufactured goods and industrial raw materials.

As it turned out in the first quarter, Canadas overseas surplus in all current account transactions—that is, trade in commodities, tourism abd services — doubled to $202,000,000 between the first quarters of last year and this year.

That helped offset the deficit with the U.S.

Meanwhile, the $200,000,000 in capital flowing into Canada in the first quarter fell $42,000,000 short of financing the current-account deficit. So there was a Cecline of that amount in Canada's combined exchange reserves and her credits in the international Monetary Fund.

The reserves, however, still are relatively high. Canada's official holdings of gold and U.S. dollars at the end of June totalled $2,533,900,000.

Detailed forecasts are few.

One long - range prediction has been made by economist Dr. O. J. Firestone, vice-dean of social science at the University of Ottawa, and a former senior economic adviser in the trade department.

Dr. Firestone has looked ahead to a business upturn not in 1965 with "the bottom of the recession probably being reached in 1966."

Thereafter, he added, there may be an economic expansion "greater than anything we have seen since the end of the Second World War."

A more definitive account of medium- and long-range economic prospects, it should be available later this year from the Economic Council of Canada.

It has attached top priority to such a report as its first major task. Canadians are sure to get a general idea of where the economy should be going, from the long - term advice on what the authorities should do to make sure it gets there.

Britain Declines to Oust Exclusive Brethren Leader

LONDON (AP) — Big Jim Taylor started a revival campaign Friday amid charges that his austere religion is driving some British families to misery.

Taylor, 63 - year - old self-styled apostle of the Lord, leads a sect known as the Exclusive Brethren which believes the second coming of Christ is near.

Believers are under orders to shun any available association with non-members Critics charge this has split up families and sometimes led to divorce. Members must not eat or sleep with persons outside the sect even if they are married to each other.

Graham Cooke, a Conservative member of Parliament, tried to get Taylor barred from Britain, charging that 60 cases of suffering have been caused by the sect's "social ostracism" rule.

Cooke said homes have been broken, children separated from their parents and villages divided. Home Secretary Henry Brooke rejected Cooke's request, saying the sect does nothing illegal and he would not discriminate against any religious belief.

India Prepares to Tackle Serious Shortage of Food As Riots, Looting Break Out

By V. M. NAIR

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—The government of India is taking emergency steps to tackle the worst food crisis in a decade, as spiralling prices and vanishing supplies ignite the first flashes of public violence.

Riots and looting of grain warehouses have already occurred in some areas. An acute scarcity of food at normal prices has been reported from at least six Indian states, with pockets of scarcity in many others.

The government has rushed stocks to these hard-hit areas but the crisis continues in many districts.

The next two months are considered critical. These are generally "lean months" before the next harvest.

Community Development Minister S. K. Dey has warned the government of the possibility of serious food riots if the crisis is not tackled quickly and effectively.

When food started vanishing from markets two months ago, little was done to check the trend.

To meet the crisis of the next few months, the U.S. has agreed to rush emergency shipments of a further 4,000,000 tons of wheat between now and February.

Other imports of food grains are being stepped up.

Indian production has stagnated in the last three years at about 80,000,000 tons. At the same time, the country's population has increased by 30,000,000 to 465,000,000.

Suggests Seats in Commons Be Set Aside for Indians

OTTAWA (CP) — Gordon Aiken, Conservative MP for Parry Sound-Muskoka, suggested in the Commons Friday that one or more seats in the Commons be set aside for Indian MPs who would be elected by Indian bands scattered across Canada.

He said MPs have discussed the affairs of the Indian people for too long in their absence.

"I suggest that if they had a representative in the House it would be meaningful and we would be doing something to improve the situation of the Indian people.

The Indian Act set Indians apart from other Canadians and provided a different set of rules governing them.

Parliament needed the views of Indians themselves and sought its guidance in amending legislation that restricts the freedom of Indians.

"Their great effort is to be able to do what other ethnic groups in Canada can now do, become a part of the Canadian nation. . . But before they can do that there must be amendments to the Indian Act or possibly repeal of the Indian Act."

Mr. Aiken spoke as debate continued on an interim supply bill giving the government spending authority for the next two months.

The white man had scattered the Indian across the country in small bands, but now the Indian had a franchise, were meeting more often as national or national level and were a much people, more politically-conscious than ever before.

Mr. Aiken called on the government to make clear it has no intention of abolishing or diminishing any reservation.

Indian leaders were worried about a 1924 statute that gives the citizenship minister the right to dissolve a reservation if he feels it is in the interests of the bands.

PC Members Question Move To Admit Algerian Refugees

Says Politicians Sold Like Soap

OTTAWA (CP) — Three Conservative MPs—two from Ontario and one from Quebec —urged the government Friday to reconsider its agreement to admit French refugees from North Africa as immigrants.

Alfred D. Hales, (PC-Wellington South) said in the Commons the 900,000 refugees from Algeria, Tunisia and Morocco will flee to France when the French colonies gained their independence have a questionable background.

The government should "consider seriously whether they should be able to emigrate to Canada." Many of them had been unable to adapt themselves to farming in France.

Mr. Hales was joined by Harold Danforth (PC-Kent) and Theogene Ricard (PC-St. Hyacinthe) in questioning an agreement between Canada and France establishing the terms under which the refugees could enter as landed immigrants.

Robert Bednarek, parliamentary secretary to Immigration Minister Tremblay, said the French refugees would come to Canada on the same immigration terms that apply to any other immigrants concerning character, responsibility and skills.

Bishop Ousted From Rhodesia

SALISBURY (Reuters) — About 400 black Methodist women, gathered at Salisbury Friday to sing a hymn of farewell to American Methodist Church Bishop Ralph Dodge and Mrs. Dodge in Southern Rhodesia.

Bishop Dodge, of Iowa, flew to Lusaka, Northern Rhodesia, leaving behind his wife and one daughter. But he hoped to return here soon for the wedding of his daughter's wedding to Scotsman John Macintyre Stewart.

Wednesday night Interior Minister William Harper refused to tell the Southern Rhodesian Parliament why Bishop Dodge and another member of his church, Rev. Robert Hughes of Birmingham, Ala., were being deported. Both are whites.

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Sportswise, this is the weekend that is.

Civic Holiday will mark the greatest influx of sportsmen here since Captain John Myer's Indians challenged Wellington's "Smoke" Reynolds' tribes to a tomahawk tournament.

"Smoke's" copperheads were the Beatles of the era but when Myer's hatchet-men introduced their style of hairdo they went home resembling a reunion of the Yul-Brynner clan.

Nearly 600 sportsmen and sportswomen are, or will be, in the city for Civic Holiday special events.

The greatest number of golfers in the history of the Bay of Quinte Country club will tread the grooves, and fairways of the club course in a series of four tournament events. One is already under way.....

On the link greens of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club over 160 bowlers will vie for four gold trophies, hosted by the famous Corbin Gold Cup on Monday.

Golf buffs will centre their attention on the Country Club where an overflow crowd of participating golfers and spectators is expected to enjoy play and the facilities of the club.

This afternoon, in fact it is under way right now, at the CNRA Park, the Belleville softball squirts, peewees and baniams are hosting their counterparts from Cobourg in a tri-game exhibition series.

Carrying the banners of Belleville sport to the outside places are the junior baseball squad and Doug Storey's hydroplane racing buckaroos.

The junior baseballers are spending the weekend in St. Catharines, where they are taking part in the Ontario Junior "A" tournament.

Over at Sandy Cove, off Waupoos, the Quinte Hydroplaners are holding a joint regatta with the Picton Club on Sunday afternoon, starting at noon.

Back to the city, it seems the holiday calendar has something for everybody. Unless the long weekend bug hits a lot of customers something like 600 racing buffs will raise a decoy or two and take in the eighth race harness meet of the Quinte Driving and Riding Club at the Fair Grounds Raceway tonight.

But each to his own.

Special sports events won't have much allure to the regulars, and who can blame them after the even heat of the past week, who use the long holidays to get away from it all, like the last of city geography and high-tail it for that cottage or to camp in the cool atmosphere of northern lake and river.

On a lazy river or a breeze-rippled lake they can load and relax and let the fish bite when they feel like it. Weather permitting they're in their glory right here.

And if Ole Sol is brazen in holiday appearance, the beaches, campsites and parks of the district will be the meccas for thousands.

The faraway places beckon to the travel-hungry seeking new sights and new faces. The highways will be black-ribboned under motor traffic.

Not a few, if the holiday records stage a repeat performance, will leave home gay, carefree, laughing. What they will not know is that they have a one-way ticket to their holiday destination. They will cope home all right. But they won't know it.

Care, caution and common sense can prevent a lot of accidents and fatalities. Use the three "C's" and come home from the holiday rested and peaceful, not resting in pieces.

Score Was 22-13

Eskimos Whip Argonauts

EDMONTON (CP) — A surprisingly smooth Edmonton Eskimo team upset Toronto Argonauts 22-13 Friday in the final Canadian Football League pre-season exhibition.

The win before 12,040 fans was the first in three starts for Eskimos II was the first loss for Argonauts in four exhibitions.

The western club displayed strong running and passing to go ahead 22-0 at one point in the third quarter.

Halfbacks Butch Pressley and Leroy Whittle and fullback Ron Quillon scored touchdowns for the winners. Bill Mitchell converted all three and added a single when a 47-yard field goal attempt went wide.

Halfback Sherman Lewis and end Leo Sampson caught touchdown passes and Jim Christopherson converted one to account for Toronto's scoring.

Both clubs, which finished last in their respective conferences last year, made good use of reserves in the final test before a weekend deadline when CFL clubs must reduce their rosters to 33 men, including 15 imports.

Eskimos picked up 20 first downs on 361 yards rushing and 138 passing. The quarterbacking trio hit on 13 of 30 pass attempts. One Wright pass was intercepted.

Toronto had 18 first downs, most of them in the late stages, and all but three in the second half. They gained 139 yards along the ground and 127 through the air as Jackie Parker, Karl Sweetlng and Stephens clicked on eight of 18 pass attempts and fullback Dick Shatto hit on both passes he threw, one to Lewis for Argos first touchdown.

MONTREAL (CP) — Arnold Palmer has retrieved the putting ability he misplaced and big Bill Collins of Fairfield, N.Y., has found a putting touch he never owned.

Palmer, lost in the shuffle with an opening-round par 71, surged back to the forefront Friday with a four-under 67 to share the second-round lead at 138 with Collins in the $50,000 Canadian Open golf championship.

"That was my best putting round in the last year," Palmer said after tearing through the 7,000-yard Pinegrove course in 29 putts.

"I never could make those long ones," Collins said, moments after he'd dropped putts from long and distances to give him three-under 66 to go with his initial 72.

"I changed putters after yesterday," Palmer explained. "I went back to the putter I'd discarded after the U.S. Open last June. It gave me more confidence. I felt better putting the ball."

TIES RECORD

One stroke behind the co-leaders was Ken Bazzel of Amarillo, Tex., and Billy Casper of Corona, Calif., who also credited putting for their success. Casper, who tied the course record with a 66, had spent two hours practising on the putting green after shooting a first-round 73.

"It's the first putting practice I've had in a long time," he said. "And I put some lead tape on my putter to make it heavier. You don't have to work the club as hard that way."

Four pros were at 141, three strokes behind Palmer and Collins and one under par. They were Bob Verwey and Gary Player, two South Africans, Gibby Gilbert, who led the first round, and Ray Floyd of St. Andrews, Ill.

Bob Shave Jr. of Willoughby, Ohio, is second spot on the first day with a 68, also fired a 74 and found himself locked with Jack Nicklaus at par 142 after 36 holes.

Canadian hopefuls were far off the pace. Nine strokes behind with 147 totals were Moe Norman, George Knudson, Al Balding and Stan Leonard.

Women's Golf

Ontario Captures Both Titles

CALGARY (CP) — Ontario captured two Canadian women's golf titles and came within 18 holes of clinching two more Friday in winds that gusted to 40 miles an hour and sent scores rocketing.

Led by Gail Harvey's 73 for a two-round total of 144, Ontario captured the 36-hole Canadian women's interprovincial team title by an astounding 31 shots over second-place British Columbia.

Miss Harvey, of Toronto, earned a five-shot margin over her nearest rival, Betty Slaughter Cole of Toronto, in the women's close competition. Mrs. Cole had a 78 Friday for a two-round total of 149. Another five shots ahead of the 154s posted by Mary Gay of Kitchener, Ont., and Mrs. Slaughter, Vancouver. Fifth with 155 was Sandra Post of Milton, Ont., who led the junior individual test by five strokes.

DEPENDING CHAMP NEXT

Third in the junior competition were Jocelyn Bourassa of Trois-Rivieres, Que., and Pam Miller of Victoria, B.C., with 163.

Miss Halleur had 80 Friday with Mrs. Slaughter, but high wind. She was forced to don dart glasses at times to prevent sand and blowing dust under face contact lenses.

Polish Rider Leads Bike Race

MONTREAL (CP) — Twenty-two seconds may not seem like much but that's all that separates Poland's Antoni Palka from his closest competitor among a field of 90 men in the 11th annual Tour du St. Laurent bicycle race.

Palka, 28, a factory technician who has been racing for only six years, leads the gruelling bicycle marathon after seven laps with a total time of 30 hours 20 minutes and 35 seconds.

The racers now have covered 182 miles of the 1,500-mile race which moves into Montreal and suburbs today for the eighth and ninth laps. The race winds up Aug. 9 in Quebec City.

Friday's lap, a 104-mile windup journey between St. Hyacinthe and St. Johns, didn't change the positions of the first eight individual racers.

6 Paddlers Qualify

By PETER SCHNOBB

OTTAWA (CP)—Five Quebec paddlers and one from Ontario won berths in the Canadian Olympic team Friday at the national Olympic trials at Mooney's Bay.

Making up the six-member Canadian team at the games in Tokyo this October will be Paul Stahl, Fred Heese, Andor Elbert and Mike Brown, all of the Carterville, Que., club, Jim Simonyik of the Lachine, Que., club, and Gabor Joo of the Toronto Boating and Sailing Club.

Carterville, considered one of the strongest teams in senior competition in many years, is heavily favored to retain team honors in the Canadian championships. The race to be decided today on the same course, with a jump of four feet 11 inches in the high jump.

C. K. Yang of Nationalist China topped the field to consistently ered the top athlete in the world today by grabbing a huge lead after the first five events of the men's decathlon trials. The 21-year-old Formosan, who entered the competition with designs on cracking his world decathlon record of 9,121 points, compiled a healthy total of 4,485 points.

Bill Gairdner, 23, of Toronto, current Canadian decathlon champion, was second place with 3,722. Gerry Moro of Trail, B.C., was third with 3,280. Jim Fraser, 21, of Toronto was fourth 2,868 and Bill Abba of Kingston with 2,838 rounded out the men's standings.

Yang was first in four of the five events completed. He won the 100 metres with a time of 10.8 seconds, took the broad jump with a leap of 21 feet 11 inches, topped the 16-pound shot event with a leap of six feet two inches and won the 400 metres in 48.7 seconds.

HAS THREE FOURTHS

Abba placed fourth in three events, second in one and fifth in another.

In the men's 100 metres, he had a time of 11.4 for 768 points and cleared 16 feet five inches for 436 points in broad jump. In the shot put, Abbie tossed 12 feet six inches for 415 points. He was fifth in the 400 metres with 50.9 seconds for 485 points.

His second-place finish was in the high jump, where he leaped 5 feet 10 inches for 760 points.

Ingrid Gotch of Oakville was third in the women's discus, won by Nancy McCredie of Toronto with a distance of 109 feet 3½ inches, a Canadian record which bettered her own mark of 104.2.

Bill Boyle of New York furnished time of 47 seconds flat in the invitation 400-metre dash to defeat Theron Lewis of Philadelphia. Bill Crothers and Don McCarten, both of Toronto, tied at 47.6.

Dave Patterson of Toronto won the men's pole vault event in 4:25.7. Garry Mosher of St. Catharines was runner - up in 4:37.6.

Yang, Gerace Top Olympics Trials Packs

By JERRY GLADMAN

TORONTO (CP) — Dianne Gerace, 20, of Trail, B.C., had little interest in pentathlon competition until this year, but now she finds herself in the role of a Canadian hopeful for a gold medal in the 1964 Olympic pentathlon trials by taking a lead over high-favored Heather Armstrong of Toronto.

Miss Gerace, a pretty, five-foot-six receptionist compiled 3,960 points in the first three events of the two-day program that ends the play away from the 21-year-old Miss Armstrong. The latter, current Canadian champion in the 80-metres hurdles, ended the day in second place with 3,746 points.

Dianne, who limited her track activity to the high jump until the spring, used her specialty to boost the 5-foot-5 tall girl to feet eight inches, one inch off her world indoor record set at Connecticut in March.

LOSES LEAD

Jenny, who had the lead after the first two events—10.2 seconds to Dianne's 11-1 in the 80-metre hurdles and a toss of 39 feet 8¼ inches to Dianne's 32-6 in the shot put—dropped back

Not even Barney Schultz could have saved Jacksonville Suns this time.

The International League leaders lost their ace reliever Thursday when St. Louis Cardinals recalled him in exchange for veteran Gleni Hobbie. But Schultz's 5-4 record and 0.98 earned - run average would have been little use to the Suns Thursday night unless he had driven in his own runs.

As matters stood, the second-place Syracuse Chiefs blanked Jacksonville 3 - 0 and 2 - 0 and narrowed the Suns' margin to a single game. Idle Rochester and the Chiefs were the stampeding Buffalo Bisons, who pounded Richmond Virginians 10-1 and 7-3 to run their winning streak to 10 games.

Columbus' Jets downed Toronto Maple Leafs 6 - 4 and Rochester Red Wings edged Atlanta Crackers 1-0 in single games.

Pitching—Frank Lary, Mets, held Houston to two-hits — one an infield single—as New York blanked the Colts 3-0 on their way to a doubleheader sweep.

REDUCED TO 36

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ottawa Rough Rider roster was pared to 36 players Friday night with the release of four imports and four Canadians from the Eastern Conference football club. Canadians released were halves Peter Martin and Bob Rusbridge, centre Don Platt, and end Ed Rheinlander.

Aussies Top Net Field

MONTREAL (CP) — Australia's top-ranked amateur stars will lead a talent-heavy field of 200 in the Canadian Open tennis championships starting Tuesday.

They are Roy Emerson, top-seeded Wimbledon title-holder, Fred Stolle, Tony Roche, John Newcombe and Owen Davidson. The five Aussies meet Mexico's top-seeded in Mexico City in the North American zone final of Davis Cup play, and four are due to arrive in Montreal on Tuesday.

Emerson, who led the Australians to their Davis Cup sweep over Canada earlier this month, is the tournament favorite.

The Canadian Open field is so strong this year that Whitney Reed, defending men's singles champion, is seeded seventh behind the Australians and Fon Hoisington of Dallas, Tex. Reed is the classy Alameda, Calif., star who made a big bit at the Canadian Open last year.

Qualifying rounds will be held today and Sunday to pare the field to a workable 64 men and 32 women.

Birds' Baby Bunker 3-Hits Athletics

Killebrew Kills Yanks

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

You couldn't blame Hank Bauer if he had Wally Bunker pitch both ends of Baltimore Orioles' next doubleheader.

The 19-year-old wonder came through for the 12th time Friday night, throttling Kansas City Athletics 6-1 on a three-hitter in the first game of a twin bill.

The victory, coupled with Harmon Killebrew's two - run sudden-death homer that jolted New York Yankees 4-3 at Minnesota, gave Baltimore a clear shot at the American League lead. And, when young Dave McNally took a 9-0 bulge into the eighth inning of the nightcap, Bauer must have been preparing one of those "don't count out the Yanks yet" speeches.

But McNally never got out of the eighth and the Orioles never got into the top spot. The Athletics pushed six runs across in the inning, chasing McNally, bombing bullpen ace Stu Miller and finishing up against Steve Berber and finally won 7-6 on Ed Charles' leadoff homer off Berber in the ninth.

When it was over, the Orioles were four percentage points out of first place and Bauer was looking for another Bunker.

LEFTIES IN TROUBLE

Berber, a 20 - game winner in 1963 who has now dropped eight of 13 decisions, wasn't the only lefthander victimized by a ninth-inning homer. Al Downing of the Yankees had a six-game winning string broken who Killebrew drove a two-out pitch into the left field bleachers at Minnesota.

Juan Pizarro, the league's premier southpaw, had better luck. The Chicago White Sox ace blanked Washington Senators 5-0 on four hits, struck out 14 and ran his season mark to 14-5. Cleveland Indians took a doubleheader from Detroit Tigers 12-3 and 4-2 and Boston Red Sox nipped Los Angeles Angels 4-3.

Bunker won his sixth straight for the Orioles as he checked Kansas City on one hit until the seventh, when Rocky Colavito's 25th homer ended the shutout bid. Brooks Robinson homered for Baltimore.

McNally was working on a six-hitter in the second game when the Athletics unloaded. Charles led off the eighth with a double and, one out later, Ken Harrelson reached first on an error. Jim Gentile walked, filling the bases, and Doc Edwards scored Charles with a single. Exit McNally.

Berlo Campaneris g r e e t e d Miller with a two-run double and Nelson Mathews drove in two more, tying the score, with a single. Mathews raced all the way to third on Miller's wild pickoff attempt a n d scored when Wayne Causey first up against Barber, lifted a sacrifice fly to left.

The Orioles tied it in the ninth on Dick Brown's second homer of the game but Charles broke it up in the bottom of the ninth.

Run - scoring hits by Joe Pepitone and Roger Maris and a throwing error by outfielder Tony Oliva gave the Yankees three runs off Camilo Pascual in the fourth. In the eighth, Bob Allison hit a solo homer for the Twins. Then, after a single by Rich Rollins in the ninth, Killebrew crashed his 36th homer.

Pizarro, the AL's top winner, fanned the side in three innings and flirted briefly with the major league strikeout record of 18. He had 13 through seven innings but could get only one of the last six outs via strikes.

Gary Bell replaced Indians starter Jack Kralick in the third inning of the first game and set down 18 Tigers in order to gain his sixth victory. The Indians collected 10 hits, including homers by Leon Wagner and Bob Chance.

Pedro Ramos survived home runs by Norm Cash and Gates Brown in the nightcap for his fifth victory. The Indians' runs crossed on two infield outs, a wild pitch by loser Joe Sparma and Chance's sacrifice fly.

Dick Radatz hurled two shutdown innings for the Red Sox, preserving Bill Monbouquette's seventh victory, and Ed Bressoud drove in three Boston runs with a two-run double and a ground out.

Commit Six For Second Time

Pirates Take Over National 'Bobble' Lead

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Error, error on the ball, who commits the most of all?

Pittsburgh Pirates moved into the lead Friday night, making six errors for the second time this season in an 8-6 loss to San Francisco Giants.

The sloppy performance gave the Pirates 115 bobbles for the season and the major league lead, moving them one ahead of New York Mets.

The performance also cost the Pirates a chance to move closer to the second-place Giants. Two and one-half games separated the teams before the contest. After it was over, though, the Pirates had dropped from third to fourth place, 3½ behind San Francisco.

Bill Mazeroski, among baseball's best second basemen, committed three errors. Third baseman Bob Bailey came next with two while catcher Jim Pagliaroni was the other culprit.

THROWS WILDLY

Bailey started the debacle in the third inning, throwing away Hal Lanier's ground ball. Lanier later scored as Pagliaroni tossed widely, trying to get the Giant rookie at third.

Lanier again benefitted from Bailey's generosity, this time with two out in the fifth. He reached second on Bailey's wild throw and scored on one of Willie Mays' three singles Mazeroski flipped the ball away twice in the eventh inning, once on a throw to home plate.

The Pirates saved perhaps the most damaging error for the last. It belonged to Mazeroski and it came on a potential double play grounder in the ninth inning. The Giants had scored one run and had the bases loaded with one out.

Jose Pagan g r o u n d e d to Bailey, who threw to Mazeroski for a force play at second. Mays scored from third while this was happening, but the run wouldn't have counted had Mazeroski's throw to first not gone astray. Matty Alou ato came home on the play, giving the Giants an 8-7 lead.

RALLIED LATE

In other NL games, Philadelphia Phillies whipped Los Angeles Dodgers 6-1, Cincinnati Reds edged St. Louis Cardinals 7-6, Milwaukee Braves trampled Chicago Cubs 12-3 and the Mets swept Houston Colts 3-0 and 6-2.

Billy O'Dell preserved the Giants' victory, s t r i k i n g out Don Clendenon for the final out in the Pirates' ninth. Jerry Lynch, who had doubled across two runs, was on second at the time.

Johnny Callison got the Phillies off to a 2-0 lead with a home run in the first inning. The league leaders, however, needed some clutch relief pitching by Jack Baldschun in the eighth. Baldschun relieved starter Chris Short with one out and the bases loaded. He struck out Frank Howard and got Ron Fairly on a grounder. The Phillies added three runs in the eighth, two on Clay Dalrymple's single.

ERRORS HELP

The Reds erupted for five unearned runs in the second with the aid of errors by Julian Javier and Bill White but needed Vada Pinson's two-run single in the fifth for their victory. The Cardinals kept coming back, scoring their final run in the ninth on White's single.

The Braves got a homer and a triple each from Denis Menke and Joe Torre and a three-run homer from Hank Aaron in their rout of the Cubs. Bob Sadowski held the Cubs to six hits.

Frank Lary, a 33-year - old castoff from the A m e r i c a n League, pitched a two-hitter for the Mets in the first game of their doubleheader. The only hits off him were Bob Lillis' infield single with two out in the sixth and Nellie Fox' ninth-inning single.

Jack Fisher also went the distance against the Colts in the nightcap, scattering seven hits. Ed Kranepool slammed a two-run homer in the Mets' four-run fourth.

THE Arnold Palmer METHOD
Four-Time Winner of the Masters
A TIME TO PLAY SAFE
Imagine yourself playing "safe" in a golf tournament. Too often, playing safe when you are ahead means you've given him a chance. Pretty soon, you are thinking negatively and then you lose your head.
However, there is one occasion in match play when every golfer should play it safe. That situation occurs when your opponent's shot filled mind of bunkers.
When this occurs, he has — in effect — handed you two free shots. Don't waste them.
If your opponent's drive has gone out of bounds, you should set off with the club you can be sure will keep you in the fairway, even if it may be as iron (see illustration).
It may not seem sporting to resort to these tactics, but there is really nothing questionable about doing so. It's just smart strategy.
IF YOUR OPPONENT'S BALL IS OUT OF BOUNDS FROM THE TEE, PLAY IT SAFE AND USE AN IRON.
BRAND NEW! Arnold Palmer's "HOW TO IMPROVE YOUR PUTTING"! A copy of this hint-packed booklet is yours for 20c and a stamped, self-addressed envelope sent to Arnold Palmer, c/o this newspaper.

Dick Tiger Knocks Out Gonzales

The broad - shouldered, powerful native of Nigeria, making his first start since he lost the title to Joey Giardello last December, gave no evidence of rustiness as he outpunched his opponent in all but the first round.

QUESTION: On a trip to Vermont and New Hampshire, I am planning to take the ferry across Lake Champlain to Burlington, Vt., from Port Kent, N.Y. Can you supply information on fares and how often the ferries run, and also how long the trip takes? — J. H., Belleville.

ANSWER: The ferries leave Port Kent approximately every 50 minutes from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. The crossing time is 80 minutes. Fares are: (One way) Car and driver-$3.50, extra adult passenger-85 cents, children 5 to 12 years old - 40 cents, maximum fare - $6.95. (Round trip) car and driver - $4.50, adult passengers - $1.25, children 60 cents, maximum fare $8.50.

QUESTION: Although I have lived for a number of years in Prince Edward County my vacation days have been usually far afield. This year, we plan to stay close to home and would like to explore the county. Can you suggest a few of the good picnic spots? — D. B., Carrying Place

ANSWER: Prince Edward County provides any number of good spots within easy driving range. Besides the Sand Banks and the Outlet, the Lake on the Mountain at Glenora, we would suggest a drive down through Milford and South Bay and out to Point Traverse and Prince Edward Point, the southwestern tip of the county. There there is Salmon Point, near the Outlet, and Huycvk's Pt. west of Wellington. A good map of the County for this purpose can be obtained from the local Chamber of Commerce office.

QUESTION: We want to spend few days driving around the Georgian Bay Prince Peninsula area, and have two children, aged eight and ten, who couldn't care less about riding around in a car. A friend of ours tells us that there is a motel somewhere in that district that provides a day camp for youngsters of this kind. Can you give me any information about this? — L. F., Belleville

ANSWER: Possibly the place your friend is thinking of is the Bay Motor Hotel at Owen Sound which operates a Park-a-Child service at its T-Bar Camp, about 9 miles out of town. Children left in the care of the hotel will be treated in the camp where they can participate in all camp activities. This service is available for children from two to 14 years of age. Rates are $8 a day. For further particulars, we would suggest writing to the Bay Motor Hotel, Owen Sound, Ont.

QUESTION: I am going to Jamaica for a month's stay, and will be doing some driving while there. Will I need to have an International Driving Permit to do this? — B. D., Trenton

ANSWER: Canadian visitors to Jamaica may use their valid Canadian provincial driving licences for a period of 12 months, provided they are able to read and write English, and are 17 years of age. The International Driving Permit is valid in Jamaica - $6.95. (Round trip) car and driver - $4.50, adult passengers - $1.25, children 60 cents, maximum fare $8.50.

The Trots

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Wallaceflat, 4 smooth pacing three-year-old gelding, made his racing debut here Friday night by capturing the sixth race at the Western Fair Raceway.

He was clocked over the mile at 2:12 4-5. Apparently his pacing ability wasn't any great secret as he was backed down to 2-1 and returned $6.50.

Adios Direct accounted for the featured second race of the 10-race card, a pacing dash for $500. He paid $8.80 for the win, going the mile in 2:10 1-5.

TORONTO (CP) — Trotter Betsy Herbert headed a field of eight named Friday to contest the $5,975 Civic Holiday Trot at Greenwood Raceway Monday night.

Betsy Herbert, winner at $6,559 this season on four wins in 11 starts, including last Friday's $5,000 Invitation Trot at Greenwood, will be handled by Jack Herbert, son of owner Bill, in the noted racing clan from London, Ont.

Three top trotters are expected to provide the main opposition in the select field, Danny Song A., Peaches Atom, and Arden.

TORONTO (CP) — John Findley of Arnprior, Ont., drove a two-win performance at Greenwood Raceway Friday night by capturing the Hoofbins dash for three-year-old fillies with Angelic Wick.

It was the richest and richest this year for Angelic Wick, the daughter of Gene Abbe earned $2,660 to run his 1964 earnings to $9,008.

Findley opened his string with Uncle Bun in the third race and Wick was entered in a mile race with Penny Coelen. Both horses are from his Madawaska Farm stable.

Good Old Days Not So Good Says Writer

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Those good old days. Oh, those good old days!

Old-timers 60 years of age or more like to drop a tear in their sarsaparilla as they retell how much better and more romantic life was in their youth than it is now.

But was it really? The passage of time casts an illusory glow over the past that gives it a sentimental lustre. We have an idea that if the average old-timer was compelled now to live again for a month as he did in his childhood, he'd kick like a mule and scream like a banshee.

When old-timers reminisce, they don't dwell on such points as:

Probably not half the homes had indoor plumbing.

Most homes were heated by pot-bellied stoves or balky coal furnaces, the ashes from which had to be lugged out with monotonous regularity.

People worked a 50- to 60-hour week.

If you were wealthy enough to afford a car, you had to hand-crank it to get the motor started. The roads were so bad you were lucky if you went 100 miles without a flat tire; if you did get a flat tire, you had to fix it yourself.

Most women had lost their beauty by the time they were 40; most men were considered old at 45.

Pensions were unheard of in most industries. A big problem to the laboring man was to keep from winding up in the poorhouse — his constant fear.

WASH BY HAND

There were no electric washing machines. Wives had to douse the family's grimy duds in tubs, and launder them by hand or with a scrubbing brush on a ridged washboard.

Winters were long and cold; summers long and hot. Air-conditioning was achieved by fanning oneself.

The kitchen held no gleaming refrigerator. The pan under the icebox had to be emptied daily.

Wood-burning stoves were used in rural areas, and somebody in the household had to chop the kindling for them.

Women had to lace themselves into corsets so tightly they couldn't swallow a grape without feeling uncomfortable.

There were no drive-in theatres, no radio, no television, no hi-fi sets, no piped-in music, no canned dog food. Why, dad gum it, they didn't even have roll-on deodorants or electric tooth-brushes.

What do they mean "the good old days?" About all they had we don't have is a big foamy glass of nickel beer. And it's hardly worth turning the calendar back just for that.

NAB 106-YEAR-OLD

SAN JUAN (AP) — Celerino Mercado, a Puerto Rican who says he is 106 years old, was arrested Wednesday on a charge of attacking another aged man in the street with a machete. Bernardino Negron, 79, who told police he hurled rocks at Mercado to try to hold him off, suffered two minor cuts.

Ann Landers

Potent Poem Can Make Big Change in Teen's Outlook

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I was one of those teen-agers who thought I had to have the approval of "the crowd" in everything I said and did. I thought it was smart to be just like everyone else. Then I read a poem in the school paper. I don't even know who wrote it, but it changed my life. Maybe if you print it it will change the lives of others:

ANN LANDERS

How absurd to be different from the crowd.
Not too loud. Not too proud.
Not too flashy. Not too brassy.
Keep it cool.
Not too mousey. Not a creep.
Not too long hair. Play it safe, Man.
Take it easy.
Not too smart, keep it breezy.
Don't take the rap. Why be a sap?
Who wants to lead. And maybe bleed?
Don't stick your neck out, Silly Boy.
Keep still and safe and miss the joy of Knowing who you are.
Douse the flame.
Let everyone be the same.
Without a name.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I went with this extraordinarily beautiful girl for five months. She hypnotized me with her violet blue eyes and millions of black eyelashes.

I read her poems by Rage and Spender. She was a wonderful listener. I bought her albums of Beethoven and Brahms. Her quiet thoughtfulness as she drank in the beauty of the music was exquisite to behold. One day when I attempted to engage her in a serious conversation it became apparent that her silence was born of stupidity and ignorance. The girl is a fraud and she had me completely fooled.

Will you warn others, please, and perhaps save them about $500 in books, records, and flowers. — RENOIR.

• • •

DEAR REN — Why is the girl a fraud? Did she tell you she was president of Radcliffe?

Silence, whether born of stupidity or wisdom, sounds the same. The girl did not deceive you. You deceived yourself, so stop beefing.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Will you please answer a simple question. Why do people send out wedding invitations to friends who live thousands of miles away when they know good and well they cannot possibly attend? To me, this is glorified begging. The same goes for birth announcements.

When my baby was born I did not mail out those precious little cards saying "Well, I'm here. I weigh 7 pounds, 11 ounces." I figured some friends would send the baby a gift, which was fine, but I did not want to put anyone on the spot.

Please print this letter and wise people up. Thank you. — ALASKA.

• • •

DEAR ALASKA' — Believe it or not, but some people Like wedding invitations and birth announcements. I am not among them, however, and I have said so, repeatedly.

I figure that the people who are interested Know that a hitching or a birth took place because they are in touch by phone or letter. The others couldn't care less, so why bother them?

• • •

If excessive drinking is wrecking your health or destroying someone you love, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Help for the A' holic," enclosing with your request 25 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Police Alert At Rochester

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Hundreds of helmeted city and state police patrolled Rochester's Negro sections Friday night, grimly determined to prevent any renewal of last weekend's mob rioting and looting.

The police were assisted by sheriff's deputies. National guard troops were prepared to add their force if needed.

The guardsmen have spent the last week sharpening anti-riot techniques in the use of bayonets, tear gas and rifle butts. They are camped in several public parks and armories.

Chess Play Opens

Bikinis Making Gals Wear Themselves Out

By HAL BOYLE

In Lapland you don't give newlyweds money or silverware. . . . The traditional gift there is reindeer.

Credit on wheels: In Greece bankmobiles, mounted on trucks tour isolated areas too small to support banks of their own.

Odd Legislation: In Norfolk, Va., it once was against the law for a woman to attend a public dance without wearing a corset.

Waterpower: With its massive tail the whale can strike the mightiest blow of any animal on earth or in the seas. . . . Its force is sufficient to knock over a small herd of elephants.

Quotable notables: T"The truth is that normal men will always be what women want them to be."—Mary Roberts Rinehart.

Executive signs: On the desk of Irwin H. Kramer, Hotel Edison owner: "If at first you don't succeed, you're running about average."

Folklore: You can expect company soon if you find tea leaves floating in your cup. . . . When flies bite, it's a sign of rain. . . . To cure the rheumatism, put a little dry mustard in your shoe. . . . Sleep in a bean field (or in full moonlight) and you'll go mad.

Worth remembering: "If bikinis become any more abbreviated, the gals will be wearing themselves out."—Arnold Glasow.

Quickies: A young eagle weighs about a pound more than its mother before it leaves its nest. . . . A worn dollar bill makes a good lifting weight for exercise. . . . A survey found that the only things men can taste better than a Republican are cigar and sour grapes. . . . You swallow some 3,000 times a day.

Your Car

Automatic Transmission Driving Tips

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

If you now own or intend buying an automatic transmission model, spare yourself unnecessary operating and repair costs by using a little good judgment.

Don't jam the gas pedal to the floor trying for the kickdown start which tends to leave the rear wheels behind. On the other hand, don't get too squeamish about it. You can waste gas by babying acceleration, too. Start moderately, gradually feeding so that you reach food-speeds quickly. Watch your shifts. Moving to Park position while the car is in motion can cause serious damage. Likewise, never shift a moving car from Reverse to Drive (or Low) or vice versa.

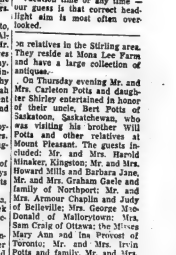
Avoid another headache possibility by learning the exact procedure for starting your car. It's not the same for all. Have transmission fluid level checked every 1,000 miles at least, and equally important, keep a watch for signs of leakage.

B. D. asks: "What is the difference between a diesel and a gasoline engine which allows one to use only while the other must burn gasoline?"

Diesels operate under a much higher compression.

From W. L.: "Isn't it a fact that a hot engine burns less gas than a cold one because the choke is open and the engine isn't feeding as much liquid fuel?"

That's one reason. In addition — engine heat aids vaporization and more efficient distribution of fuel, and all moving parts work easier.



C. B. writes: "With no garage, I park our station wagon under two trees in front of our house, and it's constantly spotted with a sticky substance from the leaves. It washes off all right but I'm concerned that this might eventually hurt the finish."

You might end the entire problem by having the trees sprayed. This dripping is probably caused by plant lice on the leaves.

I. P. asks: "Would you say tires or brakes are the most important safety factors when auto vacation trips are planned?"

Vacation time or any time — our guess is that correct headlight aim is most often overlooked.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19)—Surprise due. May involve romantic interests. Day appears pleasure-filled. But there are basic essentials which should not be overlooked. Get details out of way early — you'll be busy tonight!

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18)—What you "feel" is of utmost importance. Time to trust your emotions. You can now perceive truth. Be cautious—what people say—and what they really think — may be opposite.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - Mar. 20)—Stop procrastinating! Your ideas are valid. Your job is to carry through. Get down to business! Have confidence in your ability. Day can be wonderful—but you must make it so.

If Today is Your Birthday—you are introspective, highly creative—could make fine writer, psychologist, teacher.

General Tendencies — Cycle high for Gemini, Cancer, Leo. Special word to Aquarius: Don't argue. Maintain beliefs, but don't try to force them on others.

For August 3

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): If you attempt too much at once you might falter. Applies especially to travel and to solving of problems. Also, you are due for favorable changes, but again — don't go too fast!

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Surprises featured in connection with member of opposite sex. Cycle is generally pleasant in that you gain financially. But there are conditions in your home which require careful attention.

Gemini (May 21 to June 20): Cycle high. But some of your endeavors require greater study. Look for cutbacks. Don't tie yourself down to outmoded method. Heed advice offered by Aquarius individual.

Cancer (June 21 to July 22): Delve deep. Forego surface indications. Find out the reasons why. Includes events — and the "why" of actions by friends. You can get what you want today . . . but you have to go after it!

Leo (July 23 to Aug. 22): Best to heed your own counsel. People who act as financial advisers . . . could confuse you. Applies especially where security is concerned. Finish projects. Avoid one who constantly bickers.

Virgo (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22): Flurry of activity surrounds you. You are pressed into making decisions. Don't waver . . . with authority. The more firm you are . . . the better for all concerned. Exude confidence.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You know, inwardly, that "far-fetched" plan is not impractical. Why tempt fate? Heed "inner voice." Don't ask for trouble. If you do . . . you could receive plenty of it.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): If you can realize that savings, budget, resolutions are for a reason . . . all is well. No time to throw caution to winds. Maintain attitude based on good sense.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): People in authority may propose "strange" policies. Best for you to maintain diplomatic posture. Attend to your own job. Check details. Refuse to take sides in foolish dispute.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19): Recent pressures relieved involving family and finances. Favorable day for changes . . . and having frank discussion with member of opposite sex. Express yourself.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18): If you are not cautious . . . too much money could be spent on "pleasure." And you'd have no fun doing it! Do more checking than deciding. Be conservative with speculation.

Pisces (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20): Word for "feel" is probably accurate. But today you have a tendency to rationalize. You may be seeing situations as you wish it could be. Try being more practical.

If today is your birthday . . . you are versatile . . . tend to scatter your forces. You are ambitious . . . but must learn to stick to one thing at a time.

For August 4

Aries (March 21 to April 19): Lunar position emphasizes step from confusion to security. There is excitement indicated in connection with family member. Creative activity indicated. Time to decide . . . and be grateful.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20): Money matters not as serious as first indicated. You will be able to travel. Contact indicated. . . . with friends you have not seen for awhile. Day of discovery. And greater awareness of self.

Gemini (May 21 to June 20): Cycle high. But now circumstances take matters out of your hands. Know this - - - react accordingly. There is power or authority on your side. Relax. Your abilities have been proven.

Cancer (June 21 to July 22): Nothing hallway today. All the way - - or nothing. Extremes in unusual pressure indicated. You are the centre of attention. Stress creative approach. Your cycle is high: You will do the right thing.

Leo (July 23 to August 22): Move ahead. Don't look back. Realize mistakes do occur. But now the road to the future is clear . . . and is filled with opportunity. No time for concern. There is life and romance ahead.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Friends with various opinions dominate your time, attention. Remain neutral where disputes enter picture. Realize some people might use you as a pawn. Maintain dignity. Say no to gossip.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Good lunar aspect highlights journeys, correspondence. You can make new friends. Your sense of humor is impressive. Good to enlarge horizons. Later, there are obligations to be fulfilled.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Day...when you are alive, aware, alert. Be prepared to change your opinions - - discover new facets in loved ones. Your natural talents flow to forefront. You are appreciated. Stimulating.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Find out the why of things. Don't be satisfied merely that events occur. Find the connecting links. Investigate. Be a "detective." What you discover. . . .

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19): Avoid arguments. Stress harmony. Time to do more listening than talking. Put off final decisions until pressures are gone. Sense of humor will easily "see you through."

Aquarius (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18): Job that must be completed . . . should be. Don't permit financial situation to discourage you. You do have "enough." Know this - - proceed with confidence.

Pisces (Feb. 19 to March 20): Fine lunar aspect highlights creative endeavors. You appreciate your own qualities. Very important! You come out of emotional shell. Once more you are aware of opportunities.

If today is your birthday you achieve goal in slow but certain manner. You set your own pace. Many underestimate you. But, in long run, you do succeed.

The Golden Years

Personal History Can Provide Absorbing Retirement Project

By THOMAS COLLINS

Have you considered going off on a personal-history kick in your retirement?

An extroverted gentleman by the name of Harvey P. Daggert did. And he is now engaged in one of the most absorbing projects of his life.

"I'm really just a vain man" Mr. Daggert says. "In fact I'm about the most self-centred fellow you ever saw. But my friends and neighbors think I'm wonderful. My children think I'm wonderful. And I — well, I don't think I ought to dispute them. . ."

When Mr. Daggert is doing is framing the story of his life. And banging it on the stairway of his home.

It all started a few months after his retirement. An old friend — a woman who had been a bridesmaid in their wedding in 1924 — sent his wife a yellowing newspaper clipping about the wedding. It was from a weekly newspaper in a small town in Missouri where the wedding was held.

"We had saved no such clipping," Mr. Daggett explains. "And I was very impressed to have the story. I didn't want to lose it. I talked to a friend about the best way to preserve it, and he told me the only way to preserve a newspaper clipping was to frame it and seal it tightly. I went to a picture-framing shop and had it done. for $3.45. . ."

MODEST BEGINNING

That was the beginning. He tacked the frame to the stairway wall, discovered that everybody who came into the house wanted to read the story. . .and started looking for something else to frame.

In three years Mr. Daggett has decorated the stairway wall with these:

A newspaper clipping of the story of his graduation from high school in a small Pennsylvania town. He is mentioned in the story as Class Historian. He made a trip back to the home town to get it. And it's not a clipping — it's a photostat of the story taken from the newspaper's library.

A photograph of a brief notice in a New Jersey paper announcing the birth of the first Daggett baby. They were living in New Jersey at the time.

Four frames showing clippings from the employee magazine at the company where Mr. Daggett had his career — one announcing his joining the company, one announcing a promotion as president of the credit union, and the fourth a lengthy feature story on his retirement.

A copy of his church bulletin showing his election as a church officer.

THE LIST GROWS

A newspaper clipping telling of his appearance at City Hall to fight a zoning change that would have allowed a filling station in his neighborhood:

"I'm vain, all right," says Mr. Daggett, "but you ought to see what interest these framed clips create. Furthermore, I am preserving the history of one Harvey P. Daggett for my children and grandchildren. They may treasure it, or they may give the whole works to the trashman. But I think older parents have a duty to pass on the story of who and what they are to their descendants. And I'm doing it. . ."

Mr. Daggett, in the three years of his project, has framed 22 black-and-white photographs of himself, his wife, his children, and his grandchildren. They hang on the stairway with his "vanity" clippings. Altogether he now has 38 frames.

All with glass and carefully sealed, with notations on the back: all with narrow, black conservative borders: and all except the first one done by himself, with second-hand glass, wood framing from the lumber company, and tape he got at a hardware store.

Bulletins From Birdland

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

WHITE WITH PURPOSE

There is a good reason for everything Mother Nature does, and so we should realize that her use of white must be for some good purpose. Snowy owls are predominantly white because they breed and live almost their whole lives in the Arctic where snow rests for so many months each year. Only in winter do they ever visit settled Canada. The ptarmigan, another northern bird, is mottled in summer, partly white in autumn, and almost entirely white in winter and early spring.

How difficult it is to find a nest even when we know almost exactly where it must be !They are placed cleverly out of sight, and Mother Nature colors the eggs to match their surroundings. Blue-green is a favorite color for them, and the majority are spotted and blotched with other colors for camouflage.

HIDE WHITE EGGS

Birds that lay white eggs have always put them where they cannot be seen. A cavity in an old tree is a most popular hiding place, away from prying eyes. The hooded merganser does this, also many of the owls. Purple martins and phoebes used to use natural cavities, but since civilization has spread over North America they both prefer man-made homes. Martins like apartment houses where many families can live; phoebes build on beams under verandahs or bridges.

Woodpeckers are regular carpenters, supplied with tools for carving out holes where they lay their eggs. But many other birds that lay white eggs cannot carve, so they take possession of these holes when the original owners have finished with them. Flickers and pileated woodpeckers supply the most. Several kinds of owls are glad to use them, also tree swallows, unless supplied with a man-..ade house.

USE GROUND TUNNELS

A few birds lay their white eggs in tunnels in the ground. This is true of the burrowing owl, kingfisher, bank swallow, puffin, and some shearwaters.

You can well imagine that the chimney swift's eggs are quite out of sight. Though they used to be laid in hollow trees, now they are placed in twig nests inside chimneys. Wood ducks still use hollow tree trunks, but sometimes nest in man-made boxes. The hummingbird's eggs are safe from predation because the nest looks like a small knot on a branch and the eggs resemble two tiny white beans. Rednecked grebes depend upon something quite different for protection. They make their homes on a floating mass of vegetation in a lake.

BLAST WRECKS BOAT AT PRESQU'ILE

First Of Nine French Miners Brought To Top

Drill Breaks Through After Week of Work

CHAMPAGNOLE (AP)—The first of nine miners trapped 269 feet underground since July 27 in a French limestone mine was brought safely to the surface today, a few hours after rescue workers broke through to them with an oil drilling rig.

A metal rescue capsule rose slowly to the surface from the depths where the miners have waited to be freed.

They were trapped by a fall of rock, and rescue teams worked day and night to free them.

Dark glasses were fitted over Jacques' eyes as he stepped from the rescue capsule into the sunlight after a week of gloom with only artificial lighting.

He was taken to an ambulance which sped off to a hospital.

He appeared to be in good health but seemed dazed by the brightness as he stepped from the capsule.

Eight other ambulances stood by to take each rescued man as he came to the hospital where they will be given a physical check - up and reunited with their families.

A giant drill punched through to the entombed miners early this afternoon. Jacques came to the surface about three hours later.

Slowly and carefully, to keep the roof of the subterranean gallery from caving in on the men, the drill nibbled its way down the last 10 feet and pierced the vault of the gallery at 12:53 p.m. (7:53 a.m. EDT).

The engineers said everything had gone well until the the final stage of the drilling was completed without danger to the men.

They said the drill penetrated the exact spot aimed for between two pillars and at the strongest part of the roof.

HASTEN FOR WIFE

Earlier the drill was halted for a while when it ran into an unexpected thick layer of clay and sand.

The compressed air system had to be stopped and the drill head changed to a "mud" equipment.

The men were trapped a week ago Monday by a fall of rock in the tunnel leading into the pit-head in the Jura Mountains of eastern France.

Drilling was halted for several hours earlier in order that workmen could lower a pipe lining for the shaft.

The tunnels of subterranean jubilation rose clearly, thanks to a microphone sent down several days ago through a narrow communications shaft, to crowds of engineers, rescue workers drilling and medical officials gathered around the drilled head on the surface.

Send down the capsule" the miners called, "and wine, and cigarettes, and matches!"

Weekend Mishaps Kill 67

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

At least 67 persons died in Canada during the weekend, almost half of them in Ontario, Manitoba and Alberta where major municipalities celebrated a three-day Civic Holiday weekend.

In other provinces it was a normal two-day weekend. A year ago 78 persons died in accidents, 48 of them on the roads.

A survey by The Canadian Press from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Monday, local times, showed there were 51 deaths in traffic accidents, 12 drownings, three deaths in fires and one unclassified death.

Ontario's 30 deaths included 20 in traffic mishaps and nine drownings. In Quebec, where there were 12 fatalities, four died in traffic mishaps and one person was drowned.

British Columbia had nine deaths, seven of them in traffic accidents, one in a drowning accident and one in a fire. Nova Scotia had five fatalities, four on the highways and a boy who died of a broken neck after he fell into the flywheel of a boat motor.

Newfoundland had four fatalities, two on the roads and two in fires. New Brunswick and Manitoba each had two traffic deaths while in Alberta one person died on the roads and one was drowned. Saskatchewan had one death in a traffic accident.

Four Former Ontario Mayors Face Charges

TORONTO (CP) — Four former mayors of Ontario towns, including Mr. Justice Leo Landreville of the Ontario Supreme Court, have been charged in connection with share transactions with Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company Limited.

Mr. Justice Landreville, a former mayor of Sudbury, was to appear in court in Sudbury today.

An official of the attorney-general's department said the others will appear "shortly."

The charges, under section 104 of the Criminal Code, claim that the former municipal officials a c c e p t e d shares from NONG as consideration for aiding in procuring resolutions granting gas franchises for their municipalities to NONG.

The spokesman said the charges all relate to a period two years prior to May 1, 1957.

Pearson Given Honors

WIKWEMIKONG Ont. (CP)—The prime minister of Canada, resplendent in a many-colored Indian headdress, danced—with on Indian maiden and sat in on a powwow Moday.

He also became the first white man to receive the ceremonial eagle feather from the Odawa tribe, residents of this tiny Manitoulin Island community.

The day began Monday morning when the prime minister, accompanied by Mrs. Pearson and their eight-year-old grandaughter Barbara Hanna of Toronto, took off from Ottawa in a transport department Viscount.

Their destination: The fourth annual North American Indian Powwow at Manitoulin Island in Lake Huron, about 70 miles southwest of Sudbury. It is in Mr. Pearson's Algoma East constituency.

The powwow—three days of Indian dancing and singing—was in full swing when the Pearsons arrived at Wikwemikong from Gore Bay Airport via RCAF helicopter at noon.

HAD BUSY DAY

—Received many groups of Indian children, who were energetically waving flags with the Liberal government's proposed maple leaf design.

Mr. and Mrs. Pearson also made brief stops at Providence Bay and Gore Bay. They were forced to cut these visits short due to heavy fog, which made necessary an earlier return to Ottawa.

The weather was a cool 60 degrees but it failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the prime minister; garbed in a bulky headdress and new buckskin Indian tilte of Chief Ogimabinesse (King of the Birds).

By JOHN McCAUSLAND

LUSAKA (AP) — The Northern Rhodesian government has temporarily outlawed the fanatic Negro Lumpa sect, whose rampages in the last 12 days have cost at least 270 lives.

In a country-wide broadcast Monday night after the Lumpa massacre of 150 persons at Lumpazi, Prime Minister Kenneth Kaunda threatened anyone attending meetings of the cult with seven years in prison.

Kaunda said he does not dispute the right of the Lumpas to their religious beliefs— a hodgepodge of African superstition, paganism and Church of Scotland theology—but he insisted on the restoration of order. He said he would lift the ban in about a month if the carnage ends.

Kaunda is trying desperately to bring peace to the Central African country before it receives independence from Britain in 12 weeks.

Some 2,200 Negro troops under white officers are combing the bush for self-styled Lumpa prophetess Alice Lenshina, who founded the sect 11 years ago, claiming she had died and returned from heaven. She is wanted "dead or alive."

Government officials believe the terror at Lundazi, a market centre 400 miles northeast of Lusaka, was in retaliation for the slaying of 75 Lumpas at the cult's headquarters at Sione (Zion) last Thursday. The Lumpas died in a suicidal charge with spears and mumie leaders against government riflemen.

Some 200 men and women sacked and destroyed 10 vil-

War Came to Great Britain Exactly 50 Years Ago Today

LONDON (CP)—War came to Britain exactly 50 years ago, at 11 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 4, 1914.

It came to a nation still in Bank Holiday mood, enjoying its last 'fling of a golden summer and an era when you could buy a double gin for the price of a 1962 newspaper, a six-course supper in London's West End for less than 20 cigarettes today.

The gold sovereign and the Royal Navy were world-wide symbols of stability and strength. Many Britons went hungry amid the plenty, but even a laborer earning 27 shillings a week ($6.75 at the then prevailing rate of the pound) could manage a day at the seashore on that last weekend of the long peace.

Rumors buzzed on the beaches, the piers and the pleasure-boats, but war still seemed as far away as Sarajevo, town in Serbia where the Austrian archduke had been assassinated five weeks before.

For a month nothing had happened, then the crisis boiled up in five European capitals. Austria unreasonably declared war on Serbia, which had abjectly met all her demands; Russia mobilized in defence of her Slavic ally and Germany declared war on Russia.

France, caught in the web of alliances, would be Germany's target in the west, but the Kaiser's army first had to cross Belgium — and Britain was pledged to defend Belgian neutrality.

German troops invaded Luxembourg Aug. 1 and France mobilized in a patriotic frenzy. Britons rallied emotionally to the plight of "brave little Belgium"—but worried more immediately that their holiday weekend would be spoiled.

Deadlock Enters 7th Day

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons deadlock over a money bill enters its seventh day today amid behind-the-scenes efforts to arrange a meeting among party leaders.

New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas warned Monday that filibusters and a frivolous wasting of time are steadily reducing public esteem for Parliament.

He diagnosed the stalemate as the indirect result of an obstinate Liberal-Conservative "feud over the flag issue and proposed this "compromise" formula to deal with the flag:

1. An early Commons vote on the Conservative amendment calling for a national referendum on the flag, followed by a parliamentary recess of a few weeks. (The usual summer recess is long overdue.)

2. Completion of the flag debate in the fall, with a time limit on debate of one week or any other period agreeable to all parties.

"That 'is closure," snapped Gordon Churchill, Conservative House leader, as soon as Mr. Douglas mentioned "one week."

READY FOR MEETING

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker refrained from commenting on the suggestion's merits, but said he is prepared to meet Prime Minister Pearson at once to discuss it.

Mr. Pearson returned Monday night from a visit to his Algoma constituency and met his advisers to review parliamentary strategy. A government statement was expected today.

Political informants said there is a good chance a party leader's meeting will materialize, but they were less optimistic about a possible break in the legislative logjam.

Conservative sources have flatly opposed any time limit on the flag debate while Liberal sources have opposed, with

Three Toronto People Suffer Burns, Fractures

Violent Explosion Came As Lines Cast Off

PRESQUILE (Staff) — While experts today puzzle the cause, the public hereabouts pondered the luck that saved four holidaymakers from the shattering incident.

The incident was the explosion that shredded the Toronto cabin cruiser Jessabell, the length of 42 sophisticated feet, leaving it in a jumble of smoking flotsam in the twilight.

Three of the four Toronto people holidaying aboard her are in Trenton Memorial Hospital — the owner, 50-year-old John Bell, with a fractured leg and burns to both arms; Amelia Cox, 45, and Pearl Francis with burns and body fractures.

The fourth — Clifford Taylor — was on the dock casting off the cruiser when the detonation came and was uninjured. He later returned to Toronto.

While three of them are injured, the miracle for those who saw it happen, is that no one was killed.

Among those nearby were Colonel Angus Duffy and his wife, Helena, both of Belleville. The veteran campaigner, his boat moored on the other side of the dock from the cruiser, described the explosion "like a 25-pounder going off."

When he leapt to the dock he saw flame gulping in the stern and bow of the Jessibell. A man whom he believed was Mr. Bell was attempting to reach a woman trapped aboard — and showed signs of shock.

NARROW ESCAPE

Dick Bradley, a Cobourg boatsman, also figured he had a narrow escape.

His own cruiser was about 15 feet astern of the Toronto craft when she exploded. Company and just come aboard the Bradley boat bringing its complement to about 20, among with members of his family.

The detonation shattered glass aboard his cruiser and fearing the wreck of the craft might drift, hastily manouevered to the other side of the dock.

After the initial shock, some worked fast at rescue.

Mrs. Duffy, a trained nurse, began tending to the injured with blankets and temporary dressings.

Once the reaction had calmed down, provincial police moved in to start investigations. The dock area was cordoned off and the water-logged shambles of the cruiser secluded for official investigation.

The explosion had been heard six miles away in Brighton. From Gosport, just three miles across the water from here, Wilfed Quick, an elderly resident, came to the scene. A short time later he suffered a fatal heart seizure and was found dead.

2 Negroes Shot in Race Riots

By DAVE MAZZARELLA

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP)—Hit-and-run bands of Negro youths retreated from the riot-torn streets of Jersey City early today after a second night of racial violence that left two Negroes shot and 16 others persons injured.

Police arrested seven Negroes on disorderly conduct, bringing to 20 the number of arrests since fighting broke out Sunday night.

More than 100 policemen, who earlier had been the targets of gasoline bombs, bricks and rocks hurled by the youths, patrolled a wide area in the predominantly - Negro southern section of the city. Windows in about a score of stores were smashed and some were looted in the latest outbreak.

In a midnight press conference more than three hours after the riot began, Mayor Thomas J. Whelan said that in his judgment the violence had "passed its peak." He said he was prepared to sit down with civil rights leaders "anytime, anywhere" but that the first problem was maintaining order.

He continued the entire 900-man police department on standby alert but said help from the state would not be needed.

BLAMES HOOLIGANS

Whelan said the situation in this northern New Jersey city across the Hudson River from New York was one of "hooliganism versus law and order." The city has 275,000 residents—37 per cent Negroes.

The two Negroes who were shot and an unidentified white man who was reported to have been dragged from his room and stabbed by Negroes were the only injured persons detained at the Jersey City Medical Centre. All three were reported in good condition.

The Negroes were identified as Louis Mitchell, in his early 20s, and Leonard Hall, 21. Mitchell had a wound in his neck and Hall and Dudley suffered a flesh wound in the leg.

Authorities said they could not identify immediately how they had been shot.

Monday night's riot broke out about 7:30 p.m. when, police said, Negroes hurled rocks at passing cars at Grand and Montgomery streets, the scene of the fighting Sunday night. Some youths standing on the roofs of a two-story apartment building bombarded a police car with bricks while their colleagues on street level tried to overturn another police vehicle.

FIRE SHOTS

Police escorted buses through the area and fired several shots in the air. A short time later more than 100 youths then clumped together on Woodward Street and hurled gasoline bombs and other missiles at three dozen helmeted policemen who stood their ground at the Grand Street intersection. One officer suffered burns.

The policemen, armed with shotguns and .38-calibre revolvers, fired shots in the air during this period that the Negroes suffered the shotgun wounds.

By 11 p.m. the youths began to break into smaller bands near the intersection and the police were ordered to disperse but some Negro bystanders continued to scream obscenities at the police.

Whelan said white youths were reported to have participated in some of the looting.

U. S. Navy on Alert for Any New Red Attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials, described as "deadly serious," watched today to see whether the threat of another PT boat attack on an American destroyer was an isolated incident or part of a hazardous new Communist strategy.

U.S. experts said it was difficult to fathom how whether the sudden attack Sunday — which left one of the three Communist PT boats burning—was an accident, a misjudgment or a deliberate provocation.

But if similar Red assaults are launched, bolstered U.S. naval units in the Gulf of Tonkin were prepared to carry out President Johnson's orders to destroy any attacking force.

The president announced to reporters Monday his new shoot-to-kill orders to the navy. Previously the orders had been for the naval units to defend themselves but not necessarily to destroy the attacker.

In Sunday's clash, the destroyer Maddox scored a direct hit on one of the PT boats with a five-inch gun. The Communist craft later was strafed by aircraft from the carrier Ticonderoga and left burning in the water. The Maddox was not damaged.

U.S. defence and state department officials believe the PT boat sank. A reconnaissance flight over the area, in international waters 30 miles off North Viet Nam, found no trace of the craft.

The state department described the engagement as an "unprovoked attack" and said it was a premeditated act by the Communist North Vietnamese government. Department spokesman rejected North Vietnamese charges that American planes and ships had attacked its territory in recent days.

Senator Richard B. Russell, Georgia Democrat who is chairman of the Senate armed services committee, told reporters both State Secretary Rusk and Defence Secretary Robert McNamara seemed to think the clash was an isolated incident. "There is no evidence of expansions in the Gulf of Tonkin by South Vietnamese," Russell said. "This could have been confused the North Vietnamese."

South Viet-Nam's premier, Maj-Gen. Nguyen Khanh, declared in Saigon the United States should follow up the PT boat attack with firm steps against North Viet Nam.

"Unless these steps are taken, whatever they may be, North Viet Nam may be encouraged to repeat, ridiculing America in the eyes of the world," Khanh told reporters at a cocktail party.

The PT boats launched three torpedoes and several 37-millimetre cannon shells at the Maddox but missed.

The destroyer, with the help of four Crusader jet fighters from the Ticonderoga, drove off the attackers with gunfire and rockets.

All three PT boats were damaged but two were able to beat a slow retreat.

Around the Kitty

The local club entered eight rinks in the 32nd annual Gold Cup Tourney and altogether 40 rinks from over the entire province took part. Those rinks who bowled from the Belleville Club were:

The women's section of the club under the presidency of Mrs. Thelma Fitzgibbon and her able band of workers, served a delicious fried chicken dinner and sandwiches, pies and coffee. The tables were well patronized and all reported the dinner man was well served.

The general chairman, G. B. Hyde, welcomed the bowlers and spoke of the bereavement the local and other clubs had had in the past year. Particular mention was made of James Watkin of London and Jack Luck of Newmarket. Those of the local club referred to were Mrs. Beryl VanTassel, Charles L. Hyde, "Cliff" Argue, sponsor of beautiful chests for the chairman until his death; Gordon Watkin. A moment of silence was observed and many floral sprays witnessed around the greens.

Pete Weber, representative of the Calvert Distillery, and donor of beautiful chests for the tourney, was host at a cocktail party and social evening for the visiting bowlers at the Tops Motor Hotel on Thursday evening. It was a grand party and many games of years past were played over again. Refreshments were served at the conclusion and all voted Mr. Weber an excellent host.

The spider was played at the opening of the tourney and a goodly sum was realized for the Veterans' Fund of the association. Ewart Carswell of Oshawa was the winner and received a $10 voucher from the A. & P. Groceteria.

Bodies of Singer, Pianist Found In Wreckage

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)— The bodies of country singer Jim Reeves, 40, and his pianist-manager, Dean Oliver, 30, were found near here Sunday in the disintegrated wreckage of their light plane. Reeves was flying home Friday night from a business trip to Batesville, Ark.

The plane fell into trees which hid the wreckage for almost 48 hours. The crash site was in the fashionable suburban Brentwood area, less than one mile from the home of Grand Ole Opry star Marty Robbins who figured in the search. Another opry singer, Eddy Arnold, a Brentwood resident, identified the body.

A college man (University of Texas), Reeves had a polished manner and a refined style. He signed a contract to play baseball with St. Louis Cardinals but an injury sent him back to his first love—his guitar and singing.

He zoomed to lasting fame with his 1953 recording Mexican Joe which sold more than 1,000,000 copies. Bombo, almost as popular, followed.

16-Year-Old Refuses Legal Aid

A 16-year-old youth today refused legal aid when brought before Magistrate R. Y. Wills on a charge of indecently assaulting a 2½-year-old girl.

This means his case automatically would go to judge and jury.

The boy's father told the magistrate he had seen two lawyers on his son's case, but the youth had refused them.

"Would you accept the advice of a lawyer if your father gets one?" queried Magistrate Wills.

"I would not," Marshall answered.

"Would you like legal aid?" asked the magistrate.

"I don't care what I get as long as I get something," the youth replied. Moments later he blandly informed the magistrate: "I don't want to see a lawyer at all."

The magistrate continued his patient probing of the accused on the method of trial he would choose.

However, Marshall refused to make an election.

Magistrate Wills then ordered a preliminary hearing, pointing out to Marshall he would automatically go before a jury, if committed.

The trial judge, he said could then make if a defence lawyer would be appointed by the court.

Voice Vote Tosses Out House Motion

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons by a voice vote Monday tossed out a Liberal backbencher's attempt to introduce legislation changing "the Dominion of Canada" to "the federal state of Canada" in this country's constitution.

Auguste Choquette (L—Lotbinière), who earlier in the session had sponsored a motion to delete references to the Queen from the constitution, said that in his opinion the word "dominion" is a misnomer for Canada when the province of Quebec now is officially calling itself a state.

Two Are Held Without Bail In Shooting

NEW YORK (AP)—Husband and wife were held without bail Monday in the strange triangle slaying of a married electronics engineer. The victim apparently was trying to end an illicit love affair that began at an office Christmas party last December.

The accused husband, Charles Fazio, 30, spent seven years in a mental institution for the slaying of a teen-aged youth. He was released in 1958.

Fazio and his wife, Beverly, 24, were charged with homicide in the sleeping Saturday night of Robert Hirsch, 27, a $15,000-a-year inspector at a Carteret, N.J., plant where work on nuclear submarines is under way. He held a U.S. government security clearance.

Hirsch was shot five times outside his apartment building. Moments earlier he had left his wife and two small daughters in their sixth-floor apartment in response to a telephone call from a woman, arranging a rendezvous at a coffee shop.

Mrs. Fazio was a stenographer at Hirsch's firm, the Foster-Wheeler Corp. They met at the last office Christmas party and began dating, police said.

Attack on U. S. Destroyer May Be Attempt to Heat Up Southeast Asia Issue

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

The Torpedo attack on a U.S. destroyer in the Gulf of Tonkin may be just the beginning of an attempt to heat up the Southeast Asia situation to the danger point.

Something out of the ordinary —perhaps a big military buildup — seems to be going on in Communist China's sensitive Leichow Peninsula, across the gulf from North Viet Nam. If there is a link between this and the Communist North Vietnamese attack on the U.S. destroyer Maddox there is a good chance of more incidents. Behind these will be a suggestion of political overtones, taking into consideration the presidential election in the United States and a gathering showdown storm within the Communist world.

The Chinese are touchy about the Tonkin Gulf area. Over the signature of Premier Chou En Lai, the Peking government has issued warnings to foreign shipping in the area of the Leichow Peninsula, the southern - most point of militarily - important Kwangtung province.

The warnings were in the form of new regulations for foreign shipping, concerned principally with the 15-mile-wide strait separating China's Hainan Island from Leichow Peninsula on the mainland.

Ships using the strait were forbidden to use radar or photographic or survey equipment. They must pass in the middle of the strait, cruising only in certain areas, and must obey any query or direction.

RULES ARE STRICT

Ships were not permitted to enter the strait from either side without 48 hours' prior notice and must give complete details: marking, identification, nationality, tonnage, cargo, destination and the like. Ships not obeying these regulations will be stopped and searched, China said.

The Leichow Peninsula and Kwangtung province could have vast importance with regard to China's future plans for Southeast Asia. A 600-mile military highway snakes from Canton down into the peninsula and then over to a point inside North Viet Nam, where it connects with a coastal Tonkin road. This road was used to supply Ho Chi Minh in his war against the French a decade ago and probably remains an important supply route for Ho in his drive to envelop South Viet Nam.

Involvement of the U.S. 7th Fleet in shooting incidents in Southeast Asian Waters could apply heat to generate a new situation which could play upon the political uncertainties both in the East and West in the next few months. Incidents could cause acrimonious debate in the U.S. election campaign which might add to the apprehensions of Asians.

TO MINT U.S. DOLLARS

U.S. westerners who like to clink big silver dollars in their pockets will be pleased to learn today Monday when President Johnson signed legislation in Washington providing for the first minting of "cartwheels" since 1935. A $600,000 item in the $5,253,377,000 budget bill for U.S. treasury, post office and other agencies, which Johnson also approved, will finance the conversion of silver bullion into 45,000,000 silver dollars.

South Negroes Winning Many Official Posts

ATLANTA (AP) — Armed with growing vote power and a new political savvy, Negroes in the southern United States are campaigning for some public offices which previously had been left for white politicians to contest.

They are making some gains, a survey by The Associated Press showed.

Negroes holding important southern elective offices today are few but they have in recent years broken the solidly-white ranks of southern politics in some significant posts.

There are Negro candidates for the Nov. 3 U.S. general election in Mississippi, Alabama and South Carolina, as well as other states.

Their most dramatic success came in Georgia two years ago with election of a Negro state senator. No other southern state has a Negro in its legislature, although a Negro has won the Democratic nomination for a North Carolina House of Representatives seat.

WIN COUNCIL SEATS

Negroes won election this year to two city council seats in Virginia. Their only other victory in that state was the 1948 election of a Negro councilman. Negroes hold a council post in North Carolina and Tennessee. And four Negroes have won nominations to offices in an Alabama county.

Elsewhere in the South, Negroes have made no important gains. Although they comprise 22 per cent of the population in 10 southern states, Negroes have pushed up their voting power only to about 12 per cent. Most of it now is concentrated in the big cities.

Georgia's 36-year-old Negro senator, Lawyer Leroy Johnson of Atlanta, cites three reasons for the increase in Negro candidates and their successes.

"In Georgia, reapportionment of the Senate made possible my election," he said. Johnson's district is 55-per-cent Negro.

"Then, there is a growing awareness on the part of Negroes to register and vote," Johnson said. "And — very important — I think we are seeing in the South more evidences of some type of liberalism among the white people."

Former Residents of City Come Back in 1915 Ford

For a man who drives a 1915, Ford roadster while his Cadillac — won on a $10 raffle ticket — stays home in the garage, Les Douglas at first glance appears to have some exotic tastes in car travel.

Last weekend the couple brought their preference home with them when they drove from 1915 to 1964 — faster into the driveway of Belleville relatives. Former residents of the area, their arrival marked the end of a 550 - mile hike from their Southport, Connecticut, home.

"I drive all the time between 30 - 35 miles an hour," said Les. "That way you really see the scenery. With a modern car you pass through small towns and scarcely see anything."

He and his wife are natives of Tweed who moved to the U.S. in the 1920's and their visit was to Mrs. Douglas' sister, Mrs. Don Foster, 68 Emily Street.

They left home Wednesday, arriving in Belleville Friday night with the immaculately kept 50-year-old Model-T still chugging away cleanly on all four cylinders.

RESTORING FOR YEARS

It was the latest antique acquisition for Les, who has been collecting and restoring ancient automobiles for years.

Two years ago his restoration of a 1908 Model-S Ford — the Model-T's predecessor — took first prize at the nationals at Grand Hershey Show, an event that is the highlight to date of his collector's years.

The Model-T which he drove to Belleville also is a minor miracle of restoration.

"I found it two years ago in an old barn in New York State near Massachusetts," he recalled.

"It was last registered in New York State in 1926 and I restored it 80 per cent myself. The rebuilding took eight months working nights and holidays. The end result is an automobile that would make Henry Ford roll over in his grave and puff out his chest with pride.

It runs as smoothly on its 25 horsepower motor as the day it came off the assembly line. Its coachwork — teams in black metal and brass.

CONSTANT VIGIL

However, keeping its functional trimness in perfect shape is a matter of constant vigil as far as the Douglas' are concerned. In a heavy rainstorm they will put into shelter. Brass fittings are gingerly rubbed down every day to guard against corrosion.

The weekend visit also gave the couple an unexpected opportunity to put their proud possession on mass display.

With brother - in - law Don Foster a top exhibitor at the Napanee Centennial, he conceived the idea of entering the classic old automobile in the big event.

Quebec PC's Want Action On Flag Issue

OTTAWA (CP)—Quebec Conservative MPs meet to discuss growing concern with their party's exhaustive examination of government spending authority for August and September.

One of the 10-man group said most of them are unhappy with the drawn-out supply debate which began a week ago Monday, because it is delaying consideration of the government's maple-leaf flag resolution.

They want the flag issue to come to a head and steps taken within the Conservative party to present a more attractive voteGetting image in French Canada.

The Quebec objections are reported to have reached serious proportions and there is talk that several of the Quebec MPs are preparing to disavow loyalty to the party's national leadership.

U. S. Warships Steam Out Of Hong Kong

HONG KONG (AP) — The giant U.S. aircraft carrier Constellation and three other American warships steamed out of Hong Kong harbor for unannounced destinations today.

A U.S. spokesman said the four warships left according to schedule. He declined to say whether the move was connected with President Johnson's announcement Monday that he is increasing U.S. naval strength in the Gulf of Tonkin off North Viet Nam following an attack on the U.S. destroyer Maddox by three North Vietnamese torpedo boats Sunday.

The warships here apparently were placed on the alert for possible departure ahead of schedule, but the U.S. spokesman said they actually did not leave ahead of schedule.

The three other ships were the guided missile frigate Gridley and the destroyers Preston and Pechteler.

Miss Universe Had a 'Ball' Before Retiring

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)— Her coronation ball was the biggest party of her life and the new Miss Universe, Kirkali Tsopei of Greece, stayed out until almost dawn to celebrate.

One thousand persons came to dance. Hundreds more milled through the hotel where the ball was held in hopes of seeing the regal 20-year-old Athenian or 90 other beauties including Mary Lou Farnell of Baltimore, Md., saying goodbyes.

They weren't disappointed. Despite only three hours sleep since her crowning Saturday, Kirkali was stunning. Sunday night her dark eyes beamed as she greeted well-wishers tirelessly.

"This is the happiest moment of my life, I can't believe yet I'm really queen," said the 121-pound model who has a 36-23-36 figure.

Senior Citizens President Passes Away

TRENTON — President of the Trenton Senior Citizens' Club for the past two years, Mrs. Emma Elizabeth Panter of 18 Rawley Street, Trenton, died at Trenton Memorial Hospital on Sunday, just as she was preparing to leave the institution. Mrs. Panter had been in the hospital for three months, to the day, having entered the hospital in May after suffering a broken hip in a fall in her home.

After she realized her convalescence would be lengthy, Mrs. Panter, always interested in the welfare of the Senior Citizens' Club, resigned, and the club affairs have been carried out by the interim-secretary, Mrs. Carla Rosenpiel, with the assistance of the secretary, Mrs. Lena Phillips. However, Mrs. Panter continued to take an active interest in the club following her return to health Her death came as a shock to her fellow members.

Mrs. Panter, a former Mrs. Plummer, was the wife of Thomas Panter, and was 73 at the time of her death. She is survived by Flo., plays Bruce Gowdy of Ajax, Ont., in riage.

Except for Murray, the semi-finalists each have one defeat. Murray Toronto team earned a bye into the semi-final round Monday by downing previously unbeaten John Crawford of New York by six international match points.

Gowdy entered the semi-finals defeating Martin Scheinberg of Fairlawn, N.J., by 20 international points Monday night. Redman downed a team captained by Alton Blue of New York by 11 points while Russell defeated Crawford by 16 points.

Murray's victory assured him of no worse than third place in the trophy event. It also means the team members Percy Sheardown and Bruce Elliott have qualified to participate in trials at Dallas in November for a place on the six-man North American team that will meet Italy in 1965 in South America for the World Bridge championship.

Last year, 968 boats were locked through from navigation's opening until closing on Oct. 15, and it looks as if the 1,000 mark may be passed this year.

Toronto Team Leads Bridge Tourney Play

TORONTO (CP) — A team captained by Eric Murray of Toronto is the tournament favorite going into today's semi-finals of the Spingold Trophy event of the American Contract Bridge League's summer nationals.

The Scum of the Road

In New Jersey, state troopers checked turnpike hitchhikers and discovered 162 runways, 98 servicemen absent without leave, seven persons fleeing from mental institutions, five escaped convicts and 500 others who had criminal records. Of 100 hitchhikers in a small town, only four were without criminal records.

That information is contained in an article in a magazine published by Allstate Insurance Companies of Canda. It ought to make any motorist hesitate before offering any hitchhiker a lift. That, of course, is its aim. The companies want to make motoring safer and believe discouraging giving lifts to hitchhikers will do this.

"There are still some drivers who feel guilty when they turn down a 'thumb bum' on the highway, yet there is no reason to feel any obligation toward these moochers," says Col. G. R. Carrel, chief of the Colorado State Patrol.

"You wouldn't open your home to them; why admit one to your car?" he adds.

That's just the point.

Most of us would like to live in a world where everybody opened their home to anybody in trouble.

Twice last winter we were stranded on Highway 401, at night. Both times we were fortunate enough be get a lift quickly to the nearest service station.

But many others have not been so lucky. Even with regular highway patrols, a person could suffer severe exposure on a winter's night, especially if the car's breakdown was the result of an accident.

Even when it is evident that the hitchhiker is in no real trouble, it is a satisfying feeling to extend a helping hand.

There is something wrong with a world in which we cannot do this with safety. Two thousand years ago wary travellers passed by on the other side; it is the good Samaritan whose name lives in honor.

We hate the criminal hitchhiker. He robs us of something worth even more than a good name—our own good opinion of ourselves.

He is left with the option of risking one's neck, and the necks of others in the car, or hardening one's heart and speeding by, as if one were were too callous to care what happens to a fellow-man.

The criminal hitchhiker befouls the road on which he stands. Just by existing, he robs us all—motorist and honest hitchhiker alike.

Violence Aids Goldwater

The Christian Science Monitor of July 28 reports that Senator Barry Goldwater, the Republican candidate for the presidency of the United States, now seems likely to win 401 of the 270 electoral college votes necessary to win.

The Arizona senator appears now, according to the Monitor, to have the edge in only 99 states.

Goldwater has a long way to go, but the battlelines are quickly forming. The riots in Harlem, Brooklyn and Rochester are just made for the Goldwater plan to appeal to the white "backlash" vote.

This rioting brings with it fear and resentment on the part of the whites. This fear and resentment will undoubtedly strengthen the white "backlash" vote which now supports the Republican candidate.

There are many people in the United States who are on the fence as far as the new Civil Rights Bill is concerned. They may not openly and publicly oppose it, but the big question is, do they really inwardly believe in President Johnson's Civil Rights Bill?

There is much evidence to support the belief that a great many people in the privacy of the voting booth will oppose the Democrats and the Civil Rights Bill. Governor George Wallace, the southern segregationist, received unpredicted support in his primary campaigns. For example in New Jersey, where he was only supposed to win ten per cent of the votes, he ended up capturing some 42 per cent. What was his winning message? Simply, opposition to the Civil Rights Bill.

His support came from the white "backlash" vote, which is now on the side of Goldwater.

It is an understatement to say the Negroes in the United States are opposed to Senator Goldwater. It would be a wise thing for the Negro leaders to let them know just whom they are helping by their irresponsible acts of violence.

Violence equals "backlash" votes; "backlash" votes equal support for Goldwater; and enough of this support could lead to his victory.

Power Project Stalled

Ottawa Citizen

The great Hamilton Falls hydro-electric power project has suddenly become stalled, and its prospects are uncertain. The Quebec government has bowed out of the picture — though without permanently so in the hope of wresting another 2 million cities of a mill from the developers so one can say. The Newfoundland government is trying hard to find an outlet for some part of the 25 million-horse-power potential in New England and the Atlantic provinces. Even if these efforts are taken soon, nothing at all may happen at Hamilton Falls in the foreseeable future.

The original plan called for development of the Labrador site by the British Newfoundland Corporation (BRINCO), whose chairman is Mr. Robert Winters, a former member of the St. Laurent cabinet. The rights were granted by Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland. The power so produced would be transmitted by the Quebec border, sold to Quebec Hydro, and used in part by that publicly-owned agency and in part resold for export.

The other important actor in this complex industrial drama is Consolidated Edison of New York, which would like to get large blocks of power from Hamilton Falls. But Consolidated Edison must know soon where it can get otherwise it will proceed, to build nuclear plants.

The Quebec government can afford to be in no hurry, as it has other large sources of water energy to tap. Hamilton Falls makes economic sense to Quebec, if the price is right, and the Lesage government is in a strong bargaining position if pess major savings resulting from dealing through a public utility rather than a private company like BRINCO. And now that Quebec is committed to the principle of publicly owned power this consideration carries weight. But BRINCO is reluctant to shave its asking price much.

Meanwhile Newfoundland's Mr. Smallwood, faced with the possibility of a delay, if not all, is hard at work on an alternative. Following Quebec's decision to stand pat, his government issued a statement describing the Labrador to New England transmission plan, which involves the crossing of two water gaps 2 miles and 62 miles respectively. Only various European developments, the statement asserts that "the feasibility problems of high voltage undersea transmission are not new, and are being considered as serious technical obstacles". Perhaps not, but critics hold other opinions on the economic obstacles.

Here the matter rests for the moment. The Smallwood project loses patience first, it will mean that nuclear energy has supplanted hydro power, in this particular instance. That would be a highly significant event.

Old Smithy Remembered

Boston Herald

It wasn't much to look at — just an old, weatherbeaten, rambling shop at the village edge. Around it was a tangled mass of old cultivators, wagons, wheels, sleds, plows and harrows. Inside, the floor was black with dirt and littered with boot parings. Everything was begreased with grime and half concealed with masses of old harness.

Overhead on the stringers were rows of new shoes — dainty lightweights for racing, heavy roaders and heavy ones for big work horses. In one corner was a heap of old shoes, from which a tangled mass of odds and ends of metal. At one side was the forge with its big leather bellows; near it was the old anvil and the half tub of black-looking scummy water.

It was fun for small boys to watch the old smith as he heated a shoe red hot in the glowing coals and then pounded the shoe to shape on the anvil. . .

The old man's talent for work worked and told boys stories of long ago when there were as many oxen as horses. Perhaps he heated the shoe again and pounded it again for a new story. Then he drove nails through the hoof and the holes in the shoe. He twisted off the ends and fitted the ends smooth with the big rasp.

Old blacksmith shops are gone — gone with the wagons and sleighs of yesteryear. But there are many, many ages and story who look back over the years and remember the pleasant hours they spent in an old blacksmith shop.

How Catholic Sees Bingo

Canadian (Catholic) Register

There is an old chestnut which we have used in talks to various groups in this ecumenical age. It goes like this:

Two psychiatrists who had lost touch with each other after graduation met unexpectedly ten years later in a restaurant. They decided to greet each other, the first saying to the second: "You're doing fine. How do I look?"

We were reminded of this story of the lost art of self-criticism by a recent item in a Protestant publication.

In the July issue of the United Church Observer, good friend Dr. A. C. Forrest editorially chided the Catholic Church for its bingo habit. Then he suggested that Catholics might reciprocate this criticism by pointing out the faults of the Protestant Church.

A flippant reaction might be one of gratitude for a modern spirit which could accuse the Catholic Church of anything or anything. Then, concerning the bingo, we personally consider the activity completely inoffensive, utterly boring, a waste of time and money. We would wish that other ways to finance projects in some parishes be found.

That being said, we cannot agree that bingo is sinful in itself.

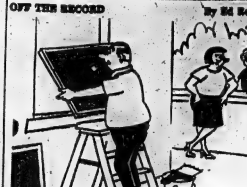
To be sure, there are devotees of the dreary game who neglect their prior duties to take part in the silly pastime; and there are others who spend money they can ill afford in a desperate effort to make a killing. Such people certainly are sinning.

To condemn bingo because people abuse it requires the same sort of reasoning which would condemn marriage because of divorce or the abuse of sex. Bingo, like so many human activities — neither good nor bad; and the fact that it can be abused by some persons cannot alter this.

Find Bankers' Prestige Low

Wall Street Journal

A couple of decades ago, many bankers were regarded by the average citizen as flinty, fore-closure-prone people with whom business dealings were, at best, an unpleasant necessity.



In areas of their advertising and promotion since then, however, the bankers have pictured themselves as friendly folk, eager ready to help with any of the public's financial problems. And whether for this reason or others, their business has seldom been better.

So it may seem surprising that the bankers' "prestige position," among ninety occupations, has sharply deteriorated. A study by the National Opinion Research Centre, an affiliate of the University of Chicago, puts them in twenty-fourth place, down from tenth since 1947, in the ranks of allegedly prestigious callings.

While we wouldn't know how to evaluate this momentous intelligence, it might possibly suggest that an eagerness to solve everyone's problems doesn't always guarantee a high rating in the public eye. If that's true, it could lead to a little rethinking by bankers—not to mention the nation's politicians.

To Your Good Health

Dr. Molner Is Flattered By Appreciative Reader

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am not a person who readily gives compliments. I am sincere, your newspaper columns are the best I have ever read, down-to-earth so that those who read you can understand; fair, intelligent; oh, on and on.

This will amuse you. I am sure. I have clipped and saved a large number of your articles.

Is all this your own work or that of a clinic or a group of doctors? Anyway, keep up the good work. — E. C. B.

Thank you for your flattering words. We'll try to keep up.

That isn't an "editorial we." I mean "we". For no, this is not a one-man undertaking. No single person can have the knowledge to tackle the wide array of questions I have two partners in the preparation of this column.

All three of us frequently ask the advice of authorities in specialized fields. Besides this we receive considerable help unasked — but very welcome — from doctors who suggest the addition of certain ideas. Sometimes they tell us in person; sometimes the suggestions come in letters from doctors in other parts of the country.

It is our regular practice not to jump too quickly onto the bandwagon when some new treatment or theory is announced. Not all of these live up to early expectations. We prefer to wait until substantial study and experience has earned reliable support.

In this I think we agree with most physicians — not to be the first to accept every new announcement as gospel, but certainly not the last to abandon old concepts when newer ones prove themselves superior.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it harmful to take thyroid pills to help become pregnant? — L. L. M.

Thyroid extracts will encourage pregnancy only if you are, otherwise, low in thyroid activity.

Thyroid materials should not be taken without medical advice. They should be taken only if tests have shown that you need them.

If you don't need them, they can be harmful.

If you do need them, they will not be harmful if taken in suitable amounts. Let your doctor decide that.

Dear Dr. Molner: What would cause a yellowish discharge from the navel? Should I be worried about it? I am 53. — Mrs. R. A.

Doubtless an infection. Yes, I'd worry about it to the extent of having my doctor diagnose the precise trouble. Then let him cure it.

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: I have a friend who insists that females never have gout — that it is a man's affliction. I admit that you hear of more men than women with it, but do the latter have it, too, or are they rarely? — Mrs. I. K.

Yes, they may have gout, too. It is not known why, but only ten per cent of the cases occur in men; 5 percent in women.

Dear Doctor: Does removal of the gall bladder shorten a person's life? — S. S.

A gall bladder is more a convenience than a necessity, a storage place for a reserve supply of bile, a digestive juice produced by the liver. Most medicines (but far from always) a person has to adjust eating habits somewhat without much of the gall bladder but this doesn't shorten life.

One Person Is Killed Every Ten Minutes

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

If you look at your watch now, and read this column slowly, by the time you will have finished it, another person in America will have been killed in an automobile accident.

Each ten minutes or less, around the clock, seven days a week, fifty-two weeks a year, another American is slaughtered on the highways. This Fourth of July weekend, there as a record toll of 510 deaths in three days; easily shattering the previous record of 442 fatalities.

But this cold figure of 510 tells only a part of the story. For each person killed, another half dozen are tragically involved — wives and husbands without mates, children orphaned, whole families wrecked both emotionally and economically. It goes on every day.

Our annual death toll is about 40,000. More Americans have been killed by automobiles than our total casualties in all the wars we have fought since the Revolution. We wish everybody who can read knows this.

Yet little is done about it. We have the intelligence, we have the technical knowledge, we have the law-enforcement ability. What we lack, simply, is the will. It is a problem in morals, and in nothing else.

The plain fact is that few of us are willing to pay the price to reduce the highway death toll to its unavoidable minimum. We don't want any drastic re-evaluation of the role of the automobile in modern society, which is precisely what is needed. We want things to stay pretty much as they are, and yet change for the better.

We want more safety and more speed; more laws to protect us and fewer laws to restrict us; vigilant police to crack down on other offenders and easygoing police to wink at our offenses; bigger and newer highways to accommodate more cars and fewer motorists to take advantage of them.

We want all these incompatible things — which is why as a nothing. Faced with the dilemma of ordinary decency man has always stood still, like Buridan's ass, unable to choose between two equal bales of hay. Whichever we do, we will be giving up something; and so, by doing nothing, we end by giving up our lives at the rate of 40,000 annually.

It is tragically unnecessary for what could be more ignominious and meaningless than to perish in a needless "accident car"? Death is robbed of whatever grandeur, or even dignity, it ought to have, and becomes an idiotic parody of itself, if we continue to live with meaning. We must accept the expectation of dying without meaning.

Communications

Hamilton Spectator

Someone decided a few years ago that at the bottom of a lot of trouble in the world was the inability of people to "communicate."

If we could only grasp what the other fellow was getting at the world would be illuminated with understanding.

There was nothing new in the idea, but it was the first before "communicating" became yet another empty cliche, a darling on the lips of theorists.

Rebels Clash With Congolese At Wanie Rukula

From AP-Reuters

LEOPOLDVILLE (CP)—Congolese soldiers today clashed with rebels on the outskirts of Stanleyville, and latest messages from the east said there was anxiety that the city would shortly fall.

A message said soldiers had fought with the rebels only 13 kilometres (about nine miles) south of Stanleyville this morning.

Stanleyville has a garrison of about 600 men. Its fall to the rebels, who are being backed by Red Chinese Communists, would effectively cut off the entire northeastern Congo and provide a capital for the "Popular Republic of the Congo" proclaimed recently by rebel leader Gaston Emile Soumialot.

The message described the rebels as "lightly armed" but added that they had trucks. White women and children are being evacuated by air from the region and two planeloads already have reached Leopoldville.

STILL HOLD OUT

Another message said Congolese troops still were holding out at Wanie Rukula, about 30 miles southeast of Stanleyville. Commandos in Wanie Rukula Monday fought to stop the rebel advance.

Wanie Rukula is believed to be the last important defence position against a rebel advance on Stanleyville, the city of the northeastern Congo.

Meanwhile, a new constitution for The Congo came into force Sunday. President Joseph Kasavubu signed a decree Saturday night promulgating the new constitution, which won the overwhelming approval of Congolese in two weeks of voting in a referendum in June and July.

Canadian Will Be Buried in British Cemetery

By PETER BUCKLEY

NICOSIA (CP)—Tpr. J. H. Campbell, 20, of New Waterford, N.S., killed Friday when his armored car went overturned, is to be buried today in the British military cemetery at Dulkelia on the south coast of Cyprus.

Campbell will be buried with full military honors. Members of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, with which he belonged, will provide pallbearers and the Royal 22nd Regiment will provide a firing party.

Representatives of other Canadian regiments serving with the United Nations peace force on Cyprus will attend the funeral, to be conducted by Maj. Fernand Fortier of St. Hyacinthe, Que., Canadian Roman Catholic padre on Cyprus.

Canada's government policy is for burial abroad rather than returning the body home.

Campbell died after the car, which was on patrol, swerved on a mountainous road in the Kyrenia district to avoid hitting a woman and a flock of sheep.

Canada's Wheat Deal With Russia Nearly Complete

MONTREAL (CP)—The first shipments completing Canada's big wheat deal with Russia should clear the St. Lawrence River by the middle of this month.

Bev Corbett, general manager of the March Shipping Agency, said Monday the gigantic operation to deliver the 228,000,000 bushels of wheat to Russia now is well into the mopping-up stage.

Two of the last five shiploads involved in the $500,000,000 wheat deal are waiting to be loaded at St. Lawrence River ports.

15,000 Gather at Napanee For 2-Mile Parade Monday As Centennial Is Observed

Screaming rockets Saturday afternoon touched off a week of Centennial celebrations in the town of Napanee and in Lennox and Addington county.

Costumes, beards and period dresses dare the streets of Napanee with horses, ancient automobiles, buggies and farm wagons. Her windows of most stores are being used as museum display cases for historical treasures and the town as a whole resembles a living museum.

About 15,000 people Monday morning watched a two-mile long parade wind through the streets of the county town. The parade, which took three-quarters of an hour to pass, included scenes and historical floats from Belleville, Kingston and Napanee and six bands and comic orchestras.

LUNCHEON HELD

Napanee Mayor Glenn C. Herrington was host to a civic luncheon at the Napanee Golf Club. After the luncheon, the Ontario Minister of Health, Dr. M. B. Dymond, turned the first sod for the new 78-bed Lennox and Addington General Hospital. Local subscribers raised $317,000 for the hospital after an initial campaign of $200,000 was launched last year.

Mayor Pat Sinclair of Napanee, Indians, brought greetings from his town, believed to be the only other town in the world with a name similar to Napanee.

Monday evening Hon. Allan Macnaughton, speaker of the House of Commons and a native of Napanee, brought greetings from the Federal Government.

Sunday programs featured special services in all county churches and the unveiling of a historical plaque at the Alan Macpherson house, built in the early 1800s and home of one of the first mill owners in Napanee. Sir John A. MacDonald, first prime minister of Canada, frequently visited the house during his youth, which he spent in the county. He was a relative of the Macphersons.

Restoration of the house has been undertaken by the Lennox and Addington Historical Society, in co - operation with the county and supported by Federal - Provincial grants, as a 1967 Canadian Centennial project. The society has so far raised $18,000 for the restoration.

Sunday evening about 1,000 people gathered at the Napanee Fair Grounds for an interdenominational service, conducted by the Rev. Canon W. J. Robinson of Bancroft and former rector of St. Mary Magdelene Church in Napanee. The Canon has also served in Belleville.

PAGEANT PRESENTED

Weekday evenings, a "Retrospectacle" will present more than 1,000 people to the Napanee Fair Grounds. The pageant, which reviews the history of the county from the days of the fur traders to the present, has a cast of more than 200 local people and professional direction. It is presented on a 150-foot stage specially erected for the event.

The 50 piece Royal Canadian Regiment Band from London contributed to the first three days of the celebration, and local merchants are co-operating through the week with special window displays and an "Old Fashioned Bargain Days" sale. Clerks are dressed in period costumes for the sale. The county has published a 208-page history of the area, with pictures and stories of each of the 13 municipalities, for sale as a souvenir.

Special celebrations are planned for Wednesday afternoon at the Adolphustown Township Provincial park, to make the 180th anniversary of the landing of the United Empire Loyalists. The special day has been organized by residents of Adolphustown and South Fredericksburgh townships, and by the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association, which is also celebrating its 100th anniversary this year.

The Napanee and Lennox and Addington celebrations will conclude Saturday night with a giant street dance.

Thousands See Aerialist Fall To His Death

DETROIT (AP)—Twenty-two thousand persons watched in horror Sunday night as an aerialist fell 85 feet to his death in Detroit's Old-Fashioned American League baseball park.

Some thought as Edward Henry Lipschield, 55, of New Britain, Conn., spun toward his death that surely there was a safety rope around an ankle that would break the fall. There wasn't.

Knipschield was performing in an annual police field day which features spectacular stunts, games and a tug-of-war between Detroit and Toronto police.

Captain Eddie, as Knipschield billed himself for his 100-foot high act on a swaying pole, became the victim of Detroit's second catastrophe to befall an aerial performance in the last 5½ years.

It was in Detroit's fairgrounds coliseum Jan. 30, 1959, that the human pyramid of the Flying Wallendas came apart on a high wire and seven fell and another was paralyzed for life. Three injured lived to perform again.

A loop of twine that Captain Eddie used to dangle above ground broke and apparently caused his death, although witnesses conjectured for hours afterward on why he fell. The broken twine had deteriorated from age and mildew under a covering of tape, Detroit Police Inspector Hiram Phipp who saw the fall and examined the loop.

State Police Ordered Out Of Rochester

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)— Governor Nelson Rockefeller ordered New York State police withdrawn from Rochester Monday, leaving local police with the sole responsibility for maintaining law and order in this calmed racial battleground.

His order followed a similar directive Sunday night, withdrawing about 1,300 national guard troops, whose "show of force" early last week helped quell racial violence.

Acting on Rockefeller's instruction, state Police Superintendent Arthur Corsetina Jr. directed the last contingent of troopers to pull out of the city. There were about 150.

At the peak of the rioting, more than 400 troopers were ordered to the scene, but some were withdrawn gradually.

Women's Institute Has Hit With Tweedsmuir Histories

By JEAN SHARP
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Preventive medicine as practised in rural Ontario in the 19th century sounds potent.

A pioneer home remedy calls for eight ounces of squaw vine (partridgeberry), four ounces of cranberry bark, eight ounces of slippery elm bark and one ounce of bloodroot.

"Put the above in an earthen vessel, add four quarts of water. Put on the back of the stove and keep warm for four days, then strain and add two pounds of unrefined sugar. Simmer 20 minutes and add half a pint of gin. Bottle and cork.

"Take a glassful three times a day for six or eight weeks before expected illness."

The recipe is from the Tweedsmuir History compiled by the Women's Institute in Kars, Ont. It won a WI national competition this year.

Tweedsmuir Histories are chatty, human chronicles of Canada's rural communities and how they grew. About 2,000 WI branches across Canada have put together such histories.

Typical of the personal recollections is one by a WI writer in Gladys Ridge, Alta., describing her bachelor's ball as it was in the days when it was the annual social highlight of Okotoks, Alta.

RIBBONS AND LACE

Women didn't rely on low necklines and makeup to enhance their charms in those days, they depended on ribbons, lace and sequins, she says. And cowboys rode in for the event with evening clothes in gunny sacks on their saddles.

The history of the region around Clarendon, Que., describes farming methods before the middle of the 1800s.

"About all the farming equipment they had at first was a hoe made by a blacksmith. Using this, they hoed the ground between stumps, and planted potatoes.

"Wheat was planted wherever there was space. Giant trees were felled and burned to acquire that space. It was threshed by being laid out on a floor and beaten with a flail — two sticks loosely joined together with a strip of leather.

"Then on a windy day the grain was poured from one vessel to another, over a clean quilt to separate it from the chaff."

Writing about Ferryland, Nfld., founded in 1622 and accessible only by sea until the First World War, Mary Elizabeth Clowe tells about a winter famine many years ago.

Her great - grandfather with several other men walked 40 miles for a sack of Indian meal, then returned home in relays, each man carrying the sack as far as he could before stopping to rest while others went on.

For a quick and easy leftover salad, drain and chill cooked peas. Toss with cubes of your favorite cheese and diced celery. Sprinkle with French dressing and serve on crisp lettuce cups. Serve salads often during July, "Salad Month," reminds the Foods Department at Macdonald Institute, Guelph.

Ann Landers

Advertisement Not Needed To Announce Disengagement

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I went steady with a handsome, irresponsible lush for three years. We became engaged on my 19th birthday and for two lousy years I've listened to his lies and nursed him through hangovers.

Last week when he forgot where he had parked his car (for the 15th time) and came for me in a taxi, I decided I had had it. I returned his ring and told him never to call me again.

What I want to know is this: Everyone thinks of me as Lou's girl. Somehow I must get the word around that I am no longer engaged. How would it be if I ran a small ad in the paper — something cute like, "I'm available again. It's all over between Lou and me," and accompanied the ad with a small picture?

All I want from you is a yes or no. No corny comment or sermonizing is necessary. — MISS DISENGAGED.

• • •

DEAR MISS — No.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Five years ago my husband and I moved to Denver. We have a roomy home, a beautiful back yard and the air is fresh and invigorating.

My parents who live in a small city apartment come to spend a week with us every August. Before they pull up to our home it is their habit to stop at a market and buy three armloads of groceries. They also insist on taking us out on the town two nights during their visit, so they could hardly be called freeloaders.

My husband starts to complain the minute he hears they are on the way. After they leave I hear nothing but insulting remarks for days.

His folks are cold as ice. At our wedding his mother gave me a bankbook. She has never kissed me in all the years I've known her. His father is a sour apple — to cheap to spend the money to come to see us although I've invited them a dozen times.

My husband is beginning to chew at me about my folks again. What shall I say to him? — DENVER DONNA.

• • •

DEAR DONNA — Nothing you can say will make any difference, so save your lungs and enjoy that glorious Denver air.

• • •

The poor stiff you are married to was born in a deep freeze and he never had a decent relationship with his family. He resents the affection and respect he sees between you and the members of your family, so he must attack and criticize. Develop a deaf ear.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I have been married for 16 years to a man who works — when it doesn't interfere with his drinking, hunting, fishing or card-playing.

I am 38, my husband is 40. We have never had to do without anything because his mother sends him sizeable cheques every few months. I have lost all love and respect for my husband because he is a loafer and a spender. The only thing I can say in his behalf is that he is a good father to our sons and they adore him.

A man I met recently has taken a serious interest in me. I'm sure he would divorce his wife and marry me if I were free. She is a lush and has not been a wife to him in years. Their children are almost grown. Please get your nose out of Alice in Wonderland and give me some realistic advice. Thank you. — POLLY BUT NOT ANNA.

• • •

DEAR POLLY — So you think all you have to do is divorce your husband while your friend dumps his wife and you will live happily ever after.

Let's start at the beginning. A woman who would permit her husband to loaf around for years and accept cheques from his mother contributed to the dependency which destroyed her love and his self respect. So take a bow for your share of the mess.

Stop making excuses for your cheating and get busy at home. Your marriage could use the energy that is being wasted elsewhere.

Negro Models Will Be Used By Big Store

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP)—Even before newly integrated schools open their doors this fall, Negro and white manikin youngsters will be hugging book bags in department store windows displaying back-to-school wardrobes.

"Using children in these and Christmas windows later on is a natural and charming way to begin at integrating them," says Harold Gulins, sales manager for D. G. Williams.

His firm with its two manikin factories as well as L. A. Darling Company, Grenwicker-Zaris, the Plainfield, New Jersey, firm among United States organizations stepping up its pace to meet a mushrooming demand for Negro figures.

Recently one of the smart set's most elegant mink and couture emporiums, Bergdorf - Goodman in New York, announced it had taken a Negro brother and sister into its manikin family. MAKE DEBUT AUG. 27

They will make their debut Aug. 27 as nursery school tots in a six-window back-to-school display along other Fifth Avenue lines.

Last January Bamberger's department store, Newark, N.J., pioneered with the early Spring appearance of several Negro figures in windows showing higher-priced fashions ready to wear.

The decision to use Negro manikins, said window manager Arthur Plscher, originated among display department personnel without pressure, politics or suggestion from racial groups or outside individuals. When Bamberger executives were told about it, he said, "they were very pleased."

CENTENARY — About 65 parents and children attended the combined Cubs, Scouts, Men's A.O.T.S. Club and Fellowship Club of Centenary United Church picnic on Saturday, July 26th at Adolphus-town Park. All enjoyed a picnic dinner followed by races for all ages. A ball game was played by the young people and the water was enjoyed by all. A number of contests and races were run with a large number taking part.

No Surprise In Display of New Fashions

PARIS (AP)—Yves St. Laurent trotted out no surprises in his fall and winter fashion showing for the press Monday, but buyers who went to see rival Givenchy came away jubilant.

Fashion writers were more amazed at how much St. Laurent's collection looked like a Chanel collection, than they were at his new mid-calf dinner dresses. But Givenchy, who never admits the press until weeks later, had his restricted audience raving.

First reports from buyers gave special mention to suits with "skirts in movement" and to "molded" dresses. Givenchy did these with buttoned-down pleats and panels. St. Laurent's double-tiered suit skirts and lots of movement, too, with the top tier often wrapped or panelled, or the bottom tier pleated. He also matched mid-calf length theatre coats shown earlier this week by Pierre Cardin.

Viewers also were startled to see a similarity to fashions shown by Chanel without the pants. Both featured simple suits with a "sweatery" look and tiered skirts with wraps and panels.

Tomato Talk

Plan to enjoy those gorgeous beef-steak tomatoes often . . . Sweat step is an old trick! Thickly sliced and smothered in seasoned sour cream, or heaped with creamy cottage cheese, they're divine! Dipped in seasoned flour and fried quickly in hot butter, they make a super brunch or lunch dish . . . especially if you serve them from the frying pan, keeping them hot, and add 2 tablespoons of flour, a pinch of basil and a cup of milk to the pan, stirring until nicely thickened. Serve the fried tomato slices on toast or toasted English muffins. And the sauce on top and garnish with parsley or chives. Good with bacon strips too. And for something "way out" but good, try this "fruit from the vine" with sugar and nutty pouring cream . . . for dessert!

Peach Perfection

Did you know that we owe our enjoyment of fresh peaches to China, where this luscious fruit was first cultivated? How you like them, poached in a sugar-and-water syrup, then chilled and served over rice custard? Just cook rice as usual, in milk or in water, then add more milk, sugar, almond flavoring and whipped cream. Chill, then serve in sherbets, topped with the fresh peaches-and-syrup mixture. A dessert fit for the gods!

Parade of Peppers

Stuffed green peppers are a popular late summer dish because they're so good with a variety of fillings. Try them stuffed with macaroni and cheese, with creamed salmon, with grotind meat, rice and tomato sauce and with corned beef hash. Try them sometime too with a mixture of fresh corn, cut from the cob and mixed into an herb-flavored cream sauce with cubes of ham or luncheon meat.

Peachy for Breakfast

If you're in the happy situation of not quite knowing what to do with extra peaches your family will love them for a breakfast treat. Fresh peach slices will top cereal, hot or cold, with great finesse. Or you might feature peaches and cream with buttered toast, in place of jam or marmalade. Or add the chopped fresh fruit to pancake or waffle batter for a very special treat.

Will Graduate From Nightingale Nursery School

Miss Mary Eleanor Spearman, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. James S. A. Spearman of 76 Everett Street will receive her nursing diploma and pin along with 42 other successful graduates of the Nightingale School of Nursing, Toronto. The third annual graduation exercises of the school will be held on Thursday afternoon, August 6 in the theatre of the Ryerson Polytechnical Institute, Toronto.

This will mark the end of two years of intensive study and clinical experience which prepares the 48 graduates to apply for registration as professional nurses.

The Nightingale School, owned by the Province of Ontario and sponsored by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission is the first permanent school of nursing in Canada to be established on this basis to prepare nurses at the diploma level.

An interesting fact regarding this graduating class is that, although the school is situated in Toronto, 40 of the graduates came from homes outside the Metropolitan Toronto area.

Miss Spearman as one of the graduates has made arrangements to enter the hospital field upon attainment of Provincial registration, thus helping to fill the vital need for greater numbers of professional hospital workers.

Reader's Poetry Offers Some Comfort to Bereaved

DEAR DORIS — I enjoy your thoughts so much. May I take the liberty of sharing a few of mine with you? The following lines are my own:

THE MESSAGE

I drew aside the portico tonight
And heard you sigh,
And peering earthward in the golden light,
I saw you cry.
Could I but speak to you from out this Bourne
To which I've gone,
I'd say, seek no pepenihe, or for me mourn.
We still are one.
And though a quivering breath our souls divide;
And flows between
The silent stream that parts me from your side;
I walk unseen,
Yet ever near, Beloved, with noiseless tread.
I am not dead.

M.C-P.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR M.C.-P. — It's a "Message" of hope for those who are bereaved. Thank you.

DEAR DORIS — I'd like a part-time job for later on, maybe one or two night a week. Could you find out for me what it would take to be a sewing instructor or teacher at night classes? I'do all the sewing for the family.

In the fall I'm starting piano lessons, but had in mind only to take enough to play a few jingles for myself. My husband thinks I should go on and maybe give lessons myself, I am 30.

Do you think I could still make it? As for music, I love it. Would you give me some information on these two, or any other ideas you might have? — PART-TIMER.

DEAR PART-TIMER — Dressmaking courses are offered at high school level in various Canadian centres where there is sufficient demand, often at nights. Whether you can qualify as an instructor depends on basic education, talent, and freedom to take further courses.

I am sending you the names of the schools near you which carry extension courses. When writing, ask about a market for your proposed vocation.

As for music, since you love it, the sky's the limit.

People over 30 often outstrip the youngsters when it comes to class work. Reasons? (1) They appreciate education more; and (2) they have learned to apply themselves. Go to it!

• • •

DEAR DORIS — I am 14 and have been going out with a boy 16 for four months. I like him very much. My girl friend's boy friend told me that my boy friend parked with another girl one night after he had taken me home early. I had to promise not to tell anyone especially my boy friend.

My boy friend still acts as if he likes me because he comes over and phones me quite often. I'd like to keep on seeing him but I don't want him to get away with it. — TWO-TIMED.

DEAR TWO-TIMED — So you either keep your promise or accuse your boy friend. And then what? Wouldn't it be better to two-time or three-time him — openly?

Try Blueberry Hot Muffins

by Mary Moore

Because I gave you a recipe for Blueberry Muffins three years ago, I did not pay enough attention to Eleanor when she told me I should give the recipe in August this year. She told me that her 13-year-old Roddy does not like blueberries, but in muffins he thinks they are wonderful.

To convince you of my devotion I should let you know that I bought imported blueberries at 69c a pint, before the season opened, to make these, and they were lip-licking good. So much so that three dedicated dieters went right off their routines and ate two each (one of them was I).

MONDAY

Dinner Menu

Homemade Cream of Vegetable Soup; Sausage and Liver Meat Loaf; Tomato and Green Pepper Sauce; Cauliflower; Hard Rolls; Apple Betty with Coffee Hard Sauce; Coffee.

There is something about a napkin-covered basket of hot muffins that is the very symbol of a good cook.

If you are in the North country where blueberries are abundant, surprise your weekend guests with a panful of hot blueberry muffins. Even if you are city bound and make them for your working family.

BLUEBERRY MUFFINS:

1½ cups fresh washed and dried blueberries (or out of season you could use partially thawed fresh frozen), ¼ cup soft butter or margarine or shortening, ½ cup sugar, 1 large egg, well beaten, 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 3 teaspoons (1 tablespoon) single-acting baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 cup whole milk.

Sift the flour and measure it. Take out 2 tablespoons and dredge the washed and dried blueberries with it in a small bowl. Sift the remainder flour with the baking powder and salt. Cream the butter with the sugar and stir in the beaten egg, but only barely stir it in. (You know muffins should be always undermixed which results in a lumpy batter, but this is necessary to get characteristic muffin texture.) Now to the creamed mixture add the flour and milk, half of each at a time, stirring barely enough to mix. Fold in the floured blueberries gently. Fill buttered or oiled or greased muffin pans ⅔ full. You will have enough batter for 14 muffins so you will have to butter 2 extra individual custard cups to hold this batter. Immediately put in oven and bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 14 to 15 minutes.

Serve at once if possible, in napkin-lined muffin basket. Actually these muffins are almost as good cold as warm.

There would be out of this world for a Sunday morning guest breakfast with lots of butter and honey.

Have I said enough?

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

QUESTION: I've been asked to be a bridesmaid at the wedding of a friend. I have accepted, but I feel like withdrawing at this point. She picked out a ghastly shade of green for us to wear. The other girls don't think the color is so bad, but it's not becoming to me. Since I have to pay for the dress, I think I should be able to have something to say about its color. Would it be possible for me to suggest she revise the color scheme for the wedding? Perhaps the maid of honor could wear the green and we could wear the pale yellow the bride has selected for her honor attendant. What is permissible in such a situation? — C. W., Trenton, N. J.

ANSWER: The bride chooses the colors her attendants are to wear, even though they pay for their own dresses. Since the majority have no complaints, you'd be rather a wet blanket to suggest a change in color scheme at this point. The time to discuss one's feelings about the color is in the beginning, when swatches are brought out and a vote is taken. Attendants may discuss the pros and cons of the colors at this point, but the bride makes the final decision, based on everyone's preferences. It would be most inconsiderate to start haggling over color at this stage. The only polite thing to do is wear the dress and be a good sport about it.

QUESTION: Since we sent out invitations to our daughter's wedding, friends have been calling to ask what she needs as gifts for home. I've been reluctant to say outright, and have mentioned broad categories — such as linens, accessories, etc. things that don't match or even harmonize. May I correctly say, when asked that she needs a specific article and then give the style and color? — Mrs. K. H., Baltimore, Md.

ANSWER: It's permissable and a help to those faced with the problem of what to buy if you prefer, you could have your daughter listed with the Bridal Registry in a local store, and direct questioners to the service, where they may check what is on the list and be sure of giving a present that coordinates with her decor and suits her taste.

Canada 1914-18

When War Still Evoked "Stirring Days" at Home

H. H. Gordon, now a retired journalist, was aboard a ship bound from England to Canada when the First World War started in August, 1914. In this story he recalls Canada's reaction at home through the war years.

Written for The Canadian Press

By H. H. GORDON

Rumors of imminent disaster flew like atlantic spray aboard the Royal Edward in mid-summer 50 years ago as the Canadian Northern liner steamed for Quebec from Britain.

Europe was in turmoil when I boarded the ship at Avonmouth July 29, 1914. Austria had declared war on Serbia just the day before. A wireless message Aug. 3 reported Germany and France at war. Within 24 hours Britain, Canada and the rest of the Empire were involved in the First World War.

The rumors among the passengers had German cruisers lying in wait near the Gulf of St. Lawrence, authorities ready to sacrifice the night-illuminated Royal Edward in favor of the brand new Calgarian some miles astern, stokers working overtime to squeeze more speed from the engines.

The rumors, as so often in the following four years, proved false. The Royal Edward docked safely at Quebec—she was torpedoed a year later in the Aegean with a loss of 1,000 British troops—but the passengers found just as much excitement, anxiety and rumor ashore.

Canadians, who knew of war only from the yarns of a few Crimean and Boer War veterans, were gripped in the beginning with excitement and uncomplicated patriotism.

In Montreal, the crowds sang La Marseillaise. In Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and Vancouver it was Rule, Britannia. Toronto, as if sensing the gravity of events that were to take the lives of 62,000 Canadian servicemen and leave 166,000 wounded, was more solemnly tense.

COUNTRY UNITED

In 1914, political parties, the press, the church and industry were united in calling for action.

"I have often declared that if the mother country was ever ever involved, Canada would render assistance to the fullest extent of her power," said opposition leader Wilfrid Laurier on Wilfrid Laurier on Aug. 11. "There should be a truce to party strife."

"As to our duty, all are agreed," echoed Conservative Prime Minister Robert L. Borden when Parliament met in special session Aug. 18. "We stand shoulder to shoulder with Britain and other British Dominions in this war."

They were stirring days. Soldiers paraded on main streets across the country, were cruiting drives filled camps to overflowing, some 200,000 patriots joined the home guard and armed guards were conspicuous at border towns, bridges, canals and reservoirs.

The Toronto Women's Home Guard, Mrs. Strung, made a brief public picturesque appearance on the Toronto scene in 1915. Jessie McNab and Laura McCully drilled the nattily uniformed corps on the grounds of Miss McNab's home until the leaders quarrelled and the guard disbanded.

PRESSED CIVILIANS

Recruiting sergeants were busy, often crudely so, on downtown streets. Physically unfit men whose impairments were not apparent had a miserable existence, hounded and insulted. In self - protection some perfected defensive dodges.

"Young man, why aren't you in uniform?" the sergeant would bellow, attracting the attention of passers-by. In a typical approach.

"It's my feet," was the reply from one civilian practised in the art of evading public embarrassment.

"What's the matter with your feet?"

"Just watch me walk," said the civilian, limping quickly away in a demonstration that swiftly lost him in the crowd.

Not until early in 1917 were "honorably exempt" buttons provided for thousands of physically disabled to spare them from taunts reserved for "slackers."

FEARED SPIES

Patriotism also bred suspicion about espionage, and aliens were suspect people, although discrimination was directed only towards the talkative or apparently lazy among them. There was antipathy towards United States neutrality, especially after the sinking of the Lusitania May 7, 1915, with the loss of more than 1,000 lives, failed to change the American stand.

A minor fuss erupted in Toronto on one of the innumerable flag days, this one for Belgian relief, when miniature black, white and red German flags were handed out among the black, yellow and red Belgian tricolors. The tags, it turned out, came from a U.S. manufacturer who inadvertently mixed flags used in German patriotic displays in the United States.

The touring Vandenberg Opera Company from the United States went broke during a run at Toronto's old Grand Theatre when word got around that substitutions for some of its stars when necessary because of the regulars, Britons of military age, discreetly decided to stay behind in the United States.

Scarcely a week passed without newspaper stories of espionage and activity by enemy aliens. With time, German-Canadians came under increasing suspicion. German clubs disbanded, the singing of German songs stopped.

Berlin, Ont., populated by 12,000 citizens of German origin and 8,000 of British descent, changed its name to Kitchener in a 1916 referendum. A subsequent move to restore the name Berlin provoked a riot.

The first burst of somewhat naive enthusiasm gave way with time and the casualty lists to attitudes that disrupted the early unanimity.

Divisions deepened between French and English Canadians and political differences emerged as the war progressed.

As long as compulsory military service was not an issue, Sir Wilfrid Laurier led politicians, church leaders and others who urged French Canadians to take up arms. But their efforts were largely nullified in Quebec by the anti-British campaign of the Nationalist party led by Henri Bourassa and Armand Lavergne.

A typical incident occurred at Montreal's Lafontaine Park July 23, 1915, when a recruiting rally that attracted 5,000 people was broken up by a barrage of eggs and stones hurled at the 60th Battalion band.

The first conscription crisis came under fire in 1916 for lack of energy in recruiting on the one hand for depleting industrial manpower on the other.

The public was aroused by alleged mistreatment of the troops. Newly established Camp Borden, a dusty home for 30,000 men by the middle of 1916, was criticized as a place of "sand, sin and sorrow." Canadian troops training on Salisbury Plain in England were said to be living in "mud, misery and madness."

The Canadian Ross rifle, criticized by returning servicemen for over-heating and jamming, was finally scrapped in 1916 for the British Lee-Enfield despite a spirited defence of the Ross by Sir Sam Hughes, minister of militia and defence. Sir Sam himself was scrapped by the Borden government late in 1916 after a dispute over control of overseas forces.

Winds of scandal over munitions contracts blew through the country in the middle of the war and a royal commission criticized the Dominion Shell Commission for carelessness and bad judgment and censured financier J. Wesley Allison for profiteering in munitions.

The heightened tensions and antagonisms of wartime even found expression in widely voiced suspicions that German arsonists were responsible for the burning of the Parliament Buildings Feb. 3, 1916, with the loss of two seven lives. Official opinion discounted this Parliament move to the Victoria Memorial Museum and met there for four years.

The trickle of military manpower was fanned into a primary political question as voluntary recruitment lagged — 383,995 men had enlisted by the end of 1916 — and casualties mounted. The blue - uniformed wounded and sick men invalided home from Europe were a common sight on the streets. By 1917, returned invalids numbered some 18,000 and the government was operating 56 military convalescent hospitals and 14 tuberculosis sanitoriums for them.

Recruiting drives were stepped up in 1917 but enlistments came thinner from elaborately emotional recruiting shows that featured the singing of Tipperary, Good Luck to the Boys of the Allies, We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall and even I Love You Canada.

The antagonism of Quebec and some labor and farm leaders, Prime Minister Borden announced plans for conscription May 18, 1917. In the ensuing election campaign led by Laurier, the bill became law late in July.

The Liberal party was split with most members outside Quebec rallying to a new coalition government formed by Borden and Laurier. The so-called khaki election of Dec. 17, 1917, returned the Union government with 151 seats to 82 for the opposition, 63 of them from Quebec.

The election was held during a national wake following the Dec. 6 Halifax explosion in which an estimated 1,600 were killed, 6,000 injured and 10,000 made homeless when a chemical-laden ship blew up in a collision in Halifax harbor.

The Halifax explosion was the most tragically spectacular of a series of wartime disasters on the home front that for brief periods diverted attention from the European slaughter.

Forest fires in Northern Ontario in July, 1916, destroyed Cochrane and Matheson and took 223 liver. The centre span of the Quebec Bridge collapsed less than two months later, taking 13 lives Sixty-four children died in a fire at Montreal's Grey Nuns Orphanage Feb. 14, 1918, and 343 were drowned on Oct. 23 that year when the coastal steamer Princess Sophia foundered on a Pacific coast reef.

U.S. IN WAR

Canada's 13th Parliament assembled in its crowded museum home in March, 1918, and with the United States now joined in the Allied cause, Canadian politicians found more time for domestic affairs.

The session saw passage of the Women's Franchise Bill, daylight saving time was introduced despite rural opposition, a move was made to abolish hereditary titles, and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics was set up.

The war was drawing to a close as Parliament met, but there were final flourishes of the unnatural excitements and tensions it generated.

A brief visit home late in 1917 by a 22-year-old airman named William Avery Bishop produced an outpouring of hero-worship. Billy Bishop, VC, he was soon to be known to the world, was mobbed by crowds on visits to his home in Owen Sound Ont., and to Kingston. Ont., and Toronto.

Ottawa bore the brunt of a final era of peace protest against the pains caused by the war when 5,000 farmers marched on the capital on May, 1918, to demonstrate against the conscripting of farmers' sons. Their appeal for consideration was rejected by the prime minister as the Allies were preparing for offensives for the assault on the Hindenburg Line, which was to break in August.

Rumors of the impending defeat of the Kaiser began to circulate in mid-November and a population weary of war, was expected at all hours that a permature report of the armistice collapse Nov. 7 prompted wild celebrations.

Word of the actual signing of the Armistice came in extra editions of newspapers early on Monday, Nov. 11. The horror of the previous Thursday were repeated as all business ceased and the people celebrated the end of the war that was to end all wars.

CANADIANS — 1914 - 18 — Canadians displayed varying reactions to news of the open and close of the First World War. In 1914, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Liberal opposition leader, (upper left), called for a truce to party strife. As long as conscription was not an issue, he led politicians and church leaders in urging French-Canadians to take up arms. In spite of his fierce opposition, a conscription bill became law in July 1917. In the early days, when patriotism was at its highest, soldiers paraded on main streets and camps were filled to overflowing with recruits. Parliament At a Glance

MONDAY, Aug. 3, 1964

NDP Leader Douglas suggested a compromise plan to halt the Conservative debate on interim supply, delay the flag debate and allow a summer recess.

External Affairs Minister Martin called it a "worthy suggestion" but expressed doubt that the Conservatives would agree to it.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) assailed commentators and writers who were accusing the Conservatives of a filibuster.

Gilles Gregoire (Creditiste Lapointe) complained of pain, useless, Conservative speeches and walked out of the house.

War Came

hoarding food. Prices were rising ominously. But otherwise things seemed normal as the great exodus began—so normal that the railways were still advertising the "shortest and most comfortable route to Germany."

Londoners bound for the east coast jostled straw-hatted Germans hurrying home. In Paris, there was panic at the Gare du Nord as milling tourists tried to get out of France before invasion came.

MOBS BESIEGE PALACE

London's West End saw scenes unequalled since the Boer War as mobs besieged Buckingham Palace and Whitehall waving French and British flags, cheering and singing patriotic songs. Their noise could be heard in the cabinet room at 10 Downing Street, where Liberal Prime Minister Herbert Asquith was trying to rally a divided cabinet.

Historian A. J. P. Taylor suggested recently that perhaps the famed Bank Holiday crowds helped propel the cabinet to a decision—had it been a normal working Monday history might have taken a different course.

In Trafalgar Square, Labor leader Keir Hardie delivered a pacifist speech. But mostly, war fever raged in the London streets.

In Berlin, the Kaiser announced: "We draw the sword with a clear conscience and with clean hands."

A packed House of Commons Monday heard Foreign Secretary Sir Edward Grey define British obligations to Belgium. News of the Belgian invasion was followed by an ultimatum to Berlin.

That night, standing at a Whitehall window, Grey uttered his famous epitaph: "The lamps are going out all over Europe. We shall not see them lit again in our time."

Next day King George V signed the mobilization orders. A special recruiting station at Scotland Yard had to be kept open all night because of the screams of men enlisting.

'SCRAP OF PAPER'

In Berlin, British Ambassador Sir Edward Goschen presented the ultimatum to Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg, who cried that Britain was going to war "just for a scrap of paper"—the Belgian treaty.

In the British cabinet room, five men watched the clock ticking away the end of an era. They did not expect a reply from Berlin. They were only afraid Germany might jump the gun and launch a surprise attack at sea before the ultimatum expired at 11 p.m. British time.

In the war room at the admiralty, telegrams were being prepared to send to British commanders and consuls across the world the moment war was declared. An official joked that they had been ready for years just waiting for the blank space for the name of the enemy to be filled in.

As Big Ben struck 11 the forms were rubber-stamped. They read: "War, Germany, act upon instructions."

Outside the palace, the calm, starlit night was filled with the vast crowd singing the national anthem. The king appeared briefly on the balcony. Next morning he would sign the documents committing the Great British Empire to war—a war that was confidently expected to be short and decisive, "all over by Christmas."

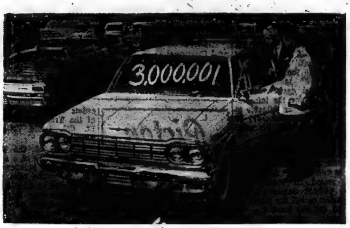
equal firmness, any postponement of the debate until fall. The government wants approval of the maple leaf flag design before considering any recess, while most Conservatives are strongly opposed.

RAPS LIBERALS

Mr. Douglas accused the Liberals of sabotaging their own legislative program by pressing the emotional flag issue at the wrong time. Voters were awaiting action on the pension plan, a minimum wage, railway assistance and other pressing problems.

Mr. Diefenbaker denied that his party is conducting a filibuster or obstructing legislation. The opposition was dutifully exercising Parliament's power of the purse and insisting on government answers to its questions.

He accused members of the cabinet of prolonged absences from the House and of arrogant silence when present. The Opposition had asked 232 questions in the money debate without receiving a single answer.



Mr. Martin said he recognizes the opposition has a duty and right to scrutinize government spending, but the Conservatives had reached the limit in the present debate. Their tactics were contributing to the "process of destruction" threatening Parliament.

The rest of the sitting was taken up by Conservative speeches on the problems of veterans and Indians.

Gilles Gregoire (Creditiste-Lapointe) said at the evening sitting he was fed up with their "repetitious and sterile" speeches. He asked to be excused from the House and left waving his arm amid Liberal applause.

The odds against our success were a big 3 to 1

Earl K. Brownridge, President, American Motors (Canada) Limited, watches the three-millionth-and-first Rambler produced in North America roll off the Brampton, Ontario assembly line.

When we started in 1958, our competitors were too busy competing with each other to worry about you. We were different. We put you first. We still do. We always will. That's why we succeeded. That's why we stand out from the big 3. That's why, as far as we're concerned, there'll never be a big 4 in the car business—even if we become No. 1 in sales.

WHAT WAS WRONG

A few years back, chrome-loaded, gas-guzzling monsters roamed our highways. They sported fins, they were over-adorned with tasteless gimmicks. They were too big, too uneconomical.

They were not suited to everyone's needs. But if you wanted a new car, you had no choice. Other car manufacturers weren't concerned about you. We were.

WE GAVE YOU A CHOICE

We cut away the needless excesses of those days—excesses in size, in weight, in gimmicks, in clutter, in expense. We concentrated on the major function of a car: usefulness. We gave you the compact car.

HOW WE DID IT

We looked long and hard at areas others had sidestepped.

You were fed up with rattles and squeaks. We pioneered Single Unit Construction with Uniside to give you more solid construction and a longer-lasting body. The rattles and squeaks disappeared.

You were annoyed at the damage rust did to your car. We introduced Deep-Dip Rust-proofing, the world's best.

You were worried about faulty brakes. We offered you Double Safety Brakes, one of the most advanced braking systems available.

You could never get honest comfort. We designed the industry's most comfortable interiors with such exclusive features as *reclining seats and adjustable headrests.

You were tired of shovelling money down the drain for gas. We offered you engines with a sensible balance between horsepower and economy of operation.

WHAT HAPPENED

In doing all this—and more—we went our own way. It proved the right way. In just a few short years, over three million people turned their backs on other manufacturers and went our way, too.

WHAT WE'RE DOING NOW

We're not slowing down for a minute.

We will continue to offer you an alternate choice to the look-alike, think-alike philosophy of others.

We will continue to spend millions to test, to improve, to offer you the best-designed, longest-lasting cars you can buy.

We will continue to offer you engines with a sensible balance between horsepower and economy. On city street or highway, our range of 6 and V8 engines will easily meet all the driving demands you'll ever place upon them. They offer you the industry's best horsepower-to-weight ratios for brilliant, responsive performance.

We will continue to offer you more features, more value, more dependability.

WHAT THIS MEANS TO YOU

It means that, today, you don't have to go along with all the duplicates, the imitations, the look-alikes, the "junior editions."

When we started, we decided to go our own way. The odds were against us, a big 3 to 1. Some people would say that we've won.

We don't. We say that you've won.

R. Edney's Rink of Kingston Wins Corbin Gold Cup in Tourney Held on Monday

The 22nd annual Corbin Gold Cup Trophy tournament is a matter of history and although only forty rinks from across the Province participated on Monday it was one of the best ever staged by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club. The weather was delightful with no threat of rain, the greens were fast and the draws under the supervision of the general chairman, "Jerry" Hyde with Bruce Miller and William Wright assisting were excellently handled and the many games were run off in record time.

The visiting bowlers were officially welcomed by Mayor Jack Ellis and the welcome on the host club was extended by the president, Percy Graham. Both expressed the pleasure of having so many out-of-town bowlers on hand and hoped they would carry to their homes happy memories of their journey to the "Friendly City". The club house and the greens were suitably decorated for the occasion and there were many expressions of appreciation to the greens chairman, Doug Rowe and the greenskeeper Charles Matthews, for the excellent condition of the greens. During the day there was a large gallery following the play of the respective games and as usual there were some upsets, some "fantastic" shots made and through it all the best of fellowship prevailed.

The Corbin Gold Cup and the accompanying tranesitor radios, donated by the International Hardware Company were won by a Kingston rink of Eddie Dennison, Howard Jagges, Dick Edney and William Duncan Jr. Mr. Edney was the sponsor of the rink and this is the second time he has been the possessor of this beautiful trophy. He had a score of 25. The trophy was presented by the president of the club, Percy Graham, who is a member of the Hardware staff. In second place was a rink of Charles Bodle, Jim Black, Stan Brown with Neil Salkeld as skip from the Deloniis Club in Toronto with a score of 22 plus seven. Peter Weber, representative of the Calvert Distillery, made the presentation of the beautiful mahogany liquor cabinets.

STREETSVILLE RINK WINS

The third place in the tourney was captured by a rink of Jack Miller, Earl Albertson, Henry Pitchett with Harvey Andrew as skip of Streetsville. They were the winners of the Belle Cleaners Gold Trophy and the four Bar-B-Q's complete with electric spits. This rink had a score of 20 plus one. Fourth place went to a rink of Lloyd Taylor, Charles Wickens, Bill Holmes and Bert Taylor of Campbellford. This trophy was the Gordon Watkin Memorial trophy and was presented by Mrs. Joan Watkin, wife of the deceased president of the club. In fifth place was a pickup rink and called the International outfit from Stirling. They consisted Doug Rice Quoradale from Kingston, Jack Coutts from Trenton but of Stirling member Clarence Pitman with Ted Barnard as skip. This rink survived two tie games with wins and a small plus in their third game. They had a score of 15. They won the Deacon Jackets donated by the Deacon Shirt Company.

A rink of Bill Devlin, Charles Regis, Jack Muir with Jim Law as skip of Galt won the first two-game high score and received portable picnic tables presented by the Stephen Adamson Company. In second place in this category was a rink of Sam MacMillan, Ewart Carswell, Bob Gallagher with Gordon MacMillan as skip of Oshawa who received wooden cheese trays with knives donated by the O'Keefe Brewing Company.

High for the win was a Belleville Club rink of Howard Kelleher, George Fisher, Doug Rowe with Austin Watkin as skip and second was a ringer Dave "Wimpy" Reynolds, Roy Mann, Grant with Ed Lugtenburg as skip of Ottawa. They won the camper lights donated by the Stephen Licence Company while a rink of Owen Gray, Wilfred Price, Canniff Ashley with Bill Wright as skip from Belleville Club was high for no wins. This prize was donated by the Caraquet Packers. The quills of the several draws follow.

TO MEET AT SEA

COPENHAGEN (AP) — The Conference of European Churches avoided a diplomatic entanglement with the Danish government Monday over invitations from East Germany to attend a church congress here. It decided to hold the congress aboard an ocean liner in international waters. Denmark will not bring visas to residents of Communist East Germany unless the residents apply for them through the allied travel office in West Berlin. The East German government refuses to permit this.

ABC Reporter and Russian Agent Played Key Roles in Resolving 1962 Cuban Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The story of how a Soviet intelligence agent and an American reporter played key roles in resolving the 1962 Cuba missiles crisis has been told by a former state department intelligence chief.

The reporter was John A. Scali of American Broadcasting Company and formerly of The Associated Press. His unusual role in "very informal and unofficial" U.S.-Soviet exchanges was disclosed by Roger Hilsman in an article for Look magazine.

Hilsman was state department intelligence head during the "eyeball-to-eyeball" October 1962 confrontation between the two nuclear powers and thus was one of the inner strategists who knew, as he now reports, "how close we were to war".

Scali came into the crisis picture when the Washington-Moscow communications of more normal diplomatic times had broken down.

It started with an urgent telephone call to Scali, Friday, Oct. 26 from "a senior Soviet official"

IDENTIFIED AS 'MR. X'

Hilsman identified the Russian only as a "Mr. X" known to be head of Soviet intelligence in the United States and a man with direct channels to the Kremlin. (Other sources said the Russian has since left the Soviet Embassy.)

According to Hilsman:

President Kennedy had publicly demanded the removal of the Soviet offensive weapons from Cuba and had set up a quarantine of the island. Some Soviet ships headed for Cuba had turned back but work on the Russian missile sites there was going forward at full speed.

"In the Cuban crisis, two of the channels were probably declassified — the formal letters shuffling between president Kennedy and Premier Khrushchev and a set of communications through a very informal and unofficial channel."

"Mr. X" who had had lunch with Scali on previous occasions, asked on Friday afternoon that they have lunch right away. They met at a downtown restaurant and "Mr. X" went straight to the point.

He asked Scali to find out at once from "my friends" in the state department whether the United States would be interested in a Cuba crisis solution under which (1) Russia would remove its missiles; (2) United Nations inspectors were allowed to supervise the removal. If so — now would promise not to reintroduce missiles to Cuba and (4) the United States would publicly pledge not to invade Cuba.

OFFICIALS HAD DOUBTS

This was the outline of an approach which, unknowingly, led to a solution of the crisis, but some Kennedy administration officials had doubts at first about whether this was a real approach from the Kremlin.

Scali went to Hilsman with the proposal, then was called in to see State Secretary Dean Rusk at once.

Rusk told Scali that the "Mr. X" approach "was our first direct word that the Soviets might be thinking of a deal." He instructed Scali to tell "Mr. X" that the U.S. government "sees real possibilities" and suggested meeting at the United Nations in the UN, but "time is very urgent."

Scali met "Mr. X" with the answer, assuring the Russian only that it came from "very high sources."

"Mr. X" tried then to dicker on other points, suggesting there ought to be inspection of U.S. bases in Florida too. Scali turned down the idea of further conditions and terminated that time was important.

In the meantime, one of the famous Khrushchev letters to Kennedy had started to come in by cable. This one has never been made public, but it showed a willingness to negotiate.

That was Friday night. Saturday morning a Khrushchev message was broadcast that revealed on the communication of the night before. Moscow now was setting forth new conditions.

"This was the blackest hour of the crisis"—and U.S. strategists desperately sought a way to return to the more promising proposals of the day before. Rusk called Scali and told him to see "Mr. X" again to find out what had happened.

Scali and "Mr. X" met Saturday afternoon in a deserted hotel banquet hall. "Mr. X" changed his tune, just as the cabled messages from Moscow had reversed the Russian position.

Scali "exploded" and told the Russian "it was all a stinking doublecross." He said the United States was absolutely determined to get the missiles out of Cuba and time was running out.

The next development came from U.S. officials and arose from an idea by Attorney-General Robert Kennedy. The U.S. strategists decided to deal with the Friday signals from the Soviets, ignoring the unacceptable reversal put forth by the Kremlin Saturday.

SENT FORMAL REPLY

President Kennedy sent a formal reply to Khrushchev containing the substance of the Scali-"Mr. X" exchange and the Friday night cable. Just before nine o'clock Sunday morning Moscow radio came through with the word which meant the crisis had broken. Khrushchev announced a pull-out of the weapons.

Sunday night there was a last Scali-"Mr. X" meeting. The Russian agent thanked the American for the "real" solution that was "very valuable to the chairman (Khrushchev) in helping him make up his mind quickly."

Scali said Monday night that at the personal request of the president and the state secretary he had kept his role secret.

He stated he sought four times without success to get permission to tell the story. He said he did not know the circumstances under which Hilsman decided to write about it.

Hilsman now is a teacher at Columbia University.

lages, attacked government offices and police posts and a detention in the Lundazi area Monday, a government spokesman said. Two of the attackers were Negro villagers. Two Indian families and a Negro policeman were killed, the spokesman said.

Tourists were urged to leave the area by 10 miles from the border with Malawi (formerly Nyasaland). The government airlifted additional troops to Lundazi to pursue the raiders. It also sent planes to drop leaflets calling for peace.

Some 1,200 refugees flooded into Lundazi. Hundreds more sought refuge at the White Fathers' Mulanga mission, south of Chinsali. The crowding there resulted in outbreaks of smallpox, typhoid and dysentery and the mission reports it is low on medical supplies and food.

Government officials fear further attacks on the area settlers, where most of the people support Kaunda's ruling United National Independence Party. The Lumpas say the party is persecuting them.

Africa, a Negro in her 60s who was raised in a strict Church of Scotland mission, is believed to have some 20,000 followers.

13 Jamaican Cadets Honor Independence

PICTON (Staff) — A colorful ceremony took place Monday evening in the Men's Mess at Camp Picton when the 13 Jamaican cadets under training here joined with their Canadian counterparts to celebrate the Jamaican independence. About 500 Canadian Army Cadets of the cadet trades training camp also participated in the event. Cpl. D. E. Beek gave the Jamaican Pledge and a cake, beautifully decorated with a replica of the Royal Canadian Army Cadet Badge was presented to the Jamaican cadets by commanding officer of the Trades Training Camp, Lt. Col. David Veitch, RCE, Kingston.

Highlight of the ceremony was the cutting of a cake symbolic of the independence of Jamaica. The cake was decorated with an excellent replica of the Jamaican flag and two burning candles signified Jamaica's two years of independence. The cake was cut by Jamaican and Canadian cadets, Cpt. D. E. Beek of Kingston, Jamaica, and Cadet Sgt. Daniel Clarke of the Queen's Own Rifles Cadet Corps, Toronto. The Jamaican flag displayed on the cake consists of three colors, gold, green and black. The colors are signified by the motto "Hardships there are but the land is green and the sun is shining." Their coat of arms bears the inscription "out of many—one people." The Jamaican cadets arrived at RCAF Station Trenton on July 31st, they will be based at Camp Picton for approximately five weeks.

SPACE CONGESTED

Picton's inner harbor was the scene of much activity Sunday evening when pleasure cruisers vied for space with the SS Coaltax, which docked at Hepburn Bros. dock. Water space for sometime was a bit congested as the large ship slowly moved into the dock to unload her cargo of coal. Picton's harbor in this area is not wide and the ship contrasted with the smaller pleasure craft and appeared huge in comparison with the surrounding landscape and buildings. It is expected the ship will leave port on Tuesday.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, TUESDAY, AUGUST 4, 1964

Three Killed, Many Taken To Hospital in Rash of Accidents Over Weekend

Holiday Tragedy Victims

These were the victims in local accidents during holiday weekend:

Mrs. Doris Olivere, 25, Belleville, fatally injured in a two-car crash at Canniton Road and College Street, Saturday night.

Allan Tanner, 20, native of Stirling, whose car hit a pole on Highway 14, north of Stirling, Saturday.

Mrs. Norma Sayles, 32, Berrien Springs, Michigan, in a two-car crash at Moira Lake Sunday night.

Before it was over, three people were dead a full score injured and thousands of dollars damage in property in a succession of violent mishaps.

The closest call in a running series of near-escapes came on water—when a cabin cruiser blew up Sunday night at Presqu'ile, sending four people to hospital.

Traffic accidents took three lives — those of a Belleville woman, a woman tourist from the United States and a young Stirling man.

First most serious mishap of the black weekend record occurred after midnight Saturday in Belleville when two cars crashed at the intersection of Canniton Road and College Street.

Fatally injured was Mrs. Doris Olivere, 25, of 539 East Bridge Street, a passenger in a station wagon driven by her husband, Dean, 29. The couple were returning from a dance with Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Vecsey, 13 Carl Street, when their vehicle collided with a car driven by Jack Willis, 27, of 60 Byron Street.

Firemen were called to douse the flames in the Olivere vehicle, while police fretted about the injured—ambulances were delayed only yards from the scene by a freight train on the Canniton Road CNR level crossing.

DIES IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Olivere died in Belleville General Hospital Monday morning from severe head injuries. Her husband suffered chest and knee injuries.

Others injured were: Mr. Willis, head injuries; Mrs. Willis fractured arm, leg and head cuts; Mr. and Mrs. Vecsey, face and head lacerations.

Both vehicles were wrecked.

The second weekend victim was 20-year-old Allan Tanner, native of Stirling, lately living in Brampton. He died in the Belleville General Hospital hours after his car skidded on damp pavement on Highway 14, two miles north of Stirling and struck a telephone pole.

Sunday also brought a fresh crop of serious accidents — the worst on a hairpin bend at Moira Lake on the Madoc county road.

A grinding head-on crash sent two ambulances racing to the scene from Belleville to pick up the six people hurt—two of them American tourists, and four Smithfield residents.

One of the Americans, Mrs. Norma Sayles, 32, of Berrien Springs, Mich., was hospitalized in critical condition with head, rib and neck injuries. She died Tuesday morning.

Also injured, but reported in good condition, were her husband, Norman, 33; James Frank George, 65, driver of the second car; his wife, Catherine, 62; Bert Gillings, 51, and his wife, Leah, 49.

THREE TO HOSPITAL

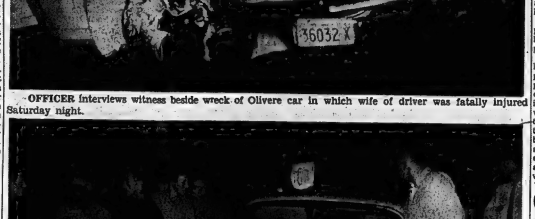
Another two-car crash Sunday—this time in Belleville—sent three people to hospital.

Injured were Bila Pollock, 75 Victoria Avenue, fractured pelvis and scalp lacerations; her wife, Ida, fractured ribs and face cuts, and Wilfred Whitehead, 20, R.R. 2, Trenton, cuts and bruises.

The accident occurred when Mrs. Pollock car swerved on Victoria Avenue hill collided with Whitehead's automobile, travelling north on Pinnacle St. Both vehicles veered side by side into the sidewalk, throwing Mr. Pollock to the road and jamming him between the automobiles.

Again Sunday afternoon two youths were slightly injured when a motorcycle spun out of control on a curve on Point Anne lane. Treated for cuts and bruises were David Cornett Moore, 20, of 71 Goldfish and a passenger, Richard Adam, 17, of 25 North Front St.

A second motorcycle accident on Highway 14 two miles north of Foxboro Sunday night also sent two riders to hospital.



Kernel Langman, 17, of Carrying Place, received a broken leg when thrown from the pillion when the machine collided with a pickup truck driven by Corstiaan Boers, R.R. 1, Troy. Owner of the motorcycle, Charles Bedford, 18, of Belleville, was treated for cuts and bruises.

LIONESS KILLS BOY

BIARRITZ (AP)—A lioness escaped from a travelling circus near this French resort Saturday night, killed a 12-year-old boy and terrorized an area crowded with vacationers for three hours before she was killed by police. The animal broke out of its cage after a furious fight with two other lionesses caused the iron bars to become unhinged. It dashed to freedom in an area near French National Route 10, a favorite location for summer vacation

THREE PEOPLE were hurt when these two cars crashed at Victoria Avenue — Pinnacle Street intersection Sunday — one more mishap in a holiday weekend of traffic accidents.

One of Three Escapees Recaptured

KINGSTON (CP)—One of a trio of prisoners who escaped from the Joyceville institution's farm annex during a baseball game Sunday night was picked up early today 10 miles north of here.

Carl Robertson, 34, of Hamilton and Winnipeg was captured after patrols with dogs worked through the densely wooded area north of the camp. He was serving a three-year sentence for forgery and false pretences.

Still at large are Roy Ritza, 27, of Toronto, sentenced to two years for auto theft and William J. Knight, 25, of Chatham, who was sentenced to two years for breaking and entering. All three had about seven months of their terms left to serve.

Greek-Cypriot Patrol Boat Fires at Turks

NICOSIA (AP)—A Greek-Cypriot patrol boat fired eight shots Monday night at several small boats believed to be Turkish-Cypriot, the United Nations reported today. It was the first naval engagement of the seven-month land war.

The action took place in Turkish - held Kokkina Harbor on the northwest coast. There was no announcement of casualties and no word that the Greek-Cypriot fire was returned.

Kokkina is the principal Turkish village in a 10-mile-long coastal enclave, the only stretch of coast under Turkish-Cypriot control. The Greek-Cypriots claim men and arms from Turkey have been landed there.

Meanwhile, Nicosia and the area north of the capital resounded with dozens of shots during the night. The most tense area now is in Dhikomo, a village about 10 miles north of Nicosia, where Greek- and Turkish-Cypriot fighters have been banging away for the last four days.

Some shooting was heard in the Kyrenia Mountains along the northern coast and the UN reported Canadian troops pulled out of the Turkish-Cypriot village of Aghirda and Keumurji at the Turks' request.

No reason was given by the UN, but Greek-Cypriot newspapers claimed the Turks were upset when the Canadians had halted armed reinforcements from moving into Kyrenia positions. There was no immediate comment from the Turks.

UN officials consider the military situation on the island potentially dangerous. The peace force commander, Indian Gen C. S. Thimayya, in an hour-long talk with President Makarios Monday, reviews major problems including the military buildup and freedom of movement for UN troops.

ACTRESS IN HOSPITAL

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Specialists in respiratory ailments were called in Monday to examine actress Joan Crawford, 56. She has been in hospital since Friday with what hospital officials called a recurrence of pneumonia. Cedars of Lebanon Hospital describes her condition as good.

Army Worm Invasion Appears Over

The army worms are marching on.

At least the peak of this year's invasion of army worms in the Bay of Quinte district is apparently passed and no further serious outbreak is expected.

During the past several weeks quite a number of reports of army worms were received by the agricultural office in Stirling, but farmers were able to control the worms by spraying.

Fireman Has 'Lid Flipped'

City firemen were called to the scene of a grass fire on Station Street late last night on the old Ayrhart Lumber property.

A search in the area failed to turn up the hat. The fire department has asked that anyone having picked up this hat, that they return it to either fire station.

Quebec, Ont. Good Neighbors Says Robarts

JASPER, Alta. (CP)—Quebec and Ontario are good neighbors despite having some differences of opinion, Premier Robarts of Ontario said Monday.

The premier, here for the fifth annual premiers' conference, said in reply to a question that he does not subscribe to the idea of two nations.

He added he believes Canadian unity is strong and the current conference is an example of that unity.

Hail Robarts Plan to Make Private Pensions Portable Throughout All of Canada

JASPER, Alta. (CP)—A suggestion by Premier Robarts of Ontario to stage an interprovincial conference of technical experts aimed at bringing legislation on private pension plans into a closer alignment was hailed by delegates at the fifth premiers' conference.

Mr. Robarts said Monday such a conference was unlikely to result in "uniformity of legislation, but it certainly would help bring a closer set of regulations that will make portability a reality." He said anything nearing portability would make it easier for a Canadian to work in any place in Canada and take his pension with him.

"If we can achieve national portability of pensions we will have achieved something of important for the labor force."

Premier Lesage of Quebec hailed the principle of portable pensions and "strongly supported" the suggestion that a conference be held by Ontario in early October to which the various provinces could send technical delegates. He said Ontario, Saskatchewan and Quebec now had portability of civil service pensions with the federal government and Quebec also had portable pensions involving four universities.

Ontario adopted a portable pension act to regulate private pensions within the province in 1963. It is scheduled to go into effect Jan. 1.

APPROVE PRINCIPLE

Mr. Lesage said Quebec's legislature has approved the principle of such legislation and his government wanted to encourage portability with Ontario because there was a large exchange of workers between the two provinces.

The premiers generally accepted that uniformity was desirable in this field once the principle was established and the idea of an exploratory meeting in Toronto this fall was "unanimously agreed upon," said Premier E. C. Manning of Alberta, chairman of the conference.

Mr Manning emphasized, as did other premiers, that the Ontario conference would have no connection with the proposed federal pension plan. That will be the topic of a federal-provincial conference to be called by Prime Minister Pearson.

Mr. Manning added that just who would attend the meeting would be left to Premier Robarts and would be decided when invitations were extended.

Communist-Backed Rebels Drive Legal Government From Sixth of the Congo

By ROBIN MANNOCK

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP)—Charged with witch-doctors brew, Communist-backed rebel warriors have driven legal government from a sixth of The Congo. They threaten to split the former Belgian colony into warring factions.

Each new day brings frightening news to Leopoldville, capital of Premier Moise Tshombe's reconciliation government:

1. Towns in the east are falling without a fight to howling warriors armed with spears, arrows and a few captured modern weapons.

2. Rebels menace the northern hub city of Stanleyville and the big army base at Kamina in North Katanga province.

3. Rebels have crossed the Congo River from the neighboring Congo Republic Brazzaville and have reached a point 102 miles from this capital, vowing to seize it.

4. Rebels control the towns of Mushie and Kwamouth, imperiling traffic on the Kasai River, the key export route from Katanga province's copper.

Tshombe is in a race against time. Scarcely three weeks after taking office, he must find ways to turning the warriors back before the country collapses into anarchy.

APPEALS TO PEOPLE

In most rebel areas, local tribesmen claim that administrators often did little more than line their own pockets. Tshombe has tackled this charge vigorously. In eight days of barnstorming around the eastern Congo, he appealed directly to the people, over the heads of the politicians.

Promising a new deal, Tshombe was given delirious welcomes even in Stanleyville, where the people once said he was responsible for the 1961 murder of leftist Patrice Lumumba, The Congo's first premier.

But Tshombe's biggest headache is the army, born of the July, 1960, mutiny which sent the country into chaos only seven days after independence. The soldier has no stomach for fighting rebels who charge in the belief their magic "dawa" (medicine) turns bullets into water.

Johnson Won't Depend On Kennedy for Election

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson appears to have turned the corner in a politically touchy manoeuvre to substitute his own brand for the Kennedy label on his administration.

The president's action last week in ruling Attorney-General Robert F. Kennedy and several others out of consideration for the party vice-presidential nomination was viewed generally as culminating seven months of efforts in this direction.

The feeling among politicians was that Johnson would be well satisfied to have history say he helped get the late John F. Kennedy elected but would not like to have it recorded that he had to depend on the Kennedy name in his own elective try for the presidency. That is because Johnson well think he decided long ago against taking Kennedy on the ticket with him.

They recalled the successful White House activity in February and early March of 1960 when that the attorney-general might roll up more write-in votes for Kennedy than the latter received in the March New Hampshire primary.

HAS GOOD RECORD

Johnson's strategy has been to compile a record in Congress and the executive actions which would convince Democratic liberals and independent voters he could be relied upon to push progressive programs.

He seems to have become convinced that he has achieved that objective. Civil rights organizations have applauded his and on that vital issue. Organized labor endorsements have been rolling in. White House surveys indicate that Johnson has attained a solid position in the industrialized northern states. Thus in a gust the president does not need Kennedy to carry the ticket in that area, as he might have last December.

Beyond that, the attorney-general has political liabilities Johnson is not eager to take aboard. Because of his civil rights enforcement activities Kennedy would provide a built-in drag on the ticket in the South, should he not going to let the South go by default to Republican presidential nominee Barry Goldwater.

LABOR LEADER DIES

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Frank Darling, 61, known as the second labor leader to whom movement, died Monday in Houston, Tex. He was president of the 30 000-member, local 1031, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Darling came to be known as Labor's Siegfried through his use of huge spectacles and professional entertainers in his fight against Communist and hoodlum infiltration.

Ontario Country Club SPORTS

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Probably the "happiest fellas" in the city's sports domain last night were Georgie O'Brien of the Bay of Quinte Country Club, his "right bower," Val Smith and the committees who helped organize and conduct the club's first Festival of Golf.

The weather man held one of the starring roles, dispersing the cloud curtain that palled the course Saturday and Sunday and burgeoning into perfect golfing weather for the feature events of the four-tournament festival.

A delighted Val Smith told the president—and he summed it up correctly—"They said we couldn't do it—but we did."

President O'Brien said in a pre-awards address, "Thanks to the co-operation of club membership, visiting amateurs and professionals the club's first Festival of Golf was a tremendous success. Four hundred golfers participated in what was an all-round event."

He paid special tribute to the firms of the city who generously donated cash gifts.

The distaff side of the club joined hands with the mere males of the species in an all-out co-operative effort. They manned refreshment concessions, helped with scoring and other "chores" and in general made a fine contribution to the success of the Festival.

If there were any pre-tournament misgivings they were washed out immediately the festival got under way. And if there had been any tremors of the terrain they would not have been out of place since for the first time in the club's history some 400 golfers trod the greens and fairways.

The "cream of the festival coffee" made itself apparent when six top professionals entered the pro tourney a few hours before it got under way.

Bob Panasiuk, and others on their way from the Canadian Open in Montreal decided to stop off at the Bay of Quinte and quest some of the $1,250 prize money.

Their appearance was definitely a feather in the cap of club pro George Balazs whose "salesmanship" was responsible for the greater majority of Ontario's top professionals making their appearance here.

Perhaps the magnetism of the pros had something to do with it, but not all. Some 340 amateurs of the district and province engaged in highly competitive golf. To these people who most of the time are denied the spotlight of publicity goes the club accolade. They were just as important to the success of the Festival as the chief workers of the mended ranks.

The Festival was, as George O'Brien said, a tremendous success. The sceptics have had their answer and the inaugural four-tournament of 1964 has laid the foundation of similar golf functions of the future and raised the tournament status of the Bay of Quinte Country Club to a higher plateau.

President O'Brien and his hard-working committees are in line for a well-deserved pat on the back. They "took a chance" and came through handsomely.

THE LAWN BOWLERS

Meanwhile at the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club the 22nd annual renewal of the Corbin Gold Trophy Tournament was rated by officials and bowlers as the best in years.

Forty rinks took part and the tournament with its four gold trophies up for competition produced the finest competitive bowling in many years.

Chairman Gerald Hyde and his committee did an excellent job in arranging and handling the tournament and although a Belleville rink failed to cop the awards they were highly satisfied with the tournament outcome.

Dick Edney of Kingston won the "Corbin" for the second time, with Neil Salkeld of Daytone, taking home the Calvert Trophy. Harvey Andrew of Streetsville won the Belle Cleaners Gold Trophy in the first year of competition while Bert Taylor of Campbellford won the Wakitin Memorial Gold Trophy in its inaugural year.

Visiting bowlers were high in their praise of the excellence of the greens, the tournament as a whole and the now famous Belleville hospitality.

Key Hits Beat Giants 3-2

Bucs' Bonus Baileys Wields Big Bat

By Mike Rathet
Associated Press Sports Writer

Bob Bailey, a high-priced flop in 1963, looks like a good bet for sophomore of the year in 1964.

The $100,000 baby who batted a dismal .228 last season, Bailey continued his heavy hitting Monday night by slamming a key triple in the eighth inning and a game-winning single, in the ninth that gave Pittsburgh Pirates a 3-2 victory over San Francisco Giants.

Only two other games were played Monday, both in the American League. Baltimore Orioles moved within a percentage point of the leading New York Yankees as Milt Pappas blanked Los Angeles Angels 7-0 and Cleveland Indians defeated Washington Senators 4-2.

RAINED OUT

Philadelphia Phillies and Los Angeles Dodgers were rained out in the other National League game scheduled.

Bailey's night activity followed a lively weekend in both leagues. Chicago White Sox closed in on the American League leaders Sunday with 2-1 and 5-1 victories over Washington while Cleveland downed Detroit Tigers 6-1 and 2-1. The Yankees split a pair of Minnesota Twins 2-0, Baltimore edged Kansas City Athletics 8-7 and Boston Red Sox defeated Los Angeles 2-1.

On Saturday the White Sox slipped Washington 8-3, Detroit shaded Cleveland 2-1, New York topped Minnesota 6-4, Baltimore defeated Kansas City 5-3 and the Angels whipped Boston 4-1.

Houston Colts split the New York Mets, winning 9-7 and losing 4-2 in the National League's only Sunday doubleheader. St. Louis Cardinals shaded Pittsburgh 2-1 and the Dodgers blanked the Phillies 4-0.

On Saturday the Phillies clobbered the Dodgers 10-6, the Reds outslugged the Cards 6-5, Milwaukee hammered Chicago 8-4, Pittsburgh tripped the Giants 9-1 and the Mets defeated Houston 3-2.

The two hits Monday lifted Bailey's average to .240 and boosted the Pirates into third place in the tight National League pennant struggle, 4½ games behind the leading Phillies and 2½ behind the Giants.

A vital offensive weapon for the Pirates' bid to duplicate their 1960 pennant, Bailey has always spoken freely about the pressure resulting from the gigantic bonus and his meagre accomplishments as a rookie last year when the Pirates nosedived to eighth place.

"I've forgotten about the money pretty much," said the 23-year-old third baseman.

"That's in the past. I used to think about it a lot. I didn't want to be the big failure. I hit 26 home runs at Columbus and that turned my head.

BEAT MYSELF

"If thought I would be able to cope with the major leagues. I thought I would be able to do the job. But I beat myself. The club was going bad and I felt I could help the club by hitting the ball out of the park.

"That's where I fouled up. I just should have swung at the ball by hit .228, you have to hit 30 home runs. Maybe 60."

Bailey didn't hit 60 home runs. He hit 12. This year he has six and six extra-base points on his batting average.

Pappas, bringing his record to 10-5, limited the Angels to six eight hits and did not allow a runner past second base. While he was getting his shutout, Angeles for the third time this season, the Orioles pounded Bo Belinsky and four successors for 13 hits.

The Indians broke a 2-2 tie against the Senators in the fourth when Chico Salmon doubled, Vic Davalillo beat out an infield hit and Billy Moran followed with a sacrifice fly. Davalillo and Dick Howser each collected three hits in a 14-hit attack.

Nearly 500 Wager $6,256

Driving Club Race Meet

A sprinkle of rain, the threat of more and the long holiday weekend took a slight attendance toll at the Quinte Driving Club's raceway meet Saturday night.

At that the directors were satisfied with the nearly 500 patrons who sent $6,256 through the pari-mutuels windows.

The last-minute scratch of Tester Two in the featured 4th and eight heats reduced the field to a four-horse affair with no show prices paid.

Sunday May Gratton finished second and place for top money. Hal's Pense winning the 4th event and placing third in the second race with Jackson winning the second after a place spot first.

Chico Hall took first and second in the first race events with Irene Wann winning the second to pay $19.10 top price of the night.

Harriet Corporal led the way in the first heat of the third race nosing out Sandy MacDuff and Red Gun to pay $18.70.

Sandy MacDuff came back to win the second heat ahead of Atomic Ache and Double Star.

Backers of Irene Wann did well in the fifth race collecting $19.10 on the first winner and $20.10 on the quinella.

Directors announced there will be no meet on August 15th due to Belleville Fair preparations. The August 22 meet will go as scheduled.

Wins By Two Strokes

Cox Nagle Nips Palmer In Open

In fact, Arnie is losing ground.

Nagle, a 43-year-old Australian with powderpuff drives and pinpoint irons, first outraced Palmer in the 1960 British Open when he beat golf's master by a stroke.

He outran him again Sunday, slashing four strokes off Montreal Pinegrove's par 71 to win the $50,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship with a 72-hole total of 277. Palmer, despite his patented Hollywood finish, was two shots behind this time.

"This fellow has got in my way before," Palmer told a presentation ceremony that awarded Nagle $7,500 for his first North American tournament win and Arnie $4,000 for his fourth second-place finish in seven.

UNUSUAL WIN

"This is unusual for me," Nagle said. "I usually shoot over the tees but fairly straight. I play a steady game. But this is a tough course. It's not made for me.

"And I didn't really have any expecting. I've played the first four holes and drove on the fifth on Wednesday but that afternoon I was five or six strokes over par after those four holes."

That's in effect, practiced on the first 36 holes with scores of 73 and 71, but blazed home on the second nine with matching 35s and about an 80-80 in the final round. It was this year's British Open to climax his first season of a "disgusting" period of golf.

Nagle went into the final round one stroke behind Palmer, Bill Collins of Grosse Isle, Mich., and Peter Butler, Andrews, Ill. Firing birdies on the second, fifth and sixth holes, he overtook the leaders and began setting his own pace.

Palmer, the gallery favorite with crowds of 4000 following him, about the 7,000-yard Pinegrove course, stumbled along with pulled shots and putts that most put himself right out of contention.

He missed seven putts of four teen or less but climbed right back into the big money with an amazing finish.

He knocked in a 15-footer on the 16th for a birdie, launched a second shot to within three feet of the pin on 17 and dropped the 18-footer bird, and almost soared another on the 18th but missed a seven-foot putt.

Collins, winner first tournament victory was the 1955 Canadian Open, wound up with a 280 total, one stroke behind for second. Floyd earned $3,300 and Dan Sikes Jr. of Ponte Vedra, Fla., picked up $2,800 for fourth.

Five players were tied at 282 for fifth place. Jack Nicklaus, Jay Hebert, Gary Player, Collins and Billy Casper each $2,080. Another three shots back was Bob Verwey of South Africa.

Nagle's Canadian was Toronto's Moe Norman, 289 for 10th but Canada still retained one honor — Ken Venturi of Toronto finished as the top amateur with 296.

The first round leader, Gibby Gilbert shot a 79 to wind up at 294 and take $150. He still is better than last year's first starter, Ed Moehling, who was tied last at the end of 72 holes.

Nagle's game was excellent. He didn't have one three-putt green on the final day and missed only two greens in the last 36 holes. He dropped two putts for birdie out and three on the back nine.

Three of his five birdies were on par-three holes, substantiating his argument that his irons are accurate and his woods weak.

"I used to hit long drives years ago," he quipped, "but I couldn't keep them on the fairway."

Roughies Defeat Stamps

Their opponents Monday night were the same Saskatchewan Roughriders who overcame a 26-point deficit last November to knock the Stamps out of the WFC playoffs in the second game of their two-game, total-point semi-final.

The statistics weren't as spectacular this time but the Riders got the jump again with a rally hat gave them a 18-4 decision after trailing 4-0 at half-time.

A crowd of 18,500 saw former Calgary player Ed Buchanan romp 62 yards for a spectacular Saskatchewan touchdown. It came six plays after an 11-yard touchdown rush by Roughies' fullback George Reed. Jerry Janes converted both. Saskatchewan's lifth point was a 42-yard single by Martin Fabi in the fourth quarter.

Larry Robinson scored all Calgary's points. His field goal attempt went wide for a single at the 20 following quarter and he made good on a second field goal attempt from 42 yards out four minutes later.

BUCHANAN STARS

Roughriders' most effective play turned out to be a pitchout extension to Buchanan. The first three times Riders tried it they went for gains of 34, 10 and 26 yards.

Stampeders started out with their new 4-3-3 defence, but scrapped it late in the game in a vain attempt to stop Roughriders' ground attack.

Planes Win Over Read 7-1

In South Hastings League action last night Planes walloped Read seven to one.

Don Dafoe pitched the victory with a fine two hitter. The losers Frank Farrow, who was tagged for 11 hits.

Planes scored 2 runs in the third, 3 in the fourth, one in the seventh and one in the eighth.

For Planes the big guns were Don Forsythe and Ross Parks, who each collected one double and two singles. With one bagger for Planes were Ron Urch, Don Dafoe, Hugh Petrie, Ken Forsythe and Len Harvey.

Dutchmen Defeats Egyptian

BORDEN, P.E.I. (CP) — A Dutch school teacher Saturday won the second annual Northumberland Strait swim from Cape Tormentine, N.B., to Borden in a record time of six hours, 49 minutes.

Herman Willemse of Utrecht, Holland, was well ahead of 12 other competitors in the race for first-place money of $1,200. He clipped 23 minutes off the previous record set last year. Nine-mile course established last year by John Lacoursiere of Montreal.

Lacoursiere did not compete in the swim.

An Egyptian army major-Abdel Latif Abou-Heif—finished second with a time of seven hours and seven minutes. He picked up $900 prize money.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very satisfying improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among those case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of 20 years' standing. And most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which coats the helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

400 Golfers Take Part In Festival

Is Tremendous Success

By GEORGE H. CARVER
Sports Editor

Four par-shredding scores climaxed a highly successful four-tournament Festival of Golf at the Bay of Quinte Country Club over the Civic Holiday weekend.

In the pro tourney Frank Whibley of Westmount turned back the threats of Bob Panasiuk, Windsor, and Moe Norman of Pleasure Park, with a brilliant four-under par 67.

Betty Ingram and Val Smith teamed to take the Mixed Two-Ball title from a field of 62 couples with a low gross score of 79. Helen Smith and Art Bridge won the low net, carding an 82.

Roger Ling, one of the promising younger golfers fired a brilliant 75 to win the low gross in "B" flight. W. Finn, RCAF, took the low gross title in "C" flight with an 88.

400 TAKE PART

Some 400 golfers including 53 of the top professionals trod the greens and fairways of a well-conditioned course while a gallery of over 1,000 followed the links fortunes of the pros.

Whibley who pocketed first prize money of $350 of the $1,200 purse shot a sparkling 34 on the first nine and followed with a 33.

Bob Panasiuk set the gallery agog with a front-nine 32 and under par 32 and finished with a 34 to post his 68 and $228 prize money.

Ken Duggan of Cedarbrae, Wilf Homenuk and Alvie Thompson of Whitevale shot one-under-par 70's to share third prize money of $132 each

I. Davis of Burlington carded a 72 to take fifth money of $40 while Tommy Nichols, Guelph; Stan Kolar, Chaudiere and Bruce Murray of St. Kitts turned in a 73 to split last money prize.

Not that it needed it but the Festival took a well-deserved shot in the arm when cash prize as Alvie Thompson and Bob Panasiuk and two others turned up as last-minute entries. Al Balding phoned to say he would enter but time would not permit.

Top professional were enthusiastic over the country club course. Bob Panasiuk said it was one of the best courses he had played stressing the fine conditions of the greens.

While it remains to be seen if Toronto and other eastern points brilliant sunshine farewell the inaugural Festival of Golf. President George O'Brien and his trusty aid Val Smith were enthusiastic over the outcome.

The large gallery was well-behaved with the majority favoring the fortunes of Norman and Panasiuk. Thompson and Whibley had their share.

Gary Bowerman making his first visit to his native course from the Coast got off to a steadied after a first bole score and came home with a creditable 76.

Yang Wins Decathlon Title

By JERRY GLADMAN

TORONTO (CP)—An easy victory for C. K. Yang, the world champion, in the decathlon and a mild upset in the women's pentathlon have been offered as evidence in the selection committee as a result of the two-day Canadian Olympic trials in this city.

Yang, who will represent the Republic of China at the Olympic games in Tokyo next October, surpassed Bill Gairdner of Toronto, his nearest Canadian competitor, by more than 1,000 points in the decathalon when the grueling 10-event competition ended Saturday.

The winning total of 8,067 points compared with the world record of 8,334 set by the 24-year-old Formosan at Walnut, Calif., last year and also fell short of the Olympic record of 8,392 with which Rafer Johnson of the United States edged Yang in the 1960 games at Rome.

Gairdner, a 23-year-old member of the Don Mills Track Club, was second with 7,030 points, exceeding the Canadian Olympic standard of 7,000 as well as the Commonwealth record of 6,912 set by Curbachan Singh of India in 1962 and Gairdner's personal best of 6,857.

JINS PENTATHLON

Dianne Gerace of Trail, B.C., whose main claim to a place on the Olympic team rests on her high-jumping ability, won the pentathlon with a total of 4,716 points, upsetting Jenny Wingerson of Toronto, the favorite, who scored 4,549. Both surpassed the Olympic standard of 4,500.

Miss Gerace and Miss Wingerson, Canada's best 80 - metre hurdler, will be the most likely candidates for the Canadian team, along with Gairdner and Gerry Moss of Trail, third in the decathlon with 6,695 points.

Jim Fraser of St. Lambert finished fourth in the decathlon with 4,521 points, followed by Bill Abbs of Kingston at 4,951.

Yang, whose best events are the pole vault, which he won with a jump of 15 feet six inches, and the broad (or long) jump, in which he triumphed with a leap or 21 feet 11 inches, took seven of the 10 events.

Gairdner captured the three remaining events, including the 1,500 metres which he needed to break 7,000 points. The pressure was on him in that final event as he knew he had to run it in 4.31 to hit the standard. He finished in 4:28.3.

Miss Gerace won only two events in the decathlon — the broad jump and the high jump — but her margin of victory in the latter enabled her to hold off the win. She holds the world indoor record of five feet nine inches for the high jump set in March at Cleveland. She won the competition Saturday with 5-8. Jenny dropped out at 4-11.

Hornung Taylor Back Again

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—One of U.S. pro football's most awesome offensive duos—Paul Hornung and Jimmy Taylor—team up for the first time in nearly 18 years Saturday night in Tulane Stadium.

For Hornung, the National Football League exhibition clash between his Green Bay Packers and St. Louis Cardinals will be his comeback to the pro ranks after a year's banishment.

Hornung, the "golden boy" of the gridiron, was suspended for a year after he admitted he had bet on NFL games—including his own Packers.

The exhibition tilt here is the first of two pre-season affairs that David Dreyfus and his New Orleans Pro Football Club, incorporated have lined up in an effort to woo a franchise for this city.

The other comes Sept. 5, between the NFL champion Chicago Bears and Dallas Cowboys.

Taylor, who with Hornung combined for 186 points two years ago when the Packers won the NFL title, says he's delighted to have halfback Hornung back.

TI-CATS CUT EDGE

HAMILTON (CP)—Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Eastern Football Conference cut rookie import quarterback Junior Ridge during the weekend to reduce their roster to the required 18 Canadians and 19 imports. Only Canadian among the five newcomers the Grey Cup winners is halfback John Sloan of Grimsby, Ont., a graduate of the University of Buffalo.

Leafs Win Second Twin Bill

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The downtrodden Atlanta Crackers, of all people, have blown the whistle on Syracuse Chiefs as the Chiefs were set to run away from their International League opposition.

The last place Crackers squeezed out a 4-3 victory over the Chiefs Monday night, halting the Chiefs' winning streak at six and enabling Jacksonville Suns to crawl back within a game of the top team as they topped Rochester Red Wings by the same score.

In the only other activity scheduled, Toronto Maple Leafs swept their second doubleheader in as many days against Columbus Jets winning 3-2 and 2-1 victories on Jim Mahoney's three hit pitching left fielder for an indefinite period in the process. Mahoney damaged his shoulder when he crashed into the wall while chasing a line drive.

The Chiefs took over first place from Jacksonville during the weekend by completing a sweep of their five-game series against the Suns, downing them 10-5 in Saturday's single game and 6-4 and 5- 1in Sunday's doubleheader.

END WINNING STREAK

Richmond Virginians halted Buffalo's 10 - game winning streak with a 3-2 victory Sunday and downed the Bisons 6-2 and 3-0 Sunday. Rochester split with Buffalo, losing 4-3 and winning 3-1, after winning Saturday's single game 5-3 and Toronto lost to Columbus 2-1 in 11 innings 3-1, after winning Saturday 5-1 and 5-4.

Net Stars Meet Best In World

MONTREAL (CP) — Three tennis buffs from Montreal have been granted the dubious distinction of facing the world's best amateurs in the Canadian open tennis championships. ...

Allan Barshaw, who doubles as publicity man for the tournament, was given the toughest task Monday when the draw sent him against Australia's Roy Emerson in the first round of the singles matches. Raynald Daoust was assigned to Fred Stolle. Emerson's Davis Cup partner, and Richard Evans drew top-ranked Mexican Rafael Osuna.

Francois Godbout of Waterloo, Que., quickly disposed of Luc Charron of Montreal 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 in first-round play Monday. Fellow Davis Cuppers Reider Getz of Vancouver and Montreal's Keith Carpenter also had no difficulty.

Getz knocked off 16-year-old Tom Gavin of Montreal 6-0, 6-2, 6-0 while Carpenter took Andre Cote of Montreal to four sets—6-4, 6-8, 6-2, 6-3.

US Rowing Championship
Vespers Defeat St. Kitts

NEW YORK (CP) — Vesper Boat Club of Philadelphia snatched the U.S. national rowing championships from St. Catharines Rowing Club Sunday, even though the Canadians put on one of their best showings ever at this regatta.

The Vespers raced over the 2,000-metre (about 1¼ miles) Olympic distance at Orchard Beach lagoon in three first place finishes. They won more races than they had since they began competing in the U.S. championships in the late 1940s.

However, they failed to get enough shells across the finish line in second, third and fourth places and finished behind Vesper and Detroit in the team standings.

Under the complicated formula used to decide the regatta winners, Vesper had 120.20 points, Detroit 77.75 and St. Catharines 74.50.

New York Athletic Club was fourth with 72, followed by West Side of Buffalo with 70. Penn Athletic Club with 57.75 and Harvard University with 47.42.

40 CLUBS COMPETED.

Thirty-clubs and about 500 oarsmen and scullers competed in the three-day regatta in which Detroit was the defending champion.

Vesper won four events—pair with coxswain, 150-pound-quadruple sculls, double sculls and pair without coxswain.

Detroit took the 150 pound double sculls and lightweight fours, the individual star of the regatta, won the 150-pound quadruple sculls for Detroit and came second in the 150 - pound single sculls.

St. Catharines' victories came in the 150-pound four with coxswain event Saturday and the four without coxswain and 150-pound four with coxswain Sunday.

Argos Release Stephens

TORONTO (CP)—On Jan. 1, 1962, Sandy Stephens, a husky six-foot, two-inch Negro, was on top of the athletic world

He had just quarterbacked his team, the University of Minnesota Golden Gophers, to a Rose Bowl victory. He was being proclaimed the all-American quarterback by just about everybody in the United States.

Sunday, at 24, he was dropped for the second time in three years by a pro team.

Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference won the 1962 bidding for the 220-pound quarterback against Detroit Lions and Cleveland Browns of the National Football League and signed him to a three-year no-cut contract. The rookie was to get $35,000 for each of the three seasons plus a $10,000 bonus.

Sandy threw three touchdown passes in his first Canadia League game. But the rest of that season his play was hot and cold.

Lions Meet Bombers Tonight

WINNIPEG (CP) — The program won't show it but British Columbia Lions will have a new look when they clash with Winnipeg Blue Bombers tonight in the second game of the 1964 Western Foot b a l l Conference season.

Coach Dave Skrien has shuffled old faces in a bid to retain the winning touch that carried Lions to their first WFC championship and Grey Cup appearance last season.

Four first-line offensive squad includes five players at positions they didn't start at last year," he said. The game is the first of the season for both clubs.

Skrien's shifts: Veteran end Mack Burton, to split end from the flanker spot he held last season; Vancouver-born Greg Findlay, to offensive centre from linebacker; Canadian veteran Sonny Homer, to flanker from halfback, and Don Vicic, from interior linebacker to fullback to replace retired Nub Beamer.

Jim McNaughton, a tight end from Utah State, will be one of two new players dressed. The other — Canadian rookie Bob Swift — will back Vicic.

The Bombers slumped to fourth place in 1963 to miss the WFC playoffs for the first time in 14 years after notching three Grey Cup victories in four years.

Gail Harvey Wins 'Close' Title

CALGARY (CP) — Entrants in the Canadian women's open golf championship tagged Gail Harvey of Toronto as the one to beat when the Open match-play competition gets under way here Wednesday.

Miss Harvey's attributes include a drive off the tee that can match most men, and her credentials include an easy victory in the closed championship that concluded on the Earl Grey Country Club course here Saturday.

The lengthy Calgary Country Club course, where the 1965 Open will be played with qualifying rounds scheduled for today, should suit Miss Harvey's game.

If she controls her driving as she did in the closed championships, Miss Harvey is favored by many of the competitors to overcome the power she lost in the finals last year to Mrs. Marlene Stewart Streit of Toronto.

PROVIDES LESSON

Miss Harvey provided a golf lesson for nearly 500 spectators Saturday as she recorded a closing-round 71 to win the Canadian women's close championship by six strokes over Betty Stanhope Cole.

Miss Harvey, who won the Canadian junior championship in 1958, 1959 and 1960, used her 54-hole total of 215—four under women's par—to exact revenge against Mrs. Streit.

The 229 total by Miss Post 16 year - old Ontario amateur champ, left her third in the individual chase behind Mrs. Cole who totalled 221. Fourth was Joanne Goulet of Regina with 230. Mrs. Streit, who had won the close competition seven times previously, ended with 231 after a 74 Saturday.

Danek's throw was more than five feet further than the pending record of 206-6 set by Al Oerter of New York last April 28 at Walnut, Pa. The accepted record, also by Oerter, is 205-5½.

Will South Africans Fight Color Issue to Bitter End?

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP)—Sometimes it seems as though the Boer War never really came to an end.

As Britons in ever-growing numbers debate the South African problem in club rooms and discussion groups, it is becoming as rare to hear a speaker on race relations said recently, "a subject on which one cannot be neutral." And at the root of it, not for the last 70 years, is the baffled, exasperated lack of concern between the minds of Boer and Briton.

Like those present-day Confederates in the U.S., South Africans have yet to purge themselves of Civil War bitterness towards the Yankees, the Dutch-stock South Africans have long memories. Though many fought with the Allies in the Second World War, a sizable number took the pro-Nazi stand of Dr. Hendrik F. Verwoerd, then a newspaper editor, now the Nationalist premier. The British flag was dragged through the streets of Pretoria when war was declared on Hitler's Germany.

Afrikaner school textbooks perpetuate hostility towards British behavior in the war of 1899-1902. Mdreums show photographs of British "concentration camps" and ground glass allegedly fed to Boer prisoners.

BRITONS PERPLEXED

Britons in their turn have never really understood this tough, taciturn, hospitable yet narrowly fundamentalist people, who have an evangelical faith in their nationhood and the superiority of the white man.

Whatever course of action on South Africa is discussed—and suffering, it seems, sanctions have lost the air of radical by responsibility they once had and are being debated seriously—the underlying question nobody can answer is: What, if anything, could or should Afrikaner Nationalist give into the multiracial modern world?

Many fear that, far from yielding to economic pressure, he would choose resistance, to the bitter end if necessary.

The ominous signs are there to be read. Military parades on Republic Day, May 31, drummed a menacing counter point to the comparatively lenient sentences handed out in the Pretoria sabotage trial — sentences that led the British commentators to hope South Africa was at last listening to world opinion.

The 900 - day detention law, ruthlessly enforced by the often ill-defined Young police states, is admitted by Justice Minister B.J. Vorster to be a useful way of "getting information."

FIGHT TO DEATH

South Africa's defence budget was increased this year by nearly $40,000,000. Air bases are being built across the country. Housewives can buy tear-gas in handy spray cans like insecticide.

In May, 1963, Transport Minister Ben Schoeman told Afrikaner schoolchildren they must be prepared to die if necessary for their country, should the black states north of the Limpopo ever try to "liberate" South Africa by force.

The Afrikaners have been called a people with their backs to the wall who dare not turn to see the writing on it.

History has prepared them well for a last-ditch stand. It is built into their heritage to be on the defensive. For 250 years after the Dutch explorer Jan van Riebeeck landed in 1652 at what now is Cape Town, the Afrikaners grew accustomed to holding a position in "laager"—a circle of covered wagons—against hostile tribes who often had no better claim to the land than the white settlers.

Through the long-drawn-out "Kaffir wars" of the 19th century the Boers—the word means "farmers" — fought to retain their land and their identity as a nation, in which German and Huguenot mingled with the Dutch strain.

FOUGHT BRITAIN

They trekked north to found the "voortrekker republics" of Transvaal and the Orange Free State. Then, fearful of British designs upon their independence, they went to war against the most powerful nation on earth. They fought bravely and daringly. The war, expected to last three months, dragged on for two years. Their agile Boer horsemen, armed with rifle, bandolier and "biltong" — sun-dried meat — darted in and out around the serried ranks of Queen' Victoria's proud army, which numbered strength sheer numbers and exhaustion.

Later came the Broederbond, a vaguely sinister, semi-secret Afrikaner freemasonry whose object was—and still is—to get all Afrikaans-speaking South Africans into the positions of power wielded by the British in government and the Jews in business.

Afrikaner nationalism, which achieved its dream of a Boer republic May 31, 1961, might have been accepted by the world had it not been based on the principle of white supremacy.

But the leaders of Die Volk, as Afrikanerdom calls itself, are convinced that under their rule South Africa is destined to be the last stronghold of Christian civilization in the Dark Continent. The rest of the world cannot see this, in their view, because it is "sick" and self-blinded by appeasement of the Afro-Asians.

The standard multiracialism in much the same light as supporters of U.S. Senator Barry Goldwater view coexistence with Communists — it won't work because the other side will be satisfied with nothing less than a full takeover.

PREDICTS BLOODSHED

Dr. Carel de Wet, South African ambassador in Britain, said recently that integration would lead to "jealousy, strife and ultimate bloodshed."

"The only just and practicable solution . . . is the separate development of nations."

Nationalist intellectuals like Dr. T. E. W. Schumann argue that the Negro is congenitally inferior to the white man. This attitude is totally different from that of the average South African dealer who merely feels Africans are not yet ready to govern.

Some say it arises from basic feelings of sexual guilt, from fear and from the Curse of Ham in the Old Testament, ordained by divine law to be a drawer of wood and drawer of water.

Much earnest Nationalist talk about the benefits of apartheid for the Negro reads hypocritical because both races are so enmeshed in the economy of the social structure. Dr. Verwoerd is unusual in carrying his principles to the length of forgoing cheap native labor in his home; His wife and children do the domestic chores.

Some moderate South Africans believe Verwoerd is more sophisticated than he appears and that he is powerful enough to shift Afrikaner thinking if only gradually in pandering to the backveld farmer wing of his party. A Cape Town intellectual said recently in defending the beliefs Verwoerd can do as much to educate Afrikaner opinion towards the realities of modern race relations as "President de Gaulle did with French attitudes to Algeria.

Best Crop Year in History, Record Yield and Exports, Ends in Jubilant Comments

By KEN CLARK

WINNIPEG (CP) — A crop year to end all crop years ended Friday in a round of superlatives from Canadian grain officials.

The 1963-64 crop year was so good officials in this western grain-trading centre doubt it will be repeated at least in the foreseeable future.

Record wheat production of 723,000,000 bushels and record exports of more than 390,000,000 bushels made a uniquely successful combination.

The Canadian Wheat newsletter published here termed it "the most remarkable crop year in the history of Western Canada."

A. M. Runciman, president of the United Grain Growers, the prairie grain-handling co-operative, termed it "a very exceptional year and one of the most sensationally successful for the western farmer."

George Heffelfinger, chairman of the board of governors of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, said:

"Probably the happiest people are the farmers. The grain-handlers are next. Farm equipment distributors are third."

Russia played a key role in the big grain year, negating purchase of 229,000,000 bushels of wheat and wheat flour last fall.

Without the gigantic sale—biggest single order ever placed on Canadian account—they have been a good, but unexciting export year.

The Russian purchase, on the heels of a Soviet crop failure, taxed Canadian transport and facilities to the limit for the ensuing 10 months.

LEAVE IN AUGUST

Last of the shipments under the order are scheduled to leave Canadian ports in the first week of August, ending the official here. The deadline for completion was July 31, but nobody is concerned about the overlap.

The Soviet led all countries as a market for Canadian wheat by a wide margin.

Britain, Canada's biggest traditional customer, was a distant second taking 40,000,000 bushels. Japan was third with about 30,000,000 and Communist China fourth with 24,000,000.

Grain officials now say wheat exports in the new crop year could hit 400,000,000 bushels even if Russia fails to buy again.

Although the Soviet Union's intentions are an unknown quantity, officials here hope for a new sale, but on a much smaller scale.

The year was supported Friday when Pravda, the official Soviet Communist party newspaper, indicated that anticipated grain production is far higher this year than last.

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada has closed the books on her greatest year in history for wheat production and exports.

The wheat picture at a glance:

Canada started the crop year last Aug. 1, 1963, with about 436,000,000 bushels of wheat.

Atop this came the record 1963 crop of about 723,000,000 bushels, bringing the total to 1,200,000,000 bushels.

Exports hit 390,000,000 bushels, exceeding the previous record of 407,500,000 bushels set in 1958-59.

Canadian domestic use was about 150,000,000 bushels.

Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp in a statement said all the Russian shipments were made on schedule and the normal requirements of Canada's regular wheat customers "were supplied as promised by the wheat board."

Meanwhile, the transportation and grain-handling system still managed to move feed grain to eastern farmers and wheat to eastern flour mills without disruption, he said.

Mr. Sharp said the wheat board is confident it will make enough commitments to retain Canadian shipping facilities. Hence the mid-1963 plea for co-operation.

The minister said the result was a "splendid effort."

In the Footsteps Of Famous Mother

By BENNET M. BOLTON

ROME (AP)—A young dramatist student who laughs like Ingrid Bergman launched her movie career here in April, with hopes of climbing to world stardom as the famous Swedish actress did.

Pia Lindstrom has more in common with Ingrid Bergman than simply wanting to follow in her footsteps. They are mother and daughter.

The blue - eyed blonde was born in Stockholm 25 years ago and raised in California by Dr. Peter Lindstrom, the dentist who was Ingrid's first husband.

Pia's start just happened to be here in the country where her mother's Stromboli Island romance with Italian director Roberto Rossellini her second husband, made international headlines in 1949.

Vittorio de Sica was making Marriage Italian Style with Sophia Loren and Marcello Mastroianni. He met Pia. She had just finished a year of drama study in London and be screen-tested her.

The tall, slender Miss Lindstrom got the role of a waitress who carries on a flirtation with Mastroianni—and decided from the outset of her new career that her name will remain Pia.

"I didn't like to be called Pia when I was little," she said. "So I made up the name Lindstrom Ann. "You know how is at 16. You want to be the same as everyone else. As you get older you discover it's nice to have a name that's different."

Ingrid's daughter bears only the slightest physical and facial resemblance to her mother. But she has the same free, bubbling laughter that Ingrid it often.

She is going into movie work with a solid liberal arts education behind her in addition to her dramatic training. She got a history and government degree from Mills College, California. Her friends predicted for a while at the Stanford University graduate school.

She married American textile hair Fuller Calloway. They were divorced in 1961. She has not remarried.

She moved to Paris, mastered French and got a job with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), now knows a few words of Swedish and has been going to work on Italian finishing her London drama studies and moving to Rome.

Surtees Wins Grand Prix

ADENAU, West Germany (AP)—John Surtees of England, driving an Italian Ferrari, easily won the German Grand Prix for Formula One cars Sunday.

Hill, driving a BRM, collected six points for second place and has a total of 32 after six races counting toward the driving championship.

Defending world champion Jim Clark of Scotland, who was unable to finish, is second with 30 points and Surtees is third with 19.

Surtees, winner last year, was timed in 2:12:06.8 for 15 laps around the difficult Neurburgring, breaking the record of 2:13:00.8 he made last year. He averaged 95.56 miles an hour.

Scarborough Man Charged With Murder

TORONTO (CP)—Thomas Naseff, 38, of suburban Scarborough has been charged with murder in the slaying of Ivan and Joiner, Metropolitan Toronto police said today.

The body of the 22-year-old married Toronto waitress was found in a swamp in Vaughan Township ditch July 28 Police estimated she had been dead about a week.

An autopsy revealed the cause of death was a blow on the head with a blunt instrument.

The last time the woman was seen alive was July 19 when she left a Toronto restaurant restaurant where she had worked periodically for the last 18 months.

She was not identified until Friday, when her sister, Sharon Joiner, saw a police artist's sketch of the dead woman in a newspaper. Her married name was Mrs Ronald Pringle.

Garden Notes
Order Rock Plants in Bloom

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

No one likes to buy a "pig in a poke". Ordering plants from catalogues, unless one is quite familiar with the various varieties of a plant, is chancy. For instance Aubretias have up to 20 varieties. Try to find a lone garden centre or nursery and around and ask to see the plants in bloom.

Make several visits during the year. They will be interesting and informative, especially if you time your visits on a slack day, or hour when the salesman has time to show you around and tell you about the plants. Once a month, from early spring to late fall, is not too often. In this way you will see each plant at its best in bloom and how it looks without bloom. You will be able to find plants to keep your rock garden free of interest all year, not just for a few weeks in spring.

You will find pot-grown rock plants which can be tapped out of the pot and transferred readily even while in full bloom. Just spread the fingers around the plant and over the edge of the pot, turn upside down and edge lightly on a solid surface. The roots and plant will come out intact. Plant a little deeper than the plant was in the pot. Do not attempt to spread the roots out. They will soon grow out and make new feeder and anchoring roots.

Income Tax Explained

Many former taxpayers are sometimes at a loss to know what to do when their personal exemption exceeds their income.

If the taxpayers loss of income is due to unemployment, and he still is of an employable age he should file a return, to maintain the continuity in his file at the income tax office. On the other hand if the taxpayer has retired and his income does not exceed his exemptions and there is no likelihood of his income ever reaching a taxable amount again, he should file one return after the retires showing him to be non-taxable. After this is done, he need not file again in future years, unless his income reaches a taxable amount.

Should the taxpayer have rental, investment or commission income from which he has deducted debatable expenses, and after these deductions his income does not exceed his exemptions, he still should file a return on the T1 General form showing the total income and an itemized list of the expenses deducted. The reason for his filing is that expenses may have been claimed that are not allowable. This is particularly applicable to rental income. It is often a fault of the taxpayer in regard to rental income to claim as a deductible expense a capital nature. It is only the excess of a current nature that may be deducted from rents received.

Watch this paper for a future article which will deal entirely with rental income and allowable deductions.

For personal replies pertaining to income tax problems, please enclose a self - addressed five cent stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin for each question you wish answered.

Question: My wife and I are both over 65. She has a small investment income. What I figure my exemption for her, do I deduct her income from the $1,250 or as she is 65 do I use $1,750?

Answer: You deduct her income from $1,250. The additional $500 exemption applies only to the taxpayer. If her income is over $1250 you would have no claim for her.

Question: I am now 65 and retired. I have a pension from my employers of $1,500 a year I am a widower with no other income. I live with my married son who does not charge me for board. Do I have to file and how the value of this board as income?

Answer: No.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Day features changes, short journeys, dealings with in-laws. You get more with honey than with vinegar. Turn on charm. Avoid trying to force issues. Key is being diplomatic, understanding.

Gemini (May 21 to June 20): Money question need not create delay. Consult one in authority. Honest expression of desires accomplishes much. Be frank. Plan time for future planning . . also good day to complete projects.

Cancer (June 21 to July 23): Stress greater independence. Cycle high. Emphasis on personal appearance, originality. Highlight independence of thought, action. Others will follow your example. Be confident.

Leo (July 23 to Aug. 22): Look behind the scenes. Utilize natural creative abilities. Place together bits of information. You can make valuable discoveries — if you are observant. You can learn by teaching. Share knowledge.

Virgo (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22): Gain indicated through reading, special hobby or study. Add to knowledge. Give full play to intellectual desires. Be curious. Group activity favored. You can meet people who prove worthwhile.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Your ambitions are in spotlight. Attend to specific details. Important not to trust to chance. One who is in position to aid has questions of financial nature. Give answers to best of your knowledge.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Fine lunar aspect today emphasizes journeys, education, the confidence that comes from "knowing." Move ahead with greater assurance. Don't be ashamed to admit when you don't know answers.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You are able to achieve great degree of harmony. Those close to you will exhibit more understanding. You will make adjustments which are successful. Money situation due to improve.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19): Lunar position stresses care, caution — especially where legal matters are concerned. Be perceptive. All is not as it may appear. Take your time. Highlight facts rather than fancy.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18): Day to progress — draw conclusions based on observation. Good to offer — and accept — constructive criticism. Handle responsibility . . live up to obligations. Includes promises made to member of opposite sex.

Pisces (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20): Keep promises made to children. Offer helping hand to associates. Be co-operative. Put forth finest qualities. Many are watching. You can now be repaid for extra effort.

If today is your birthday . . . you are showman, you demand much of yourself — you are creative, have sex appeal, can succeed as writer, publisher or entertainer.

Exploring the Top of the World

By ALLEN SACKMANN

MOULD BAY, N.W.T. (CP)— Each year since 1959 teams of scientists have ranged over the Arctic archipelago in a systematic exploration project aimed at learning more about Canada's hinterland.

The research is under auspices of the Polar Continental Shelf Project, a federal government operation that draws scientists from several government departments and at least eight universities.

At a cost of $1,500,000 a year the Arctic Ocean and islands are charted by topographical surveys, the mineral potential is probed by seismic and aeromagnetic surveys and the history is studied through marine geology, glaciology and zoology.

This year 110 men are spending six months — the Arctic spring, summer and fall—trying to unlock some of the secrets held in the barren, rugged terrain.

As in other years, the information they obtain is shipped to Ottawa where it is analyzed during the winter when the Arctic is shrouded in continuous darkness.

After six seasons, Colin Grant, the project field supervisor, estimates the job is half finished.

FOUND FAULT

An example of the sort of things the scientists have found was the discovery last season of an anomaly in the earth's crust below Mould Bay on Prince Patrick Island 1,300 miles north of Edmonton. It's being investigated this summer by a federal government geomagnetic team.

The fault, perhaps 18 miles thick, is thought to be about 10 000 feet below the surface, higher than normal temperature is one of its features.

Geomagnetic survey officials say information obtained from studies may be useful in determining changes in the earth's magnetic field. It could also lead to better understanding of how mountains are created, and perhaps indicate the degree to which the North American continent is drifting.

Impetus for the Polar Continental Shelf Project was provided by the International Conference on the Laws of the Sea in Geneva in 1958. One of the resolutions adopted was that mineral and other resources lying beneath continental shelves could be considered the property of the country claiming the coastline adjacent to them.

Aside from the scientific and potential economic value of exploring the region beneath the sea in the Canadian Arctic, the project has the effect of confirming Canada's sovereignty in the area.

DIVIDED INTO BLOCKS

The Arctic archipelago is divided into blocks to enable men to work in a variety of projects from a single base camp, getting a maximum use of aircraft and other equipment at minimum cost.

From the base camp at Mould Bay, Mr. Grant directs the loosely knit organization — "I've got more PMRs per square foot than any other piece of university campuses, he says.

Crews, usually headed by at least one scientist, are distributed over several islands and parts of the ocean ice in the western Arctic.

The project maintains its own air force of chartered aircraft to take men and supplies to and from the research sites.

On the ground dog teams were used until last year but have been replaced by autodoggans. "The only way you'd get huskies back on the project would be over my dead body, says Mr. Grant. "They eat when they're not working.

The continental shelf is that part of the ocean floor which extends from land at a relatively shallow depth to a point well out into the ocean where, up to 100 miles from shore, it suddenly drops off.

Far out on the ocean ice Dr. Hans Weber is trying to trace some Arctic history. He says results of seismic surveys, gravity and hydrographic studies may hold a clue to how oceans were formed.

SET OFF BLASTS

Seismic crews set off charges up to 5,000 pounds of TNT to gain information about the formation of the rock on the islands and the ocean floor.

Tied in with the seismic studies are aeromagnetic surveys conducted from a specially equipped aircraft. Flying at 1,000 feet, it electronically records the magnetic properties of the islands and ocean floor.

"It doesn't point out where the minerals or petroleum are located," says Allan MacNutt, in charge of the Survair Limited crew, "but it shows where not to look, cutting exploration costs.

The terrain is also photographed with movie cameras which means the surveys can only be carried out in nearly perfect weather.

Seismic crews are making soundings from the northern shores of Melville Island to a point near the 80th parallel. Listening stations record the length of time it takes the sound to reach them, providing information about the kind of rock being encountered.

Hydrological surveys measure the depth of the water and gravity surveys done from the ocean ice tell how thick the earth's crust is and what it's made of.

Other scientists are studying glaciers found on Melville and Ellef Ringnes islands, making periodic checks to see whether they are receding or becoming larger.

Another project is a precise survey between Ellesmere Island and Greenland to determine the relative positions of the two land masses. If precise enough, the information will permit the detection of movements of the land in the next decade or two.

OTTAWA (CP)—Health Minister Judy LaMarsh said in the Commons Monday that a white paper outlining the revised Canada Pension Plan will, "in all likelihood," be issued this week. She was replying to Stanley Knowles (NDP — Winnipeg North Centre).

Canada's Orchestras Must Play Canada's Composers

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian orchestras have a duty to play the work of Canadian composers, says Winnipeg conductor Victor Feldbrill. If they don't no one else will.

"We must be the guinea pigs. No one else will go to bat for us. We know the music of Sweden and Germany and other countries. Now we've got to find the best in our own country."

Feldbrill, formerly assistant conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, is conductor of the Winnipeg Symphony and was here in his role as co-conductor of the National Youth Orchestra.

"There is a shocking lack of encouragement for Canadian music in he Toronto Symphony Orchestra," he says. "It isn't right to say there isn't enough good Canadian music.

"People who take the trouble of coming to a symphony concert won't feel insulted if they are treated as intelligent human beings and brought in on the experiment of discovery.

"If a work has elements of greatness it will be immediately picked up by performers and listener. . . . If you don't like it, hiss. Don't applaud if you don't want. But the Canadian composer must have the opportunity to be heard."

Feldbrill says he doesn't suggest an orchestra should give a complete program of contemporary music. The challenge would be too much. He adds that the Winnipeg orchestra plays one Canadian work on each of its concerts.

Congolese Army Drives Rebels Out Of Stanleyville

Battle in City's Centre, Around U.S. Consulate

LEOPOLDVILLE (CP)—The Congolese Army has driven invading Communist-backed rebels out of Stanleyville after fighting Tuesday in the streets of the northern Congo's most important city.

Radio messages said the city had a quiet night after battles in the city's centre and around the U.S. consulate.

However, other messages said the army still had not dislodged a rebel band from Camp Kelelie, an army barracks the band captured Sunday.

Pilots returning from Stanleyville said the counter attack against the rebels had been carried out by men of the army's 3rd Commando Battalion. Troops of this unit were flown to Stanleyville a few days ago.

HOLD AIRPORT

Maj. Frederick Burke of Lowell, Mass., U.S. Air Force pilot of the military plane to leave Stanleyville Tuesday night, said the city's airport remained occupied by rebel Congolese soldiers.

Some of these were believed to be former Katanga gendarmes who served Premier Moise Tshombe when he headed the secessionist government in Katanga. Tshombe had called them back to fight and 300 are being airlifted from Elisabethville to Stanleyville.

A civilian airliner brought five wounded Congolese soldiers to Leopoldville from Stanleyville. Burke brought out the wife and five children of a Congolese police captain and said 18 persons who reached the airport Tuesday were evacuated.

The United Nations, which pulled the last of its peacekeeping troops out of the Congo June 30, flew 27 civilian staff members and dependents out. About a dozen remained, but the UN said they would be withdrawn.

Before 6 rebels attacked, there were 700 white persons in the city of about 300,000.

PEARSON FAILS

Officials ordered the evacuation as fears mounted that Stanleyville would fall before the rebel onslaught, aided by a leftist fifth column expected to launch a revolt in the city.

Stanleyville is the prime target of bush fighters who have captured much of the eastern Congo in a campaign of conquest supported by Communist China.

The battle of Stanleyville began Tuesday when Congolese troops engaged rebels about nine miles south of the city.

Charge 5 In NONG Deal

TORONTO (CP) — Four former Ontario mayors and Ralph K. Farris of Vancouver, president of Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company Limited, were charged Tuesday in connection with the granting of natural gas franchises in four Ontario municipalities.

Others charged are Mr. Justice Leo Landreville of the Ontario Supreme Court, former mayor of Sudbury, Mrs. Wanda Miller of Gravenhurst, Glen S. Coates of Bracebridge and Wilbur Cramp of Orillia.

Mr. Landreville appeared in Sudbury magistrate's court Tuesday on three charges and was released on $5,000 bail. He was not asked to plead. He will appear in court at Sudbury Sept. 21.

The other three former mayors were issued with summonses and will appear in court "shortly," the attorney - general's department said

APPEALS

Mr. Farris was found guilty last April on a perjury charge arising from statements concerning stock distribution he made at provincial government inquiries. He was sentenced to nine months definite and three months indefinite but is appealing the sentence. He was acquitted of a second perjury charge.

The first new charge against him alleges that he, offered, or agreed to offer Mr. Landreville stock in NONG for his aid in obtaining a franchise agreement between Sudbury and NONG.

The second charge is that Farris offered or agreed to give the former mayor stock in or to form an official act, that is the signing of the franchise document, contrary to section 104 of the Criminal Code.

Each of the former mayors faces three charges. Two of the charges deal with accepting NONG stock as consideration for procuring council approval of the NONG application for a gas distribution franchise. The third charge is that they conspired with Mr. Farris to bring about the result and also procure adoption of a resolution providing for a franchise agree-

Two of Three Bodies Identified As Those of Civil Rights Men

WASHINGTON (AP)—FBI director J. Edgar Hoover announced today that two of the three bodies found Tuesday near Philadelphia, Miss., had been identified as those of civil rights workers missing for six weeks. Examination of the third is continuing.

Hoover's announcement said the two bodies had been identified as those of Andrew Goodman, 20, and Michael H. Schwerner, 24, both of New York.

Goodman, Schwerner and James Chaney, 22-year-old Negro, Miss., native, disappeared June 21 after authorities said they were freed from a Philadelphia, Miss., jail.

The three bodies were found Tuesday buried in a newly constructed earthen dam near Philadelphia. Packed in ice, they were brought to the University of Mississippi medical center in Jackson for tests by pathologists.

Ministers Reply To Questions

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — Five members of the cabinet intervened Tuesday in the Commons' drawn out interim supply debate after Conservatives had repeatedly accused the government of an arrogant policy of concealment.

The five ministers replied to some of the 200-or-so questions the government policy the Conservatives had asked in the first seven days of Mac debate.

The Conservatives said they would continue to press for information from other ministers today when the House resumes study of a bill giving the government $696,000,000 in spending authority for August and September.

A meeting between Prime Minister Pearson and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, the second in two days, was scheduled for this afternoon following party caucus meetings in the morning.

The party leaders were to discuss a proposal by New Democratic Leader Douglas that the balance of the flag debate be postponed to the fall and limited to one week. Mr. Douglas said Monday the Conservatives are conducting a filibuster on the money bill mainly to delays the resumption of the flag debate.

The participation of five ministers in Tuesday's debate led Robert C. Coates (PC — Cumberland) to comment: "This is a red letter day this session — we have seen this dictatorial and arrogant government being brought to its knees by the opposition and forced to answer our questions."

Immigration Minister Tremblay said his department is preparing amendments to the immigration act and its regulations to step up the inflow of immigrants.

New legislation would be introduced later in the session to make the immigrants appeal board independent of his department and to establish an Indian claims commission.

Labor Minister Macdonald defended the three maritime trustees appointed last October to end violence and racketeering in the Seafarers' International Union. The trustees have been criticized in the Commons lately for failing to remove "gangsters" at the head of the SIU.

Mr. MacEachen said the trus-

Publishers and Printers Break Off Negotiations

TORONTO (CP)—Louis Fine, chief labor conciliator for the Ontario government, announced Tuesday afternoon that negotiations between Toronto's three daily newspapers and their 680 striking printers have collapsed.

The printers, members of the international Typographical Union (CLC), walked off their jobs July 3. The union calls it a lockout. The papers — the morning Globe and Mail and the evening Star and Telegram — say it is a strike and have continued to publish with supervising and non-union personnel in the composing rooms.

The break-off came six days after the parties had reached agreement on what was the main issue at the start of the walkout — ITU jurisdiction in the area of multi-purpose computers as they are applied to composing room tasks.

However, the publishers have introduced a series of other proposals.

The papers have offered a lifetime guarantee to present composing room employees against unemployment resulting from automation, in return they have asked for the abolition of what they term featherbedding practices, the elimination of foremen and assistant foremen from the ITU's bargaining unit, the extension of any new contract through to Dec. 31, 1966, and the right to introduce new methods and equipment.

Fine and McCormack, president of ITU Local 91, said in a statement after the talks broke up it is obvious the publishers have made the terms of settlement impossible for the union to accept."

He said a clause excluding foremen from the union would give the publishers the right to operate non - union composing rooms and would be "tantamount to unconditional surrender by the union."

He described the lifetime guarantee against layoffs due to automation as "phoney" because he said it would not even be for protection against layoffs for economic reasons.

Provincial Premiers Want Aid in Finding Jobless Work

JASPER, Alta. (CP) — Canada's premiers have little no doubt they do not favor asking able-bodied persons on welfare to work for their assistance.

Premier Jean Lesage of Quebec, speaking on behalf of the premiers, told a press conference Tuesday that what the premiers want is federal aid for programs designed to take people off welfare roles and place them in jobs.

He was supported by Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan.

Only Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland was absent from the two-day conference, which ended Tuesday night with a barbeque.

The 1965 conference will be held at Winnipeg.

Alberta Premier E. C. Manning, chairman of the conference, praised the value of the meeting despite the restricted agenda and a prior agreement to discuss mutual topics—from education to time zones—on a general basis and make no attempt to reach conclusions.

Both Mr. Lesage and Mr. Thatcher said they wanted to see the question of federal aid for projects designed to help get employable persons on welfare roles back to work discussed at the federal-provincial level.

Mr. Thatcher said under the current system "it pays the provinces to keep people on welfare."

The federal government shares the cost of welfare assistance with the provinces but not as a person is given a job at the going wage rate the assistance is cut by the federal government.

"We believe," said Mr. Thatcher, "that the federal government should be more willing to help us get people back to work and off welfare roles. This is a positive approach to the problem"

Mr. Lesage said 95 per cent of persons without jobs were unskilled laborers and efforts to get them into productive jobs must have extension of vocational and technical education programs.

Federal-provincial talks also will be requested on a variety of other topics, including offshore mineral rights and the divided responsibility of Indians and Metis. Continuing interprovincial talks were suggested in such areas as sales tax administration, school standards and financial aid for education, establishment of specialized regional schools and reciprocal truck licence agreements.

Is Up To North Vietnamese Whether This Attack Is All McNamara Tells Newsmen

Peking Diplomats See Danger Of War With China Increased

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE

SAIGON (AP) — The United States rushed six supersonic air force F-102 jet fighters to Saigon today to meet any attacks from Communist North Viet Nam or Red China that the crisis in the Gulf of Tonkin might generate.

The six delta Dagger jets from the 16th Fighter Interceptor Squadron based on Okinawa flew to Saigon from Clark Field, in the Philippines. They went on a 24-hour-a-day alert.

The flight commander, Lt.-Col. Garnett D. Page of Decatur, Ala., said his planes had no "offensive weapons." He said they carried only anti-aircraft rockets for the defence of South Viet Nam.

North Viet Nam, in its first comment on the developments off its coast, acknowledged the clash Sunday between North Vietnamese PT boats and the destroyer Maddox. But it said the Pentagon's report that four PT boats had attacked two U.S. warships in international waters Tuesday was a "sheer fabrication."

Radio Hanoi charged that U.S. ships and planes had been violating and shelling its territory. It said American "provocative, sabotage and aggressive acts will be severely punished."

Radio Hanoi gave this account of the first clash Sunday: "Within the framework of their plan for provocation and sabotage against North Viet Nam, which they carried out intensively, on July 30, the U.S imperialists and their lackeys sent their warships into our territorial sea to shell the islands which belong to North Vietnamese territory. These islands are Ham Luong and Ham Nghi. "On the night of 31 July, and in the early morning of Aug. 1, the U.S. imperialists again sent a destroyer to encroach upon our territorial sea in Quang Binh province. This destroyer operated in our territorial waters throughout Aug. 1 and 2 in the area between Hon Me Island in Nghe An province and the Hon Me islands in Thanh Hoa province, intimidating our peoples, fishing boats and flagrantly violating the territories of our country.

"On the afternoon of Aug. 2 this destroyer met our patrol boats which are located between Ham Luong and Ngoc Tuyen on our territorial seas. In the face of provocations by sea pirates, our boats had come into action to protect our territorial sea and our people, and to chase the enemy ships out of our sea.

"Later, our patrol boats returned to their base. This is what happened on the afternoon of Aug. 2. The U.S. imperialists are making a great fuss of what they call an unprovoked attack by what they call North Vietnamese torpedo boats. This is their attempt to cover up their provocative and sabotage activities and their violation of North Vietnamese and Chinese territorial sea, sovereignty and territory."

Leaders To Meet For Talks

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — The stage as set today for crucial talks between the party leaders to determine the future of the Commons flag debate and possibly the fate of the present Parliament.

Prime Minister Pearson was to meet Opposition Leader Diefenbaker privately for the second time on the issue. Their talk will follow a Progressive Conservative caucus that is to discuss NDP proposals aimed at resolving the Commons deadlock and paving the way for a final decision on the government's proposed maple leaf flag.

Later, depending on the attitude of the official opposition all five party leaders were to confer on a course of action.

Mr Pearson and Mr. Diefenbaker met privately Tuesday for 23 minutes to discuss the set of compromise suggestions made by NDP Leader Douglas Monday and accepted in principle by Mr. Pearson Tuesday.

They agreed to today's further private talk and another meeting, if necessary, with Mr. Douglas, Social Credit Leader Real Caouette and Creditiste Leader Caouette.

COULD MEAN ELECTION

Failure of the negotiations could result in weeks of bitter debate in Parliament, in order to get on the flag and, possibly lead ultimately to the third general election in three years.

Mr Douglas's proposals seek to:

1. Fix an agreed time limit—a week or some other period acceptable to all—within which debate on the flag motion will be taken this fall on the proposed flag design.

2. Provide that a vote be taken soon on a Conservative amendment to the flag resolution calling for a plebiscite on the flag. This would be followed by a summer recess.

3. Provide for quick approval of the two legislative items that the government has scheduled for the August-September July 3.

4. Give the MPs a summer recess between the decision on

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — When the head that rocks the cradle no longer rules the world, perhaps the hand that puts together the electronic brain will.

'The Marriage of Figaro' Final Offering of Festival

By BILL BOSS

STRATFORD (CP)—To critical acclaim and prolonged audience ovations, Stratford Tuesday night unveiled its final major offering for the 1964 season: Mozart's The Marriage of Figaro.

Directed by Montreal's Jean Gascon, the Stratford festival's associate director this year, and conducted by Richard Bonynge, the enchanting opera was sung in English by an outstanding international, but largely Canadian cast.

Soprano Laurel Hurley won plaudits as the winsome Susanna, object of the evening's attentions as her suitor, Figaro, warded off the attempts of her master, Count Almaviva, to exercise his "droit du seigneur." That, to the uninitiated, is (or was) a nobleman's right to sleep with a virgin maidservant before her marriage to her servant husband.

Bass baritone Jan Rubes excelled as Figaro and Cornelis Opthof was a good voice as a handsomer - than - usual Almaviva.

Soprano Ilona Kombrink, for whom the management apologized during the intermission, was the Countess Rosina, who is restored to her husband's reluctant arms before the end of the opera's shenanigans.

HAS SORE THROAT

Although Miss Kombrink was said to be suffering from a throat ailment and to have insisted nonetheless on singing the part, her only concession to the indisposition was to take certain of the higher passages an octave lower. The audience responded warmly to her otherwise fine performance.

Ottawa's Jean Bonhomme, a relative newcomer who leaves next month to join the Sadlers Wells Opera Company in London, England, drew praise for his sly interpretation of Don Basilio, Susanna's singing-master and the count's confederate in attempting to bring about her seduction.

Montreal's Huguette Tourangeau, winner of this year's Metropolitan Opera auditions, was in the difficult role of Cherubino, a page, while Basso Howell Glynne, now a Stratford veteran, was a scheming Bartolo—the lawyer in the case.

Designed in the Spanish Idiom of Mark Negin, the production in Stratford's Avon Theatre was costumed in this company's usual opulent manner, but staged in settings that were aptly suggestive without overindulging in realism.

Gascon's groupings were straightforward enough but he was praised for inventive touches in the wedding scene and the finale, where the count's earlier promise to provide a bridesmaid's dowry for Susanna was carried out to the letter.

Mr. Bonynge, who in private life is the husband of soprano Joan Sutherland, won acclaim for the Stratford debut on the podium with the National Festival Orchestra.

Well Drilling Business Shows Steady Growth

The wells are being drilled to provide a water supply for new quad housing and also for farmers whose present wells are not enough to supply water requirements for their needs.

At the same time household-ers living within a short distance of the city or other water supply, are installing pumping equipment.

Such is the well drilling boom of course is the result of lower rainfall and falling water tables which are causing existing wells to go dry.

The situation to date from June 1st this year has been only slightly over two inches however, less than doing a custom water hauling have not been as busy as in previous years.

This in turn is attributed to the number of new wells being drilled by customers who have found it unsatisfactory to haul water.

Art Ross, Great Defenceman of Hockey, Dies

BOSTON (CP) — Art Ross, former general manager of Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, died today after a lengthy illness.

The 79-year-old Ross, a defenceman in his playing days, developed some of the greatest players hockey has known during many years as coach and later general manager of the Bruins.

An innovator as well as a keen judge of hockey talent, Ross designed the puck-snaring nets that have long been standard in rinks throughout the hockey world and the leather helmet now seen only occasionally in professional hockey.

Ross began his hockey career in Canada and joined the Bruins in 1924 as coach, later becoming general manager.

The Art Ross Trophy, awarded each year since 1948 to the NHL's leading scorer, is named after him.

Ross died in a nursing home in the Boston suburb of West Medford.

A native of the Montreal suburb of Westmount, he decided to make his home here after helping the late C. F. Adams launch the Bruins in the NHL.

From 1924 until his retirement as general manager in 1954, he played the key role in making and keeping hockey a major sports attraction in Boston.

WON NHL TITLES

Besides the three cup victories his teams won NHL titles in 1929, 1930, 1931, 1939, 1940 and 1941.

Among the great players who soared to glory under his direction was Eddie Shore, goalies Tiny Thompson and Frank Brimsek, playmaker Bill Cowley the dynamite line of Dit Clapper, Mooney Weiland and Dutch Gainor, and the Kitchener line of Milt Schmidt, Bobby Bauer and Woody Dumart.

His own playing career spanned 28 years, 17 of them as a pro. He played early in the century, before the founding of the NHL, with such Stanley Cup winners as Kenora, Ont., Thistles and Montreal Wanderers.

Those Good Old Circus Days

A visit to a circus always conjures up memories of past big tops. The good old days of the circus saw Belleville billed as one of the top circus towns in Eastern Ontario. This was a "must stop" for the Barnum and Bailey and Clyde Beatty shows.

There was a circus in town last Thursday and it certainly was not in the spirit of those other big tops. The side show, according to the barker, was the first thing on the agenda. It was interesting because the magician's assistant was also the snake lady, the electra girl and the rubber-skinned woman. Now that is versatility! Oh, incidentally, the barker was also the magician and the Punch and Judy show operator.

At 2.20 p.m. the big tent opened and everyone got ready for the gala presentation. First came the orchestra, a young fellow who had difficulty mastering the cultivope and a one-armed drummer. The poor percussionist had a broken arm and it certainly did not bring him any closer to Gene Krupa's calibre.

Precisely at 2.30, the "big" parade; one horse, six ponies, two men, six girls, two elephants and several assistants came into view through the dry acrid dust of Zwick's (Zick's) local park. This excuse for a parade certainly was a far cry from the Barnum and Bailey extravaganzas with their full orchestras, 40 elephants, 50 horses and hundreds of personnel.

Remember the magician's assistant? Well, under the big top she was the bareback rider and plastic-plate-spinner extraordinaire. What versatility! Four girls and one man, then proceeded to alternate with another couple of commissionaire for the next ten acts. Every "new" act was a combination or permutation of those seven.

The only acts that were reminiscent of those former circus days were the old faithful elephants and the clowns. Somehow they still retained their old magic to capture the crowds.

At exactly 3.25, the circus was over. Fifty-five minutes certainly was not too long for the $1.50 admission price. As the crowd surged out of the dusty enclosure for some fresh air the children kept besieging mom or dad for the last ride on those ponies. Oh, guess who was "hawking" the ponies? No, not the magician's assistant, she was back in the side tent putting on the sideshow that the barker had promised would only be shown once before the main big top. Our contorsionists were now busy hauling the kids on and off the ponies.

Undoubtedly, the children enjoyed what they saw. The name "circus" is still magic to young ears. But as one who watched and tried to listen to the performance, those old memories came back and there was that wish that these children today could have seen a "real" circus.

A Tough Job

U Thant, the diminutive diplomat from Burma, recently said he was not too sure that he wanted another term as head of the United Nations.

When one considers what Thant has gone through and what he is at present enduring, the reasons for his lack of enthusiasm for a second term become apparent.

Take for example the present crisis in Cyprus. Thant has taken the responsibility for despatching member nations' forces to the island to try and keep the peace. Everywhere he turns in his struggle to maintain the peace he is met with more difficulties.

The latest involves President Makarios who has just rejected a request by Thant for permission for U.N. forces to examine arms shipments into the island.

Arms are now being stock-piled on the docks of the port of Limassol, at an alarming rate. Yet, President Makarios will not let the U.N. force that is there to protect the existing peace check the arms shipments.

There is not really much that Thant can do. He most certainly cannot pull the forces out because a human holocaust could follow. He also cannot let the present arms buildup continue either. Indeed, once again he is facing another impossible situation.

U Thant has followed admirably in the wake of the great man of peace Dag Hammarskjold. If two years from now Thant decides to stay on, the world will benefit. But if he should desire to resign, no one really could blame him.

He (Khrushchev) doesn't lose his temper, he uses his temper.—Former Vice President Richard Nixon.

Dr. P. Jewett Will Vote On Flag as She Thinks Best

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — What surely must be one of the oddest, and certainly the most personally daring political philosophies expounded in this strangest of recent Parliaments comes from Dr. Pauline Jewett, freshwoman MP for Northumberland and a member of what the Liberals like to regard as their intellectual elite.

She is going to vote on the flag as she pleases.

This, she has said quite frankly, will be done without regard for what might be the majority wish of voters in her "Old Ontario" constituency which was, at the outset — and still very well may be — basically true - blue United Empire Loyalist at its roots.

This, of course, has stirred up understandable interest among Liberals and Conservatives alike.

The Liberals, a bit abashed by her frankness, have been hoping that Northumberland and other parts of the country may quickly forget Dr. Jewett's conception of her Parliamentary vote as nobody's business — certainly not hers or constituents, anyway — but her own.

And the Conservatives hope that Northumberland and the rest of the country may long remember what is regarded as clear evidence of Liberal intellectual "superiority" and the "mother-knows-best" attitude of the party's eggheads to what they seem to regard as the not-so-bright "mass" electorate.

UNITY, SHE SAYS

What Dr. Jewett said was simply this:

Parliamentarians should look and act on the flag issue "regardless of party lines" and regardless even of what we think the majority of our constituents want."

National unity must come first, she added, and so she would vote for the Red Ensign and for the Maple Leaf.

Thus attitude obviously assumes two important things:

1. That although former Liberal Prime Ministers Mackenzie King and Louis St. Laurent spent their careers seeking, as they said, national unity — and apparently unsuccessfully for Prime Minister Pearson is continuing the search, however over — she believes at least it can be found, wrapped in the folds of a strange new flag.

2. That this unity can be achieved through the strange new political device of disregarding the wishes of the majority, and catering, presumably, to the whams of the minority.

Gleefully, when they heard of this daring philosophy as expressed by one of the Liberal eggheads, the Conservative "neoliers" set to work on their version of Mother Goose — same old arrogant gang."

Miss Jewett is a remarkably attractive young lady in face and form — 46-year-old bachelor girl university professor on "political science" and education.

As a member of the Institutes of Canadian Political Science, of International Affairs and of Public Administration, she was one of a small, select band of academics who added glamor to the Liberal campaign in the last election by posing with Mr. Pearson for a strikingly appealing photograph used in the party's national advertising campaign in newspapers all across the land.

THE POWERHOUSE

This was part of the "New Wave" of fresh young faces, the new elite that was to be the intellectual powerhouse of both the new Government and the new Parliament.

So the Conservatives — who have been peeled, especially by New Democratic Deputy Douglas Fisher, for supposedly having few intellectuals of their own — have been watching Miss Jewett closely.

It, in fact, they are short on political eggheads, the Conservatives, listening to Miss Jewett, are inclined to believe it is really not such a great disaster after all.

They noted with interest her remarks to the Professional Women's Clubs of Ontario recently that what she called the "enormous load of constituency problems — with electors' requests ranging in bulk as MP's time — is one of the shortcomings of our Parliamentary system."

The House of Commons, she said, should not have to be a forum of "bridges, canal post offices, pensions, jobs and such things," for it prevented MPs from "thinking in depth, lowering their political potential."

To give MPs time to think of "the more important things," she suggested, they should be given special aids, "one or two people here in their offices in Ottawa and one or two in their constituencies" to look after the little "local" problems of their voters.

That Miss Jewett should go a further step in that direction and contend that MPs could safely, or even wisely, or fairly, ignore the wishes of the majority of their constituents didn't surprise the Conservatives, who still hold to those that a Parliamentarian should old-fashioned political ideas speak for the people who elect him.

Pola Negri On Comeback

Hamilton Spectator

Out of a past so unsophisticated by comparison with today that it has a unique charm, leaps the name of Pola Negri. She is starring in a new film.

You have to be 50 or so to savor the full meaning of this comeback. In the first half of the 1920s when silent films were in full bloom and what a gorgeous bloom it was! — Miss Negri was a dazzling star in the Hollywood firmament.

In her film roles Miss Negri was adored, hated, hissed, booed and applauded by countless millions in theatres around the world. She was the sinuous vamp who lured dutiful young husbands from their wives. Between 1921 and 1927, when her star began to set, she made 19 pictures. Some of their titles are enough to describe their contents: "Forbidden Paradise," "The Secret Hour," "One Night." One was called "The Charmer." Another "Men."

Pola believed in "mystery." Her dogs were not ordinary dogs, they were "Saluki hounds descended from the hunting dogs of the pharaohs of ancient Egypt." For Rudolph Valentino the handsome hero whose hair was as sleek as a phonograph record, she confessed undying love. Even though Valentino was silent on the matter.

By 1927 the market for vamps was declining and a rival had appeared. Gloria Swanson. Tales of the feud between the two women were gulped down by fans the world over.

After 1928 Pola appeared only rarely on film. The arrival of Hollywood there were so many flowers on the train that she couldn't disembark. Now, aged 67, she is starting again. Those who remember her great days will be inspired by this example of courage and by the indestructibility of spirit and talent.

Who's Who Of Ghosts

Stratford Beacon-Herald

Two enterprising librarians in Britain have formed a "Who's Who of Ghosts" under the auspices of Wiltshire and Berkshire.

One librarian said seven ghosts are listed by Messrs. Keith Harry and Mark Child in their glossary. They were driven to writing the book because they had so many inquiries at their library about — naturally! The book, published at one-and-sixpence, is rapidly becoming a best seller, which makes it materially worth while!

Hauntings go back some 600 years, coming up to modern times when a Farrington (Berkshire) family had to leave its cottage because of "heard dumpings, rumblings and loud bangs".

Favorite ghost of the authors is a "Royalist gentleman who walks along the road by one branch library at Moredon with his head under his arm", while a 15th century beretic, Reginald Cobham, still strolls through Langley Burrell in Wiltshire, "as dated as the day he was burnt at the stake in 1413".

Inner Tubes Now Lack Zip

Ottawa Journal

It's getting harder these days to find a red rubber inner tube and the manufacture of both slingshots and clothespin guns are suffering the consequences as any father engaged in this activity will tell you.

Tire people in Ottawa say the only source of used red rubber tubes is from vintage cars or old farm tractors which are in short supply.

New red tubes haven't been made for a dozen years now and their demise is attributed to the change from natural to synthetic rubber. However, scientists maintain that carbon black and other chemical compounds now are blended with rubber in place of the antimony sulphide which used to give rubber their red color.

Lamentably, tubes are made primarily for automobiles and the black compounds give better quality qualities even if they lack the "zing" the good old slingshots and clothespin guns used to have.

Longer Autos?

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

We will be getting a report from Detroit that the 1965 model automobiles will "reflect the belief the manufacturers that the demand for the compact car has largely run its course and that the buyer again wants a longer and more powerful auto." If this is so, and we do not believe it is, the buyers will still have the option of purchasing a sensible-size foreign-made machine. If the new models flop, American manufacturers can blame themselves for stimulating the demand for the monsters.

Brain Lacks Blood Flow Explains Defective Vision

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My wife has had trouble with closing of the veins in the neck and the near loss of sight of one eye, which the doctor says is caused by a reduced flow of blood to the brain. He tells us that an operation may correct this condition and may prevent a possible stroke. — B. L.

Yes, except that the trouble is in the arteries rather than in the veins. (Arteries carry blood; veins return blood to the heart and lungs.)

Hardening, narrowing and partial obstruction of either of the carotid arteries reduces the flow of blood to the brain. Reduction of the blood supply can, indeed, interfere with the operation of the brain or some parts of it. That explains the defective vision.

If the interference with blood flow is acute, then the result is a stroke or severe damage to some part of the brain.

A rapid method of detecting this problem is pressing gently but firmly on the artery on one side of the neck, then on the other. If one side is largely shut off and the other open, pressing on the clogged one has little effect. But pressing on the open one, and thus shutting it off, can cause unconsciousness, since the total flow is being shut off. (Naturally the pressure is stopped at once.)

This gives you an approximate idea of the trouble and the location. But then precise diagnosis is accomplished with an arteriogram. This involves injecting a dye into the artery while X-rays show the dye's complete. Thus you get a picture of precisely where and how much the artery is affected.

If this point is in the neck, and thus accessible for surgery, an operation may be very effective. But if the narrowed place is farther up, it may not be accessible.

Depending on the extent and exact location of the defect, correction may be accomplished either by opening the arteries and removing obstructing material, or by creating a bypass so blood can flow freely around it.

It can be, in that it can interfere with vitamin absorption. I doubt that many people, if any, need it on a daily basis anyway, if see no harm in the occasional use of mineral oil, however, when it is really needed. It is a gentle, instead of irritating like purgatives. If you have such constipation problems as to think you need something every day, then I strongly suggest you read my booklet "The Way to Stop Constipation." (Send 25 cents in coin and stamped self-addressed envelope to Dr. Molner, in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill. for a copy.)

Dear Dr. Molner: I have an exercise cycle (just like a bicycle except no seat) and I have an adjustment to make pumping harder or easier. I wonder if riding this benefits the body as much as a regular bicycle?

I am a bit have been deaf for years (nerve deafness) which makes it risky for me to do any bicycling on the street.

How much (or how many miles — there's a meter on the cycle) should I do daily in order to benefit? — J. B.

The exercise is just as good with your cycle. The principal disadvantage, really, are the hills the scenery lacks variety, and you can't have the fun of coasting down hill. On the other hand, you can do your riding regardless of weather or time of year.

Fifteen minutes a day of good brisk pumping will keep your muscles toned up; make it longer (or more miles on the meter) if you feel like it.

British View Of Goldwater

Manchester Guardian Weekly

The platform program presented to the Republican convention at San Francisco last week must stand condemned as a shocking travesty of all the best traditions of a great political party. More than this, in embodying almost all the worst aspects of a certain strain of American thought, it can be depended upon to feed feelings of anti - Americanism throughout the world. Senator Goldwater has said "that he has a low opinion of the intellectuals" and that "at best they are a packet of misinformation and lies." In view of what has emerged one can confirm that, in this context at least, he is right.

Not only does the document depart from the 1960 platform on several key issues, it also indulges in a total indictment of the Administration's record. This could be excused as being in the nature of party politics at such a time were it not for the magnitude of the distortions involved. The Democrats under President Johnson are described as the federal executive which in ten has been at the defeat of communism but an effort to achieve parity of power." The Kennedy Administration is charged with "unjustified and unwise concessions by extravagant campaign promises without fulfilment." The South Vietnamese members of the Democratic administration has been the setting of limits on American military effort to act. It has turned its back on the captive peoples of Eastern Europe and "has stood by as a wire barricade in Berlin became a wall of shame, defacing that great city, humiliating every American, and disgracing the free everywhere." There are wild words, certainly of the great issues they purport to describe.

Against such a garish display of emotional extremism even the gesture of full implementation of a faithful conservatism promised with regard to the Far East would be received as a sinister note. As Joseph Colino of the New York assembly last remarked in Chicago, "a peculiarly apt connotation coming from these fellow" — adding that a gun is loaded or administered, not executed.

The wonder is that the scandalous spectacle of Republican reaction in San Francisco has aroused as "utterly inadequate." That is based on an understatement. Governor Rockefeller's speech was in his alarm that it "fails to represent the spirit, beliefs, and deep concerns of the people." The platform document rests on a strange contradiction which ought to be obvious even to the most naive followers in the Republican party. It proposes a policy of elimination of Federal power square with getting tough with China and the Soviet Union? If Federal spending is to be reduced by not less than $5 billions, and Washington is to be demoted to the status of a picturesque Williamsburg, where is the nuclear power centre of the omnipotent and omnipresent Goldwater crusade to be placed? To such questions it seems unlikely that there can be any answers based on the facts of the world as it is in 1964.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — Industrial issues were sharply lower on the stock market today as investors watched developments between the United States and North Viet Nam.

Losses to key blue-chip stocks ran well past a point and the industrial index sagged 1.78 to 157.26 its heftiest loss since June 4.

CPR and Distillers Seagrams were down 1¾ each to 44¾ and 60½ respectively. Massey-Ferguson gave up 1⅛ to 24¾, Bank of Montreal 1⅛ to 68 and Trans-Canada Pipe Lines and Walker Gooderham 1 each to 40½ and 36½.

In speculative mining issues, Windfall dipped as much as 18 cents to 69 cents before recovering to a nine-cent loss at 69 cents.

Senior base metals also felt the selling pressure. Noranda sagged ⅜ to 47⅞, inco ¾ to 83 and Falconbridge ⅛ to 72.

On index, golds were down .47 to 134.57, base metals .23 to 64.34, western oils .66 to 95.30 and the Exchange index 1.53 to 141.24. Volume at 11 a.m. was 1,274,000 shares compared with 1,069,000 shares traded at the same time Tuesday.

A late rally ran out of steam on Tuesday's market, when trading was lightest in almost a month.

Massey-Ferguson dipped 1⅛ to 23¾ and Bank of Nova Scotia 1 to 77¼ in leading the main list lower. Distillers Seagram gave up to 69¾, Canada Iron and Aluminium ¾ each to 39½ and 31½, Algoma Steel ¼ to 74 and Royal Bank ¼ to 78¼.

There were a few winners in the list with scattered support going to the bank stocks.

Windfall, whose dramatic plunge Friday was the talk of the financial community, lost further favor with a 26-cent fall 70 cents. In its more glamorous days last month it sold as high as $5.60. There was some evidence that the crash Friday had soured speculators. Trading slowed and most issues which have not made solid reports on progress were lower.

OTHER SHOW DECLINE

Goldfields was down five cents to 40, National Explor. ation 3½ cents to 219, Glenfour cents to 20 and PCE Exploration two cents to 40.

Raglan, which has already outlined commercial nickel-copper ore on its Ungava property, was ahead 30 cents to $3.15.

Canadian Dyno, which owns 2,800,000 shares of Raglan, was ahead six cents to $2.02. Norbeau was up 22 cents to $1.40.

Senior base metals were weak. Labrador was off 2 at 31 while Hudson Bay gave up ¾ to 65⅜. Rio Algom, the troubled former Uranium giant, was down 25 cents to 29.05.

Dome slipped ¼ to 31 in golds.

Volume for the day was 4,458,000 shares, the lowest since July 8 when 4,237,000 shares changed hands. Volume Friday was 7,831,000 shares.

On index, industrials were down .54 to 159.64, golds .21 to 135.04, base metals .49 to 64.57, western oils 1.78 to 96.45 and the exchange index .38 to 148.85.

quarters of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization, the United States called an urgent meeting today of the permanent SEATO council. SEATO's members—the United States, British, France, New Zealand, Pakistan, the Philippines and Thailand—are pledged to defend the area against Communist aggression.

An unconfirmed report, from reliable military sources in Bangkok who refused to be quoted by name, said the U.S. Pacific fleet has been placed on the alert and a major show of force was expected off the coast of North Viet Nam.

All ships at the U.S. naval base at Subic Bay, in the Philippines, were reported putting out into the South China Sea, but only as a precaution against approaching typhoon Ida. A spokesman at the base said so far the incidents in the Gulf of Tonkin had no effect on the movements of ships from the base. U.S. forces in Thailand—about 3,000 advisory, support and technical personnel—were not on special alert.

South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Khanh, after a conference with U.S. Ambassador Maxwell Taylor and an eight-hour cabinet meeting, announced his government "supports the firm reaction of the United States."

MAY UNIFY COMMAND

The organization of a unified command in South Viet Nam, similar to the one created in South Korea during the Korean War, appeared imminent. A general war alert in South Viet Nam also appeared imminent.

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander of U.S. forces in South Viet Nam, conferred separately with the South Vietnamese defence minister, Maj.-Gen. Tran Thien Khiem.

The South Vietnamese cabinet went into emergency session after Taylor's report on Khanh.

Despite the deepening crisis, a U.S. spokesman said there was no immediate expectation of evacuating any of the 700 or so dependents of U.S. civilians in South Viet Nam. American civilians were being asked to take "normal precautions" a spokesman said. This means staying at home.

the Conservatives' plebiscite amendment and the agreed time for the final stage of the flag debate.

OPPOSE LIMIT

Key to the outcome of the negotiations lay in the words "time limit." A number of Conservatives argued Tuesday night that the question of a Canadian flag is not something to be decided within a time limit.

Mr. Pearson and Mr. Douglas have accused the Conservatives of conducting a filibuster to delay resumption of the flag debate, scheduled by the government to follow interim apply and one other measure.

Next item on the Commons schedule is a bill to put into effect tax-sharing arrangements made with the provinces. This was debated for two days in early July and both Liberals and Conservatives expect another long debate before passage, further delaying the flag debate.

Expect Heavy Crop Yields For Most Ontario Farmers

TORONTO (CP) — Agricultural officials are predicting heavy crop yields for most Ontario farmers as the result of good growing weather this season.

Kenneth Standing of Chatham, secretary of the Ontario Soya Bean Growers' Marketing Board, said Soya bean production probably will rise to about 6,000,000 bushels this year from the 4,500,000-bushels last year.

J. A. Howard of Hamilton, secretary of the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Marketing Board, reported tomato acreage contracted by processing companies is up by 3,000 acres to about 23,000 acres. Higher acreages have also been contracted for peas, corn, and green and wax beans.

Mr. Howard, also secretary of the Ontario Berry Growers' Marketing Board, said strawberry and raspberry crops were also bigger this year.

The Ontario Wheat Producers' Marketing Board at Chatham said winter wheat production is expected to be about 18,500,000 bushels. Last season 17,768,000 bushels were produced;

Corn is excellent in most areas.

EXPECT MORE FRUIT

Increases are expected in this year's production of most fruits, the Ontario Department of Agriculture said. Sour cherry output is expected to rise about 40 per cent, pear production 27 per cent, peaches 15 per cent and grapes five per cent.

An official of the Ontario bean growers limited said production of white beans will probably rise about 25 per cent.

Ontario's tobacco planting this year has been cut to about 26,000 acres from 39,000 last year, down from the 180,000,000 pounds last year and the smallest poundage since 1955.

mara disclosed early today that "substantial military reinforcements" are being moved into Southeast Asia.

The president called the air strikes a "positive reply" to the attacks on U.S. destroyers in the Gulf of Tonkin off North Viet Nam.

"Yet our response, for the present, will be limited and fitting," he added. "We Americans know, although others appear to forget, the risks of spreading conflict—we still seek no wider war."

Even as he was speaking, Johnson's air action is now in execution against gun boats and certain supporting facilities in North Viet Nam which have been used in these hostile operations" against the U.S. ships.

ATTACKS REPEATED . .

Johnson said Sunday's PT boat attacks on the destroyer Maddox were repeated Tuesday against two destroyers and "we believe at least two of the attacking boats were sunk. There were no U.S. losses."

The president said he had directed Ambassador Adlai Stevenson to raise "immediately and urgently" before the UN Security Council the torpedo boat assaults which the United States charges were unprovoked and in international waters. Stevenson, breaking off a Maine vacation, immediately called for the session and it was swiftly scheduled for today.

Informed sources said in London that Britain could condemn as a breach of the UN charter the North Vietnamese PT boat attack before the Security Council and will support the American position.

Britain has a particularly sensitive stake in the area since it is co-chairman of the 1954 Geneva conference which ended the seven-year war in the then French Indochina states of Viet Nam, Laos and Cambodia.

President Johnson also sent a message to French President de Gaulle at his country home outside Paris, explaining the American stand. De Gaulle has said neutralization for all of Viet Nam is the only solution to the crisis, with withdrawal of all foreign troops.

In the first indication of Peking's reaction to Johnson's announcement, the Chinese Communist New Evening Post warned today that Red China "will not wait until the flames of war come too close" before retaliating against what it called provocative U.S. attacks in the Tonkin Gulf area.

The Soviet news agency Tass reported Johnson's announcement without comment in a nine-line dispatch.

In Bangkok, Thailand, the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization council representatives held an emergency meeting today to discuss the situation.

North Viet Nam, in its broadcast early today, asserted the American charge of another PT boat raid Tuesday was "sheer fabrication by the U.S. imperialists aimed at covering up their illegal acts which brazenly violated the security of the democratic republic of (North) Viet Nam and are aggravating further the situation in Southeast Asia."

AREAS UNKNOWN

In a press briefing after the president spoke, McNamara declined to point out just what areas in North Viet Nam were being hit by planes from aircraft carriers.

"We are not attacking Hanoi," but only the PT boats and their supporting bases, McNamara said in the jammed, after-midnight conference at the Pentagon.

In a statement, the defence secretary also disclosed other military movements, saying:

"In view of the unprovoked and deliberate attack in international waters upon U.S. naval vessels, the United States has taken the precaution of moving substantial military reinforcements to Southeast Asia.

"It is also making replacement deployments to the Western Pacific from the continental United States."

US sources said they do not expect much civilian loss of life from the U.S. bombing because the torpedo boat facilities are located away from populated areas. U.S. intelligence figures the North Vietnamese have about 30 to 40 torpedo boats in all.

McNamara said aircraft from the carriers Ticonderoga and Constellation had already hit bases from which the North Vietnamese PT boats operated and added: "Our naval aircraft have conducted strikes against certain other targets directly supporting the operation of the PT boats."

SONARLAW

District Man Is Administrator Of New Hospital

BONARLAW — Mr. Carl McKeown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred McKeown has been appointed administrator for the new $600,000 Sandringham hospital at Victoria. Carl was born and educated at Bonarlaw, 12th concession of Rawdon where he attended the 12th line school, later going to Vancouver where he married and made his home.

Health minister Eric Martin officially opened the new hospital for the care of the aged. The 78-bed private hospital has a staff of 50, with around the clock nursing. Mrs. Florence Roberts is superintendent.

Because of the shortage of acute hospital beds Mr. Martin urged the medical profession to make more use of private hospitals, so that acute beds can be vacated. Mr. Martin said he hoped to see hospital insurance covering such hospitals.

The hospital was dedicated by Rev. J. A. Roberts at the opening ceremony, and Mr. Martin said it was the only one of five private hospitals he had opened recently to be dedicated. It is of Tudor design with colonial furniture and decorating tones. It is situated on a two acre site in a cluster of English oaks.

tees have clamped close direction over the union and ended disruptions of shipping. The economy had benefitted from the actions of the trustees.

Justice Minister Favreau intervened to defend Judge Harold W. Pope of Moose Jaw, Sask., who was accused Thursday by Jack McIntosh (PC — Swift Current-Maple Creek) of submitting a political and biased report on a public inquiry into 1963 payments by the Prairie Farm Assistance Agency.

The minister said Judge Pope a competent, impartial jurist. He charged Mr. McIntosh with "imputing scandalous motives" to the judge in a personal attack that the minister found unfounded, unfair and unparliamentary.

Industry Minister Drury and Finance Minister Gordon replied briefly to opposition questions on the state of the economy.

Alvin Hamilton, former Conservative agriculture minister, called the Pope report "very dubious." He denied Judge Pope's conclusion that the inquiry produced evidence of irregularities in PFAA payments to some farmers last year.

Later Maj.-Gen. Joseph Mobutu, commander-in-chief of the Congolese Army, said rebels had seized a vacated army camp inside Stanleyville and troops had been sent to rout them.

Most of the rebels carried spears, but they are skilled bush fighters. In many encounters the army troops have fled before the howling tribesmen who believe they are protected from bullets by witchcraft.

The fall of Stanleyville would cut the entire northeastern Congo off from control by Leopoldville and further hamstring Premier Moise Tshombe's efforts to pacify and unite the turbulent country. Rebel leader Gaston Emile Soumialot probably would claim the city as capital of the "popular republic of The Congo" he recently proclaimed.

SET PRICE CEILINGS

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—President Arturo Illia's government put price ceilings on 12 basic foods in Argentina Wednesday in a move to halt the sharp rise in living costs. Wholesale and retail ceilings were set on the price of cheese, flour, spaghetti, butter, milk and other staples.

MR. AND MRS. LEO ANTHONY MERAW

Meraw – Blakely

Pink and white gladioli adorned the altar in St. Carthagh's Roman Catholic Church, Tweed, for the marriage on Saturday, July 11, of Gwenyth Jacqueline Blakely, Oshawa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Blakely of Tweed, to Leo Anthony Meraw, Oshawa, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Meraw of Tweed. Rev. Dean Baker officiated at the ceremony with Father Cardy and Rev. William Burns also present.

Traditional wedding music was rendered by Sister Mary Carmel Theresa who also accompanied the soloist, Mr. Michael Healey. The altar boys for the ceremony were Michael Rashotte and Peter Cassidy.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length bridal gown of lace over taffeta featuring a scalloped neckline and long lily-point lace sleeves. An elbow-length veil of nylon tulle was caught by a white rose cluster. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The maid of honor, Miss Patricia Anne LeSage was dressed in a street-length dress of shrimp colored brocade designed in princess style, a matching wedding ring headdress, white accessories and carried a bouquet of white and blue tinted mums. The bridesmaids, Miss Janice Campion of Peterborough, cousin of the bride and Miss Clair Meraw, sister of the bridegroom, were similarly attired and carried bouquets of white and blue tinted mums.

MR. AND MRS. BARRY LAWRENCE KELLS

Kells – Kidd

Rev. R. G. Newman was the officiating clergyman, assisted by Rev. H. W. Hamilton, rector of Christ Anglican Church, Sarnia, at Inglewood United Church, for the wedding of Judith Ann Kidd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Morley Kidd of Inglewood to Barry Lawrence Christie Kells of Belleville and Brampton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Andrew Kells of Belleville.

Traditional wedding music was played by the organist, Mrs. H. Sprait, who also accompanied the soloist, Mrs. W. Gould. Lilacs were used as the predominant theme in flower arrangements at the church, while at the bride's home wedding bells, daisies and roses were used.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of silk organza over peau de soie with A-line skirt and square chapel train. The bodice was topped with lace in a daisy pattern, and she wore a veil of silk illusion. Her flowers were a cascade of daisies.

Miss Brenda Calvert of Brampton, was maid of honor and Miss Marlene Dietrich of Toronto was bridesmaid. Their dresses were pale turquoise chiffon with draped necklines, and they carried bouquets of daisies.

The flower girl was Miss Cynthia Kidd of Inglewood whose dress was fashioned of the same fabric as the bridesmaid's, with bertha collar and flounced skirt. She carried a basket of flowers.

Groomsman was Mr. Robert Brearly of Toronto and the usher was Mr. John Kidd of Inglewood.

A reception was held at the Terra Cotta Inn where the bride's mother received, wearing a jacket dress of beige lace with matching accessories and a deep rose corsage.

She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who wore a dress of rose and smething lace and shantung and a corsage of pink roses and sweet peas.

For a wedding trip to the Georgian Bay area the bride chose a suit of navy silk shantung and white fuille hat. Her corsage was Sweetheart...roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Kells are residing at Scottwood Towers Apts., Scott Street, Brampton.

A miscellaneous shower honoring the bride was given by Mrs. Andrew Greasy of Oshawa, and a linen shower was given by Miss Brenda Calvert of Brampton.

WEST INDIAN GIRLS

A club for West Indian girls at Montreal YWCA, is coming to Canada under an agreement between the Canadian government and the overnment of West Indies and British Guiana. Similar clubs have been functioning for the past few years in Ottawa and Toronto. The girls do domestic work for one year and find it difficult to adapt themselves and become integrated into Canadian life.

The YWCA forms a group and meets with a social worker to plan a program. They meet once a week for various activities, have suppers and spend evenings together. This has helped girls have a greater understanding of Canadian ways of life and a feeling of belonging, a great help in promoting integration.

These girls are between 24 and 27 years of age. Some of the girls are taking courses to prepare themselves of other employment when their year of domestic service, is up.

Clubs of this kind make immigrants feel at home and take responsibility.

A draw was won by Mrs. Vandervelde.

Nepalese Girls Make Move to 'Smarten Up'

By PETER JACKSON

KATMANDU Reuters)—Katmandu's teen-agers have foiled their elders with their latest fashions just as much as youths in other parts of the world.

This Nepal capital, with its ancient pagoda temples and colorful wayside shrines, has often seemed to epitomize the "mysterious East."

One contributor to the local daily newspaper, The Motherland, wrote recently about figure-hugging clothes worn by girls.

"We in Katmandu are rubbing shoulders with hundreds of living Lolitas these days. . . . Seemingly conservative but culturally feeble parents do not seem to realize for a moment what havoc their 'innocent babies' are creating in the minds of men. . . ."

The fashions arousing special comment are modifications of Indian Punjabi dress, with long trousers under a knee-length tunic.

TIGHT TUNICS

Nepalese girls, like their Indian sisters, have "smartened up" the styles by making the tunics ankle-tight. Often the girls can barely hobble along.

The all-enveloping scarf, too, is often made of nylon and worn with a tight bodice.

Intricate hairdos combine with the clothes to have just as devastating an effect as some Western styles.

But the girls are not without their defenders. One wrote Jo the same newspaper: "Does the author realize that dress and make-up alone does not make a woman a Lolita?

"What about the men who sport skin - tight drain - pipe pants? Is it not a matter of social justice that if one goes, the other also must follow suit?"

The new styles may herald a social revolution in a land where almost all marriages are arranged by parents even before puberty, and where the bride and groom often never see each other before their wedding.

ENCOURAGES PLANTS

The New Zealand government is to encourage the establishment of fish processing plants by lending money to anyone for such a purpose.

Bringing Up Baby

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GERBER, MOTHER OF 5

It's a new kind of independence for baby when he pulls himself to his feet for the first time. However, while getting up is relatively easy, it's a bit harder to catch the knack of sitting down again. If you suddenly find your little daredevil hanging on to play pen bars for dear life, take his hands and let him down gently. After you come to his rescue a few times, he'll stop doing the downhill side on his own. And when he finds a "sitdown strike" doesn't hurt particularly, your baby will move on to new experiments.

Muscle builder for standees or sitters. Protein's important when it comes to growth and muscle development. And there's protein aplenty in Gerber Strained Meats. Meat Dinners . . . because they have 2 times as much meat as our regular vegetables and juice combination. Add to this extra meat, the flavourful goodness of garden vegetables and you get nutrition man dreams about. Ready to bring cries of approval from any little athlete . . . boy or girl. 8 varieties.

Play pen pointers. As soon as baby begins to creep or stand the play pen becomes less desirable. But since you'll still want baby to stay put from time to time it's wise to follow some kind of routine . . . and keep the pen a pleasurable place to come home to.

- If you put baby in his pen about the same times each day, he'll come to accept this routine.
- A busy baby is a contented baby. By providing different doodlebugs each day, you keep his homestead a happy one.

Nutrition notations. Did you know there's a natural nutritional extra in Gerber Rice Cereal? In addition to a rich natural source of vitamin-B complex, Enfelsia is flavour to delight baby. Gerber Baby Foods, Niagara Falls, Canada.

Successful Living

Wife's Guilty Feelings Needless, Hubby at Fault

DEAR DORIS — I'm about to be called back to work and I need your advice. My husband says to suit myself. But on the other hand he says if I go to work we could get a car or go on a vacation next summer, which we never have done since we were married.

You know, Doris, I feel guilty going to work and leaving my youngest daughter with a sitter. (We have six). On the other hand I feel guilty about not getting us that car this year. If I don't take this job I'll probably never be able to get a job paying that much later, when she is in school all day.

DORIS CLARK

When I worked before I went around like mad till midnight getting things done at home. My husband watched TV and when I asked him to help he'd say "Leave it. It doesn't have to be done." Am I being too fussy? — GUILTY EITHER WAY.

DEAR GUILTY — "Suit yourself" is not a fair answer. If you take on outside work your marriage partner takes on some of the chores. Or you stay home and be a wife and mother.

Your husband is the one who should be feeling guilty.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — I have a nice looking girl who is well-mannered. There is one thing that bothers me though and that is her brother. Wherever I go with my girl he comes without permission and spoils our fun. What can I do to keep him from bothering us? — BEING BUGGED.

DEAR BUGGED — The more the merrier. Have your fun in groups. Solo dates, in the evenings, are for later — much later!

• • •

DEAR DORIS —
(a) What can you do for brittle nails?
(b) How can you get rid of dandruff?
(c) How do you become a witty conversationalist?

JEANIE.

DEAR JEANIE —
(a) Diet is probably the culprit. You may need more milk, which supplies the calcium for strong nails (also bones and teeth.) Ask your doctor about this, in your case.
(b) This low grade infection is best controlled through cleanliness and good hair care. A leaflet on this is going to you. (Available to others sending in ten cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)
(c) By practice. By keeping alert. By thinking funny. By forgetting yourself. I'm sending you my "Tips on Talking."

• • •

Confidential to WAITING — Do like the other girls do: say you don't believe in going steady. Decline dates without unfriendliness. Your persistence can outdistance his; which is really the kindest way, in the end.

• • •

(Longer, fuller replies went to those correspondents enclosing a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Speaking Personally

By Gladys Ward

AND HARD TO PLEASE

At thirteen, fourteen and fifteen nothing is so important to a girl as conforming to the other girls at school or to her own group. This is a time of physical and mental development and maturity. Her clothes must look the same, her hair must be done in the same style, she must follow every new fad and fancy that catches the imagination of other teenaged girls.

An incident in my own early teens illustrates this feeling of the necessity to conform. My mother had knit a pair of mittens for me. There was nothing wrong with them, they were beautifully done, because my mother was an excellent knitter, but I refused to wear them because "all the other kids" were wearing gloves that year.

My mother insisted that I wear them, so I would put them on and as soon as I was out of sight I would put them in my pocket and go to school without hand covering of any kind. All that winter, even in severe weather and with blue hands I preferred to suffer rather than wear something different from the rest of my friends. Then I "lost" one of the mittens and that settled the problem.

Thank goodness that is just one of the "phases" that girls go through that parents hear so much about. The only trouble is the poor parents know that one phase follows another, and each one seems more exasperating than the previous one.

By the time she is sixteen a girl will probably start experimenting with her own style, and trying to become an individual in her own right, but in the early teens she feels compelled to be part of the crowd. And anyone who is 'different' stands on the sidelines.

Later in life of course the last thing a girl wants is to find another wearing the same dress as she is, or the same hat, or the same anything. She would consider it a social disaster to find someone at the same dance wearing a dress like hers. Ah, woman!

As said of Cleopatra (Shakespeare's, not Elizabeth Taylor's) "Age cannot wither nor custom stale, her infinite variety."

* * *

"NEVER CRY WOLF"

One of my favorite Canadian authors is Farley Mowat. Older readers may remember his father, Angus Mowat, who was librarian here at one time at Corby Public Library.

Farley's story of the "Dog Who Wouldn't Be" is delightful. In his new book, "Never Cry Wolf" he describes his experiences as an employe of the Dominion Wildlife service hired at the munificent sum of $120 a month to investigate complaints that wolves were killing all the deer in the Barren Lands of Central Keewatin. He was sent to do research on the Canis Lupus problem, or in English, wolves. With his rollicking, robust humor he makes his story an exceedingly funny adventure.

He makes characters of the wolves, and the reader becomes so involved in the lives of George, Angeline, their four cubs, and Uncle Albert that one actually feels like weeping at the last sentences of the book.

The author's immediate destination was Churchill on the western shore of Hudson Bay. From there he was to find his way to the desolate wastes of the subarctic Barren Lands.

One of his chapters tells of his attempt to get in touch with his superiors in Ottawa to get instructions. He is stranded on the ice on a lake, hundreds of miles from any living person, with his gear piled on the ice beside him. In desperation he gets his radio set up to try to communicate with Ottawa and what he should do. The only station he can raise is in South America and this sets up a chain reaction that has to be read to be believed.

Just a word of warning. If you are a bit squeamish or have a weak stomach, skip chapter six.

Nine-Tenths Coats Shown By Designer

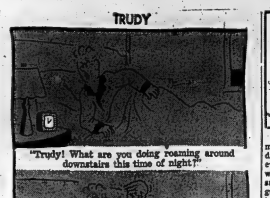
By LOUISE HICKMAN

PARIS (AP)—Coats were the biggest news in the fall and winter collection of Balenciaga, shown Tuesday for buyers only.

Recognized as the master of the French couture, Balenciaga along with Givenchy sets rules that do not permit the press to see new fashions until weeks after collections-time.

Nine - tenths coats, showing three inches at most of the skirt underneath, made a big impression in the Balenciaga show.

Many coats were collarless, and for afternoon and evening, also buttonless — to be worn wrapped or open edge-to-edge.



The small, rolled and pointed collar known to experts as "THE Balenciaga collar" may be on its way out. Many suit jackets were collarless, too, and had edge-to-edge closings, with fabric-loop buttonholes.

Balenciaga showed deep, roomy sleeves on slinky coats. Several bloused coats were felt to be significant. They were slim, bloused only in back and belted. A bloused-back purple afternoon coat had a tremendous black satin sash that tied on one side.

JACKETS LARGER

Suit jackets were said to be larger, longer and wider Skirts were soft and shirred with pockets in the seams. There was no change in skirt length. It continues at a just-covering-the-knee level.

Though Balenciaga was reported to have shown more color than Givenchy, who preferred to buyers Monday, the over-all look was still sombre, with yarn-dyed greys particularly important. Balenciaga, like Givenchy, showed very little camel, until now a favorite and almost a hallmark of designers.

Apparently Givenchy's show was the more sensational of the two press - excluded presentations.

Buyers felt that it was full of movement and detail that were a welcome departure from the stark, understated, modern look.

Neither indicated any particular passion for pants. They appeared just once in each collection, to wear at home. Pants were a recurring theme in other Paris collections this season, and many variations were shown.

Women's Institutes

REDNERSVILLE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Clarence Vanclief who welcomed all present. Plans were discussed on displays for Belleville and Picton fairs. The Trent Valley area convention was announced for Sept. 14 and 15 at Club Canara.

A solo was rendered by Mrs. Ronald Giles and a paper on agriculture by Mrs. Hugh Weese. Pictures of Florida and around home were shown by Mrs. R. Wannamaker and enjoyed by all.

A vote of thanks was extended to the hostess and all taking part by Mrs. Alfred Cairns.

Lunch was served and a social time enjoyed.

Main Course Savory Pie

by Mary Moore

Two requirements had to be met: one was for a company dish that could be made in the evening by a woman employed with a doctor husband and two small children. Before invited guests arrived the next evening she wanted to reheat it without doing it any harm. The second requirement was that it should be different and sophisticated.

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

Glazed Cottage Roll; Cinnamon Apples or Spiced Crabs; Creamed Spinach; Sliced Carrots; Orange Sherbet; Blueberry Muffins (see Tuesday); Coffee.

I racked my brain and came up with a Canadianized version of the Quiche Lorraine recipe given in this column 1½ years ago. I made it from start to finish then chilled it in the refrigerator 24 hours then phoned my friend and asked her to bring her family to dinner after office hours. I reheated the dish at 200 deg. Fahr. for one hour and served it and it came up to requirements. In other words it was mighty good! She copied the recipe to use for her guest meal.

Here are the steps for making this unusual and highly recommended main course pie. It has a third virtue: you may use up leftover meat.

Lovely served with hot chili sauce. Serves 6 as a main course or 8 to 12 if cut in smaller wedges for a late evening snack with tea or coffee.

CANADIANIZED QUICHE LORRAINE (a meat-cheese-custard pie that may be made in advance):

Pastry: 1¼ cups unsifted all-purpose flour, 1-3 cup good quality shortening, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons cold water.

Filling: 4 large eggs (or 6 medium) slightly beaten, 1½ cups milk (or 1 cup milk and ¾ cup cream), ½ teaspoon salt, shake of pepper (preferably white), ½ lb. shredded old Cheddar or Swiss cheese, ¾ cup (one 6-oz. can) finely shredded corned beef or ¾ cup ground beef or turkey or chicken or ham.

To make the pastry measure flour and salt into mixing bowl, cut in shortening and butter with pastry blender until size of small peas and drizzle water over, tossing with fork until all flour is dampened. Press into ball, roll out on lightly floured board to fit deep 9" pie plate. Line pie plate and flute edge between thumb and fingers. Chill pastry while you combine filling. Beat eggs slightly (you can use the bowl you made the pastry in without washing it) and add milk, salt, pepper, shredded cheese and shredded corned beef or ground meat. Pour into chilled pie crust. (Do this near the oven because it is filled nearly to brim.) Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 40 to 50 minutes, or until top is golden brown and custard is set. If desired serve at once or cool and chill in refrigerator. It made a day in advance, to reheat it place in oven of 200 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

HOSTESS SHOULD CONSIDER GUEST'S COMFORT

The considerate summer hostess not only decides what her guests will eat but also how they should dress.

This may sound dictatorial to some gentle readers, and to others it might seem like meddling in the privacy of others.

Before the gentle ones turn into tigers, let me explain that I'm referring to the hot-weather comfort of guests, particularly on those sweltering afternoons and evenings when neither a breeze nor an air-conditioner is stirring.

There's something about a perspiring man that gets me hot under the collar, too. Just the sight of him mopping his brow or tugging at his tie makes me wish I could apply cold towels to his fevered brow.

The situation becomes a matter of social injustice when I glance around the room or patio at a highly informal gathering and see the cool comfort of some rugged individuals in open necked sports shirts and, if it's a country setting, in walking shorts.

What happens, of course, is that the hostess has neglected to mention that her guests, men included, should dress informally. Later she's apt to confess she exacted the men to be comfortable in the blistering heat, but didn't think it was proper for her to say so.

The result of her neglect is that each man has to make his own eleventh hour decision — often with the help of his formally - minded wife, who likes her husband to "look neat," meaning tie, jacket and starched to the gills even for a picnic on the back patio at high noon. The result, from the hostess' viewpoint, is an uncomfortable-looking group of guests in a wide assortment of dress.

The courageous hostess of course could announce that men wearing ties and jackets may remove them. But this rarely happens, because she thinks it's none of her business.

Yet many of her guests during the year are apt to receive printed invitations on which the type of dress is specified, from "white tie," to "black tie" to "informal." The dress for the women follows suit, and, if there's any doubt, she can always worm the information out of the hostess or a more-knowing guest.

There's no reason why a party giver cannot insure the comfort of guests in above-90 temperatures by specifying informal garb for an informal party. They will appreciate her thoughtfulness and nobody, even the most stuffy, can object.

Though she may be a "dictator" about her menu, her name will be hallowed by her cool male friends.

Life Has Its Privileges — Best to Face up to It

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a boy 10 years old who would like you to answer a question for me if you can. Why do parents have two sets of laws, one for themselves and one for their children? I am thinking of one special law in our house which is awful.

ANN LANDERS

When I spill something on the tablecloth, especially grape juice, I have to leave the dining room table and go eat in the kitchen on the cooking board. When one of my parents spill something they say, "Oh, for Heaven's sake" — and go right on eating at the table and that is all there is to it.

Why can parents do something and think it is just fine but when their children do the very same thing they get punished? Will you please answer this? Thank you. — BOBBY.

* * *

DEAR BOBBY — There is an old army expression that goes like this. "R.H.I.P." It means "Rank has its privileges." And it's the same way in life, so you'd better face up to it.

When an adult spills something on the tablecloth it is called an accident. When a child spills something it is called carelessness. I don't see any difference myself. Furthermore, I don't think a child should be sent away from the table when he spills something — not even grape juice.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I have a neighbor who is so helpful I am just about ready to wring her neck. I work days and my husband works nights. I leave the house at 8:30 a.m. The minute I leave for work this neighbor comes over to make my husband a "nice, hot breakfast" and clean up my kitchen.

Sometimes she waxes the linoleum and rearranges my cupboards. One day she changed everything around and I went crazy looking for the mustard.

I don't want this woman in my house and have told her so. It goes in one ear and out the other. She says she enjoys being neighborly.

In the meantime the neighbors have plenty to say and I'm beginning to wonder if it is just gossip — or if perhaps this woman is giving my husband more than breakfast.

Please tell me what to do about it. — AGGIE.

* * *

DEAR AGGIE — Get on the night shift, Toots.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS —I loved your answer to "Also Not Ashamed."

I agree with you that an epileptic who functions as well as "Also" makes a mistake when she keeps her affliction a deep dark secret. She could do immeasureable good by telling her friends she is an epileptic and acquainting them with the true nature of the disease.

Epileptics are their own worst enemies. Too many of us keep our illness at the Dark Age level and behave as if it were some despicable, loathesome thing. We then criticize others because they are ignorant and prejudiced.

If epileptics wish to be treated as normal human beings they should lead the way by being open and unashamed — and by demonstrating that epileptics are not so different from other people, after all. — SAN ANTONIO.

* * *

DEAR SAN — Well said and thank you for saying it. I agree the most effective job of enlightening the public can be done by epileptics themselves.

This course takes courage but even the lowly turtle knows that if he is to make progress he must stick out his neck.

* * *

When necking becomes petting, watch out! To learn how the smart girl keeps both her dignity and her boy friend, send for "Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and Petting — And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 25c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Cross-Canada Survey

Wide Range of Pros and Cons On Bonus to Buyers of New Winter-Built Homes

By JOHN LeBLANC

. . . "Costly flop" . . . "It's been a boon" . . . "Brought all kinds of problems" . . . "Very successful" . . . "Creates headaches . . .

Opinions blow as hot and cold as the Canadian climate on the effect of the federal government's $500 bonus to buyers of new winter - built houses, which starts its second season Dec. 1.

The federal government believes its incentive to shift some warm-weather construction to winter to ease seasonal unemployment has been a big success. A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press turned up a wide range of pros and cons, plus some ideas for improvement.

Varying circumstances between Canadian regions apparently have affected the way it worked out. But there also are cases of lack of agreement within the same community.

As it stands, the bonus goes to the first purchaser of a new home put up between Dec. 1 and March 1.

P. S. Young, a Winnipeg developer, suggested it should be run on a regional basis because of climatic conditions. "There on the prairies, with a severe winter, unemployment can extend into May."

WANTS LONGER PERIOD

J. B. Sawyer, president of the Halifax Branch of the Metropolitan Home - Builders' Association, proposed an option of completing a house to any four months of an extended period, say between Nov. 1 and May 1. A rush of building in the shorter period brings a difficult run on construction materials, he said.

Henry Meighard, secretary of the Saint John, N.B., Builders' Exchange, agreed but added that the bonus as it stands has helped the industry.

Sudbury builders called for an enlarged period such as between Oct. 1 and April 15.

Albert Gagnon, president of the Montreal District Home-Builders' Association, would open it much wider — to 10 months between Sept. 1 and July 1. He said the present period is much too short for completion of a residence.

On the other hand, there are those who are happy with the way the bonus operated in its first season last winter. And others would be just as happy to see it dropped.

'COSTLY FLOP'

C. J. McConnell, a big Edmonton builder and past president of the National House-Builders' Association, is the one who called it a "costly flop" and a "short-sighted waste of our money."

(Government officials calculate it cost $13,864,500 applied to 28,053 houses and an average $6,000 on-site jobs, and that most of the outlay was saved in reduced unemployment insurance payments.)

However, Norman Darbyshire, secretary of the Plumbers' and Steamfitters' Union in Edmonton, said:

"I think the government wasted a lot of money as far as this area is concerned and hasn't put many people to work."

But J. A. Norton, manager of the Edmonton Builders' Exchange, said he is in favor of continuing the bonus.

The survey generally showed that construction was up during the past winter and down during the present summer by comparison with a year earlier, an indication that it was having the effect sought by the government of "borrowing" some home-building from summer for winter work.

SPREAD WORK OUT

"The bonus helped spread the work out over the year," said A. J. Shaw, general manager of the Vancouver Builders' Exchange.

Jim Moffat, business agent at Victoria for the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, said the bonus helped labor but "construction alone it won't be paid next year because it created headaches."

However, E. R. Slegg, president of a construction company in the same city, said: "We would like to see it again next year."

In Calgary, John Hannigan, secretary of the AFL-CIO Building Trades Council, said: "The bonus has certainly helped employment. It's been a boon to our people and kept them very, very busy."

But Jack McNeil, secretary of the Alberta council of the carpentery' union, said: "The bonus has had no effect on unemployment in organized labor."

Don Wilson, past-president of the Calgary House - Builders' Association, said housing has been stimulated but he does not approve of the government using house-building as a means of stimulating employment. "House - building should be regulated by supply and demand."

In Saskatchewan, James Cairns, president of the Regina House - Builders' Association, said workers have been helped but the plan will have a detrimental effect on the industry because it will force prices up.

SAYS YEAR LOPSIDED

He said there is little mortgage money available this summer and suggested the government is holding off interest rate adjustments until fall in a bid to "force winter construction" "we got one or two houses going. Usually I'd normally have about 30."

Robert Clements, president of the Saskatoon House-Builders' Association, said the bonus has made a lopsided year for the construction industry. "They squeezed our summer trade into the winter. Now we are getting a normally - poor interest rates on National Housing Act-approved loans.

In Manitoba, Louis Plotkin, president of the Winnipeg House - Builders' Association, said the effect on the labor market was mostly that the competent force—never out of work anyway — worked a little harder last winter. The less-skilled got a bit more work they otherwise wouldn't have."

He said a home building in Winnipeg has been rather slack this summer but added that credit situation is a more important factor than the bonus incentive.

SUPPLIES SHORT

In Ontario, the Toronto Real Estate Board said of the bonus:

Very successful and should be repeated." It says buyers were caught short of supplies during last winter's rush but are stocking up for the one ahead. Summer construction is "worked a little" this year but the board looks for a record year overall.

In Windsor, Cal Sawyer, of the Windsor House-Builders' Association, said the bonus was a good stimulus to the house-building industry and hasn't had any "detrimental effect on summer construction as yet."

Ralph Chapman, past-president of the Ottawa Real Estate Board, said: "The bonus was a good one in the arm. It certainly has increased the sale of new houses."

But Hardy at Sarnia William McCance, former president of the National House - Builders' Association, said: "None of the builders I know are in favor of the plan. It may have created a little employment for people but it has deferred house-building in the summer."

In Quebec, Gaspe Perreault, secretary of the Northern Quebec Building and Construction Trades Council, said: "I think the bonus has not made any difference to employment. It has worked on the principle that in a good year a construction employee will work eight months.

The only change now is that they work in less-favorable conditions — it's mostly cold in winter."

WAS HINDERS PLANNING

The Montreal District Home-Builders Association has given the government a long list of criticisms including:

he program created vacuums in housing demand and increased unemployment in the non-bonus period; it makes it more difficult for builders to plan on a year-round basis; the program ignored and aggravated the causes of continuously increasing construction costs, such as taxes and land speculation.

One of the major builders in the Quebec City area Yves Lemieux, Jr., said the bonus "mixed up the situation" so that housing this summer is not just half of normal.

"This bonus solves all kinds o. problems," he said. "We always try to adapt, but the difficulties remain."

In Halifax, Mr. Sawyer said the bonus "certainly has helped industry to get it up there were no figures on how many homes were built under the plan. There were fewer bonuses starts last spring than the previous year.

At Saint John, Mr. Meinhardt said the plan "has helped the industry in one way or another". The over-all picture is rosy." However, the bonus definitely has a price and if the normal warm weather construction pace.

New Computer Able to Make Fast Check

OTTAWA (CP)—One of the gimmicks used to cheat the income tax collector will soon become no risky.

A new computer in the tax department is going to allow clerks handling income tax returns to make a fast check of T4 slips against the duplicates filed by employers.

T4 slips are the ones issued by employers each year showing total earnings, pension deductions, the amount of income tax paid during the year and other items.

Each year a small number of false T4 slips are turned up They have been revised to show lower earnings, higher tax prepayment or other figures reducing the tax payable.

Revenue Minister E. J. Benson said Tuesday that only a small percentage of T4 slips now are checked against the duplicates because it is a time-consuming manual process.

The computer, however, will make it possible to match instantly every incoming T4 slip with the duplicate information filed in its electronic memory circuits.

Employers Will Change System In the Fall

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's 300,000 employers will begin this fall sending their employees' income tax deductions to a centralized computer operation in Ottawa, Revenue Minister E. J. Benson announced Tuesday.

Employers will send the department's 9,000 a month in tax deductions to 29 income tax offices scattered across the country.

About 10,000 employers in the Ottawa region now are switched on to the new system in a pilot project. The rest will be notified in October to join the parade.

A massive computer in the Ottawa tax headquarters will check the data on incoming cheques, send letters to employers who do not make payments on time and identify incon sistencies in the payment flow.

These procedures now are done mandally.

Vice-President Could Be Named By President

WASHINGTON (AP)—A formula for dealing with presidential inability and any vacancy in the office of vice-president was unanimously approved Tuesday by the U.S. Senate judiciary committee.

The proposed amendment, developed by a judiciary subcommittee, would permit filling any office of vice - president through nomination by a president with confirmation by a majority of both houses of Congress it states that the vice-president "shall become president" in case of the death, resignation or removal of the president from office.

It would make the vice-president "acting president" if the president declares in writing he is unable to discharge his duties and powers.

The vice-president also could become acting president if he, with support of a majority of the cabinet, informs Congress that the president is unable to serve.

Upon recovery, the president could resume office by again informing the Congress in writing.

If a dispute arose between the president and vice - president about recovery of the former, then Congress would decide. A two-thirds vote by both the Senate and House of Representatives would be required to retain the vice - president as acting president.

Even after congressional approval, the formula would require ratification by legislatures of three-fourths of the 50 U.S. states within seven years to become effective. With adjournment approaching, action appears unlikely at this session of Congress.

Queen Mother Celebrates 64th Birthday

LONDON (Reuters) — Guns boomed and flags flew from public buildings and navy ships in Britain Tuesday to celebrate the 64th birthday of Queen Mother Elizabeth.

At the Tower of London a 62-gun salute was fired and in Hyde Park the Household Horse Artillery fired a 41-gun salute.

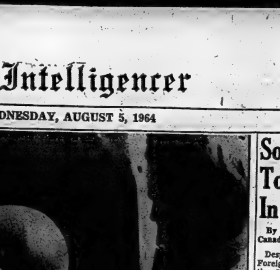
Plan Details Will Be Given End of August



OTTAWA (CP) — Details of how students can apply for bank loans under the federal government guaranteed loans legislation will be announced by the end of August, Finance Minister Gordon said Tuesday.

Federal and provincial officials are "pressing forward in their discussions" on how to have the student loan machinery ready to process applications for the fall term, he said. As fall dent about recovery of the former, then Congress would decterms in universities and other post - secondary school institutions.

Mr. Gordon issued a statement to meet what he termed "a large number of inquiries" about the loan plan.

It provides government-guaranteed bank loans of up to $1,000 a year for five years. Ottawa would pay the interest payments while the student is at school and for six months later. When the student takes over payment of the principal and interest on a five- or 10-year basis.

Mr. Gordon said the loans will be for students "who have shown their need for funds and who have attained satisfactory scholastic standards."

Chartered bank deposits increased $44,600,000 to $880,672,000 and notes in circulation increased $17,770,000 to $2,272,330,000.

AWARD ANNOUNCED

Mines Minister George Wardrope of Ontario has presented Ontario's A for Achievement award to the Canadian Car division of Hawker Siddeley Canada Ltd. at Fort William for the firm's increase in exports since 1961. Exports of Hawker have risen from $400,000 in 1961 to more than $1,500,000 last year.

SALT PRODUCTION UP

Canadian salt production in the first half of 1964 rose to 679,552 tons, up 4.8 per cent from a year earlier, the bureau of statistics said Tuesday. June output was up 12.3 per cent to 284,982 tons.

Teddy Kennedy Lives for Day To Walk Again

BOSTON (AP)—He lies in the steel frame, face down, through about half the day.

In that position, he can feed himself, shave, read and write. He can lift his head and his legs. When he tires of being on his stomach, the rotatable frame (an aide calls it "the rotisserie") is given a half turn so that he is on his back.

Recently, he started working on a major objective—planning the election campaign in which he can't appear, personally.

Edward M. (Teddy) Kennedy, 32, lives for the day when, if he hopes are realized, he can walk again into the U.S. Senate.

He is up for re-election as Massachusetts senator in November and he will have a Republican opponent, Howard Whitmore, Boston investment counsellor.

Kennedy has a broken back, suffered in a June 19 airplane crash in which the pilot and a Kennedy aide were killed.

DOCTORS WARY

The room opposite Kennedy's has been converted into an office and two aides work there full time.

After breakfast, newspapers and the congressional quarterly are placed on a small table, directly below Kennedy's eyes. It takes him several hours to get through them.

For pleasure, Kennedy reads or watches television by means of a system of glass prisms that reflect the image.

And he is constantly preoccupied with thoughts of the November election. To an aide, he remarked recently:

"I want to win on my own, not on a sympathy vote."

Soviet Union Determined To Stay on the Sidelines In Southeast Asia Crisis

By DOUGLAS MARSHALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Despite the urging of British Foreign Secretary R. A. Butler, the Soviet Union seems determined to stay on the sidelines in the Southeast Asian crisis.

Butler returned from Moscow during the weekend with no firm promise from Soviet Premier Khrushchev that the Soviet Union won't carry out her threat to withdraw from the co-chairmanship of the Geneva conference on Laos. Britain is the other co-chairman.

Butler's argument that Anglo-Soviet co-operation at the 1954 and 1962 Geneva conferences had averted "a real threat of war" in Laos appears to have made little impression on the Russians.

WANTS MORE TALKS

Khrushchev's response was to adopt a wait-and-see attitude. It is understood his final decision will be contingent upon the world reaction to the Soviet proposal for a new 14-nation conference to rule once again on the neutralization of Laos.

Said one observer: "Russia would make the Western powers wince. It would be too much like playing the same old poker hand again but with some of the best cards missing this time."

As in previous conferences, the pro-Communist Pathet Lao forces in Laos — Communist and Communist-dominated — again would probably come away from the table with a better deal than they had before.

American objections to yet another conference are based on more than possible concessions to the Pathet Lao.

As the United States becomes increasingly involved in South Viet Nam, it becomes increasingly harder for the government to separate the Laotian and Vietnamese problems.

SUPPLIES THROUGH LAOS

As long as Communist guerrillas in South Viet Nam continue to use Laos as a supply line, talk of "neutralizing" Laos is likely to remain academic.

Any long-term view held by many commentators in Canada is that events in Southeast Asia are heading for a showdown of strength between the U.S. and Communist China. The Soviet Union is prepared to withdraw to await the result.

The trial of strength may be long and bitter but eventually —and with the help of such international bodies as the United Nations — a political compromise will be worked out.

Meanwhile, the standing of realities in South-east Asia.

That is something no conference has yet been able to achieve.

Taxi Drivers Demonstrate At Airport

TORONTO (CP)—About 500 Metropolitan Toronto taxi drivers demonstrated at the new international Airport Tuesday. They were stopped by RCMP officers when they tried to pick up passengers.

Lyle Brooks, 36, and Gordon Matheson, 42, were charged and would be summonsed for picking up passengers. . .

Ahead of drivers at a time slowly circled the airport, but ensured traffic tie-ups.

Air Terminal Services Limited controls the business of taking fares from the airport. Transport Minister J. W. Pickersgill has asked the firm to work out a system of sharing the business with the taxi drivers.

Air Terminal and the taxi conference may meet this week. Sonny Greenberg, an executive of the conference, said Tuesday in Ottawa with Mr. Pickersgill.

John R. McDonnell, general manager of Air Terminal Transport, said:

"We'll be glad to talk with them when we hear from them."

Queen PC's Put Off Meet For Second Day

OTTAWA (CP) — A tentatively - scheduled meeting of Quebec Conservative MPs protesting their party's current parliamentary tactics was put off Tuesday for the second day.

Most of the 10 Quebec Conservatives were reported to be ready to dissociate themselves from the party strategy of prolonging Commons debate on interim spending authority for August and September. However, a Quebec Conservative source said the majority of the Quebec caucus now wants to wait until today's general caucus of the 96 Conservatives before taking any firm position contrary to the interests of party unity.

The growing discontent of Quebec Conservatives with the tactics of Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker and the party's House leader, Gordon Churchill (Winnipeg South Centre), was noted on the Commons floor by a Conservative joined by a Liberal backbencher.

Jean Chrétien (L — St. Maurice-Laflèche) made a rather rare seat might be found for Leo Balcer, member for Trois-Rivières and provincial Conservative leader, because of his unhappiness seated between Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Churchill.

There was no reply. Mr. Balcer smiled, looked uncomfortable, and shook his head.

The 46-year-old Quebec leader was reported to be trying to prevent a deep and irreparable schism developing between the Quebec Conservatives and other Conservative MPs, while recognizing the discontent among his followers — with which he is largely in sympathy.

22 Teen-Agers Taken to Court In Handcuffs

HASTINGS, England (AP)—Stiff sentences were passed Tuesday to 22 teen-agers for violence during the bank holiday weekend. The 18- to 20-year-olds brought handcuffed before a magistrate called them "mindless, adolescent morons."

Altogether 64 arrests were made during the weekend, when hundreds of the mod youth cults of Mods and Rockers descended on the town and thousands of other teen-agers followed them for excitement.

Police prevented a recurrence of the riots that marred the previous bank holiday weekends at Easter and Pentecost by keeping the teen-agers moving. Those who were caught were chased out of town by police.

The whole batch of those arrested came before Hastings Mayor A. G. Coote, who sent 10 youths to detention centres for three months and two for six months. They also had to put up bonds of £25 against good behavior for two years. Others received shorter sentences or were fined.

Police, meanwhile, identified a boy found dead on the beach as James Smart, 14, of the London suburb of Dagenham, and said there was no evidence of foul play.

Renew Search For Lost Ship

VICTORIA (CP)—An expedition headed by Mr. George Cotterell of Portland, Ore., has renewed the search for the wreck of the Tonquin, a trading vessel of John Jacob Astor which was either blown up or burned to the waterline along the north coast of Vancouver Island.

The Tonquin's remains have proved elusive, despite extensive research in former years.

E. A. Smith, a member of the expedition, has spent long periods in research on the Tonquin's disappearance at the provincial archives here. He is convinced that this time the wreck will be found, but at the moment he isn't saying where.

He's a Supervisor On Arctic Shelf

By ALLEN SACKMANN

MOULD BAY, N.W.T. (CP)—From a snowbound cabin deep in the Arctic 1,800 miles north of Edmonton, Colin Grant, 35-year-old former pilot, runs the federal government's Polar Continental Shelf Project with quiet efficiency.

The three-room plywood building, the radio room his office and home for six months a year, is the heart of an operation that stretches across 500 miles of the western Arctic.

The 90 to 100 men in the field are studying the history, weather conditions, mineral potential and sub-surface terrain on both land and sea on the Arctic archipelago.

When not in his office, the tall, heavy-set Grant may be found commuting between the air strip and base camp in a red four-wheel vehicle that looks like a motorized bathtub or mingling with the men at mealtime.

"That's when all the fellows are together and we can get things discussed," he says. "Then, too, I can find out what the men are thinking."

DO WE FLY?

He talks to pilots about flying conditions, to scientists about their research, to the cook about the meals.

He seeks out the pilots at breakfast daily and his first question is: "Do you think we can fly today?"

It's a crucial question. Most of the men on the project are distributed in isolated camps 100 miles or more from the base. They need food, gasoline and other supplies and aircraft are the only means of getting them there.

In the summer, when there is constant daylight, he keeps the planes in the air from 3 a.m. to 2 a.m. using two crews each, in an effort to get the work done on schedule.

Fifty per cent of the project's $1,500,000 annual budget is earmarked for transportation and most of that goes for chartering and fuelling planes

But while transport is always a major problem, illness has been the biggest headache this year. Four men were taken out to Uranium City, Sask., 1,200 miles southeast of Mould Bay, with pneumonia, several suffered from aggravated 'flu and the cook had a slight heart attack.

WORKED IN NEW GUINEA

Mr. Grant provides the first aid, a skill he picked up when he worked as a surveyor and labor supervisor for an oil company in New Guinea from 1949 to 1953. There he had to lance abcesses, pull teeth, stitch cuts and do minor surgery.

He came to Canada in 1953 to work for an aero-surveying firm. He decided he could make more money as a pilot, however, and began taking lessons in Calgary.

Here his family history caused him consternation—he's the son of a Scottish businessman and was born in China. When he applied to the transport department for a student permit, it was denied because, he was told, it couldn't be issued to a Chinese who hadn't taken out Canadian citizenship.

Recalling that his family had lived in Australia during the early part of the Second World War and that he had gone to high school there, Mr. Grant appealed the department's decision to the Australian high commissioner's office in Ottawa. He got his permit.

He had been working as a pilot when he heard the federal government needed a supervisor for its polar shelf project. "It sounded like an interesting job and the requirements read like my history, so I applied."

While he's in the Arctic, Mrs. Grant—a native of the Falkland Islands whom he met while working there—is in Ottawa.

"She doesn't like me being away for six months a year but at least I'm home the rest of the year. I wasn't when I was flying."

When in Ottawa, Colin Grant is almost as busy as here. He plans and buys supplies—150,000 gallons of gasoline and 25 tons of food—to be shipped to Resolute Bay by sea in the fall. He lines up staff, purchases equipment and looks over new Arctic gear with a view to making life for his crews more comfortable in the bleak northland. His men say he has been successful.

Tomorrow: Glacier is physicist's headquarters.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

Pinch Hitting

By Garry Alexander

The time of the year has arrived when the thoughts of all young (and many not so young) ballplayers turn to the serious business of playdowns.

The schedules are over, the coaches are beginning to dig out their best strategy, most of which will likely backfire, and the die-hard fans, who have been hiding most of the summer, will toss their coins into the hat to watch the local lads tangle with top-notch, out-of-town opponents.

OASA convener Cliff Belch Jr. passes along dates and data for Belleville and area teams starting down the rocky trail to provincial championships.

Belleville prosper will be represented by Trudeau Motors, Ellis Juniors, a Midget team and a Peewee team. There are numerous district entries.

Trudeau Motors are entered in the OASA Senior "B" playdowns and will clash with Kingston in their opening round. We understand the Kingston Club is a strong one, close to being an all-star team. Strikeout artist Bebs Van Hooser is the club's pitching ace.

"Shaker" Baker's Trudeau squad will have their work cut out for them when the teams meet in Belleville on Tuesday, August 25, and in Kingston on August 27. If a third game is necessary, it goes on August 29.

Ellis Juniors will compete in the Junior "A" classification and have drawn a bye in the OASA first round.

The Printers will go against the winner between Peterborough-Oshawa and either city will send a strong representative. Belleville opens at home on Saturday, August 22, with the second game in Oshawa or Peterborough on August 26. If a third game is necessary, it goes on August 29.

Belleville Midgets meet Madoc in their first round, playing there on Saturday, August 8, and back here on Wednesday, August 12. A third game goes the 15th, if necessary.

Belleville's Peewee entry draws a bye in the first round and takes on the Cobourg-Hastings winner in the second. The series opens in either Hastings or Cobourg on Tuesday, August 18, and comes back to Belleville on the 20th. If a third game is needed it is set for Saturday, August 22.

Trenton Ellis Printers are contesting the Intermediate "A" crown and will meet a Kingston team in the opening round. That series opens in Trenton on Wednesday, August 12, with the second in Kingston on August 14. If a third game is necessary, it will be played on Wednesday, August 19.

Intermediate "B" play pits Bloomfield against Cherry Valley on the latter's diamond on Saturday, August 22. The second game is at Bloomfield on August 29 and a third would be played on September 2.

There are a number of local entries in Intermediate "C" play. Tweed Lombanks clash with Battersea, starting August 11, with Tweed getting the first home game. Blaine Healey and his mates go back to Battersea on the 15th and if a third game is needed, it is set for the 18th.

Frankford was scheduled to meet a Trenton Air Force Intermediate "C" entry on August 11, but confirmed reports say that the Air Force entry was just a token one, entered in the spring, and will not compete. Madoc and Marmora are in the same Int. "C" class, playing at Marmora on Aug. 11 and back in Madoc on August 15. A third game would be played on the 18th.

Intermediate "D" action pits Wallbridge and Eldorado on August 15 and back in Wallbridge on the 22nd. A third game would August 29.

Junior "D" sends Demorestville to Westwood on August 22 with a return game on the 29th. A third game would be played September 2.

Two Trenton teams meet in the Juvenile "A" play on August 8 and 11, with a deciding game called for August 13, if necessary. Juvenile "B" sends Cobourg to Picton on August 15, then back in Cobourg on the 21st. A third would be played on the 29th.

Point Anne's Juvenile "C" team goes to Stirling on Saturday, August 8 with a return game at the Point on Wednesday, the 12th. August 15 is the third game date.

Finally, in Bantam, Picton travels to Cobourg on Saturday, the 8th, with a second game in Picton on the 12th. A third game, if necessary, will be played on the 15th.

Leaders Kick Games Away ★ ★ ★ ★

Yanks, Orioles Goof; Chisox Crumble

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Doesn't anyone here want that pennant?

That was the big question in the American League today after the three top contenders played kick - the - game - away Tuesday night.

Here's the way it went:

The first - place New York Yankees held a 1-0 lead on Mickey Mantle's homer and were cruising behind ace lefthander Whitey Ford when surefingered Tony Kubek committed two errors in two innings and helped Kansas City Athletics to a 5-1 victory.

The second-place Baltimore Orioles were locked in a scoreless battle with Los Angeles until the fourth inning when Norm Siebern dropped a two-out foul pop and the Angels rushed across enough runs for a 5-0 triumph.

The third-place Chicago White Sox were leading Detroit 3-0 and lefthander Gary Peters had allowed only a lone single through seven innings when he came apart, was slammed for four runs and a 4-3 defeat by the Tigers.

YANKEES IN FRONT

Elsewhere, Harmon Killebrew drove in three singles and his 37th homer, leading the Minnesota Twins to a 7-4 walkloping of Boston Red Sox and Steve Ridzik preserved Washington's three-hit victory over Cleveland Indians with 7 1-3 innings of two-hit relief pitching.

Ford, who had missed two turns on the mound because of a hip injury, got himself into a jam in the sixth when Kubek tossed walks to Ed Charles and Jim Gentile. Kubek helped him stay in it.

When Doe Edwards doubled, scoring Charles, Kubek let Tom Tresh's throw roam into center field for his third error. Gentile scored, charging from the lead base run. In the seventh, Kubek let Wayne Causey get to second base by throwing wide of first baseman Gentile and Charles doubled Causey home.

Ford, losing his fourth against 12 victories, pitched a strong game but his control was off. He gave up only four hits, but walked six.

Starter Dave Vineyard of the Orioles ran into difficulty in the fourth when the Angels loaded the bases with two out on two walks and a double by Willie Smith. Pitcher Don Lee then lofted a foul pop that Siebern dropped.

Lee immediately singled home two runs. Ron Perry doubled in another and Jim Fregosi wrapped it up with a two-run single.

Peters, 12-6, had allowed only Jerry Lumpe's safe bunt in the third inning before Detroit opened the eighth for the Tigers with a single.

Singles by Lumpe and George Thomas brought in one run before Don Demeter crashed a three-run homer over the left field wall.

Killebrew's three-run homer broke open a tight game in the seventh with the Twins leading by only 5-4. Killebrew drove home four runs for a total of 85 and Tony Oliva, Bob Allison, Rich Rollins and Earl Battey also homered.

Ridzik's sharp relief work—he allowed only singles by Chico Salmon in the fourth and the nimble—got the job done for the Senators after they scored four runs in the second on six singles.

RETAINS TITLE

SASKATOON (CP) — Claude Patternore of Hamilton won the Canadian blind golf championship Tuesday for a second successive year, firing a 104 for a 36-hole total of 208, 21 strokes better than Nick Genovese of Dundas, Ont.

Lightfoots Clinch 2nd Place

Lightfoot Construction clinched second place in the Commercial Softball League last night defeating Terhaarn 8-4 to break the tie with City Hotel.

Lightfoots put the game away in the first innings with three runs. They added a single in the fourth and fired four insurance runs in the ninth.

Terhaarn scored once in the third, added two in the fifth and r ingle in the seventh.

Bill Dickey and George Young in the sixth set the losers down with four hits, both allowing a pair and whiffing eight. They walked eleven!

Ron Pointer started for Terhaarn and gave up eight hits for five runs in eight and one-third innings. He whitzed a pair and walked six. Don Holway took over in the ninth and yielded two hits for three runs.

Terhaarn bobbled four times with Lightfoots committing two errors.

Jack Whiting led the Lightfoots offensive with two doubles with Dickey and John Hazard rounding through with two singles each.

George Young, Rusty Garvin, Jim Sheridan and Ken Smith added singles to the winning cause.

Hubert Pointer had a double and single for Terhaarn with Don Moore and Gary Little singling in two runs for the losers four clouts.

CONNAUGHT RANGES, Ont. (CP)—Cadet C. R. Percy of New Westminster, B.C., won a shoot-off and $30 in prize money in competition with eight other cadets who shot 40 of a possible 50 in the Tyro match, the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association announced Tuesday.

The Tyro event is open to shooters who have never been among the first 200 in the Grand Aggregate—based on total scores in major matches at the week-long meet.

Cadet G. B. Hasley of Trenton, Ont., was second in the shoot-off and won $15. Cadet S. Franklin of Ingersoll, Ont., also participated in the shoot-off.

PASS DEFENCE BILL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress passed and sent to President Johnson Tuesday a bill to provide $46,752,051,000 for U.S. defence. It is the biggest single money bill for the 1864 fiscal year, but about $1,500,000,000 less than Congress gave the defence department last year.

Manager Has Problems
Giants' Win, Lone Light For Dark

NEW YORK (CP)—San Francisco Giants' 4-3 victory over New York Mets Tuesday night in a 14-inning game that lasted four hours and 25 minutes was just about the only good thing that happened in a long and cheerless day in the life of manager Alvin Dark.

It began when the Giants, battling Philadelphia Phillies for the National League lead, learned they will have to get along for two weeks without Jesus Marichal, their only consistently successful pitcher with a 15-5 record, who has a back ailment.

Then Newsday, a Long Island daily newspaper, appeared with a story by columnist Stan Isaacs quoting Dark as saying the Giants' Negro and Spanish-speaking players "are just not able to perform up to the white ball players when it comes to mental alertness."

Dark promptly called a press conference and denied saying it. He said he would never had trouble with Negro players during his career.

"If you are going to make such statements, you've got to either stupid or crazy to play baseball," he told the conference. "I don't think I'm stupid and I want to remain in baseball."

Shortly afterward, Dark learned that he isn't likely to remain long with the Giants.

The Associated Press quoted an unidentified official of the club as saying he won't be back as manager next year and may be dismissed before the end of the month.

Dark, who took over the club in 1961 and won a pennant the following year, had little to say in reply.

"I signed a two-year contract in September of 1962 and haven't discussed my future with the club since," he said. "As a matter of fact, that's against club policy."

The official said the racial issue had nothing to do with the decision to dismiss Dark but that the manager had been at odds with owner Horace Stoneham for some time.

Meanwhile the Giants, trailing Philadelphia by 1½ games, are looking for a starter to replace Marichal, who defeated Phillies 6-3 in 10 innings last Wednesday in his last start.

Marichal is the second starting pitcher lost to the club. Jack Sanford was operated on last month for removal of an elbow obstruction and is out indefinitely.

Planes Edge Read 9-8

Plane's Concrete edged Read 9-8 in an exciting South Hastings League game last night.

Butch Clapp went the distance for Plane's, allowing 11 hits, but he walked two and whiffed two.

Read used three pitchers, J. Jones, Jim Mahon and Frank Farce. They allowed 12 hits, walked six and struck out three.

Read took the lead in the second inning and scored six runs, while Plane's scored two.

In the winning frame Plane's scored two more, and then another in the fourth to make it a 6-5 ball game.

In the fifth Plane's connected for four big runs to take the lead for the first time in the game. Read came back to score two in the sixth but could not manage another.

Ross Emegy smashed a homer and a single to lead Plane's attack. Paul O'Connor had two doubles, Ron Urch hit a double and single and John Tweedy was good for two singles.

Ken Forsythe, Butch Clapp and Harry Cain each had a two-bagger, while Leo Harvey had a single.

For Read Frank Farrell went four for four, with four singles. Gerald Brennan smashed a homer, a double, while Ted Abrams lined a double and two singles. Leo Enright and Pat Enright each clouted a double.

The score:

Ethier Blanks Trenton 4-0
Juniors Reach League Finals

Ellis Juniors rode into the finals of the Belleville District Softball League on the arm of Bobby Ethier, who pitched a four-hitter to blank Trenton Commercial Printers 4-0 in the rubber game of the three-of-five semi-finals.

The Juniors open the circuit best-of-seven finals at CNIA Park here Thursday evening against Blains Healey and his mates Lombanks.

It was anybody's game up to the seventh when the Juniors erred down and Ed Marcele getting him for three hits and three runs to tuck the victory away.

They added another marker for good measure in the eighth frame.

Ethier and Maracle hooked up in a tight mound duel for six frames, the Junior hurler twohitting the opposition and Maracle holding his mates to four safeties, two of them bunts.

Ethier sent seven eight via strikeouts and issued the only walk of the game. Maracle whiffed five and was touched for nine hits.

Larry Soule fired the Juniors' first-inning explosion in the seventh with a bunt single. Russ Boomhower's bunt was dropped by Maracle and Pete Weston lashed out a single to score Soule.

Stu Malloy's blooper dropped safely scoring Boomhower and Weston. Maracle regained his stride and retired Ethier, Gardiner and Moon in order.

The Juniors sandwiched an out between a single by Muirhead, an error and Soules' double to push across the fourth run in the eighth inning.

Ethier had Trenton under control at all times. Only one reached second. Kennedy got to first only but he was due to start an hour before the game.

Jack Cullen came on for Richmond in the 11th but was replaced by Curtis when he gave up a single and a walk. Carpin was credited with the win, his fourth in as decisions.

The Bisons put together three-run clusters in the third and fifth innings to bury the Jets. John Kennedy's three-run homer in the fifth was the clincher.

Carpin took over on the mound for the Virginians with two out in the 11th inning of a scoreless International League game against Toronto Maple Leafs and tamed only two pitches to retire the side.

Then he singled, causing Toronto starter Don Loun, and scored the game's only run one out later on a bloop single by Art Lopez off Ron Nischwitz.

Runs came more easily at Columbus, where Buffalo Bisons checked a three-game losing streak by hammering the Jets 10-4. Rain washed out the other two scheduled games between Rochester and Jacksonville and Syracuse and Atlanta.

Art Stottlemyre, who owns a 13-3 record and a 1.39 earned-run average for the sixth-place Virginians, held the Leafs to five hits over the first 10 innings, striking out seven, but ran into trouble against Loun.

Loun, a Toronto newcomer who only found out he was due to start an hour before the game.

Trimble Cracks Hard Whip

By JOE DUPUIS

MONTREAL (CP)—Not long ago, coach Jim Trimble of the Montreal Alouettes made a hurried visit to New York Giants' training camp looking for tough linesmen.

Earlier, he summoned John Roach, a retired National Football League quarterback, to patrol a couple of weeks coaching the Alouettes' pivot corps, which then totalled six.

In training camp, he cracked an unusually hard whip, pouncing on rookies and veterans alike, and wore a constant frown.

Trimble shrugs off these goings-on as part of the job. But there seems to be little doubt that he is searching for a miracle to give the Alouettes badly needed depth, and he is worried.

A week before the start of the Eastern Football Conference, Trimble was fielding in exhibition play a team with 13 newcomers, nine of them raw rookies and nine others starting only their second year in pro football.

BORK GETS CHANCE

Into the key quarterbacking spot goes George Bork, the tawnt of his rookie crop but with excellent credentials as a former U.S. college passer from Northern Illinois.

Backing him up will be two other newcomers with experience—Vernon Cole and Jerry Fields

Last year, the Als' passing record was the worst since the departure of Sam Etcheverry three years ago.

Montreal still has the best running back in Canada in George Dixon, but their passreceiving remains weak, although there is potential in speedy end Marv Luster, being shifted flanker to replace the retired Don Clark.

Reds, Dodgers Win Pairs

Two For Hutch

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Cincinnati Reds planned a perfect homecoming for Fred Hutchinson and they weren't about to let the weather or Milwaukee Braves get in their way.

It looked for a while as if the Reds wouldn't be able to play in one game Tuesday night but before the evening was over they had beaten the Braves twice, 5-2 and 4-2.

Hutchinson, who had been in hospital for a week, returned to the club but left the bench mid-way through the first game which was delayed three times by rain. He watched the re-mainder of the twi-night double-header from Reds' president Bill DeWitt's box.

The Reds couldn't have put on a better show if they had rehearsed it. The first game was delayed 43 minutes right at the start but when the Reds finally came to bat, Deron Johnson followed a three-run homer for a quick 3-0 lead.

Play was held up for 27 minutes in the third inning and again for 42 minutes in the seventh. It was during the third delay that Hutchinson left the bench.

In between delays, the Braves had trimmed Cincinnati's lead to 3-2. But Leo Cardenas' two-run triple in the seventh clinched it.

EDWARDS BREAK TIE

John Edwards' run-producing single broke a 2-2 tie in the seventh inning of the nightcap, helping the Reds wrap up the sweep.

In other National League action San Francisco Giants struggled 14 innings before edging New York Mets 4-3. Chicago Cubs blanked St. Louis Cardinals 4-0 and Los Angeles Dodgers swept a twi-night double-header from Pittsburgh Pirates 5-0 and 10-7.

The Reds' double victory swept Cincinnati within 3½ games of the league-leading Philadelphia Phillies and only two games back of the second-place Giants.

Jim O'Toole went the route in the nightcap, winning his 12th in 16 decisions. Bob Purkey 5-6 won the opener with ninth inning help from Sammy Ellis.

Hutchinson, fighting a chest cancer, spent a week in hospital for tests. The 44 year-old manager spent most of his time in bed but told reporters he had watched some of the Reds' games on television.

Jim Davenport's 14th-inning bit-and-run single scored Jose Pagan from first and ended another Giants - Mets marathon. San Francisco had taken a 3-1 lead in the 11th on Orlando Cepeda's two-run single but Jim Hickman tied for the Mets with a pinch single in the bottom of the inning.

The last time the Giants and Mets played in New York, they went 23 innings and nearly 7½ hours before San Francisco won.

Former Cardinal Lew Burdette pitched his first shutout in more than a year as the Cubs blanked St. Louis. Billy Williams drove in a three-run homer for Chicago and Burdette won his eighth game, seven of them coming after he was traded to the Cubs in May.

Sandy Koufax became the first pitcher to win 16 games but needed ninth inning help from Bob Miller to wrap up the first-game victory against the Pirates. Koufax allowed six hits, struck out six and walked five before leaving with the bases loaded in the ninth. Miller got Bob Bailey to line into a double play ending the game.

Women's Open
Gail Harvey, Cole Top Field

By JOHN SHORT

CALGARY (CP) — Joanne Goulet of Regina finished one stroke behind the leaders in the qualifying round of the Canadian women's open golf championship Tuesday—but she won not on the scorecards.

She stuffed a tricky four-foot putt into the hole on the 18th green to reap the third and final spot on the Canadian team that will compete in world cup competition at Paris in October.

She needed a 78 to earn the spot behind Gail Harvey and Marlene Cole of Toronto, leaders and ahead of another Toronto resident, seven time Canadian Women's Open winner Marlene Stewart Streit.

Mrs. Streit also fired a 78, but failed to pick up the shot she needed. She trailed Miss Goulet by a 28-year-old Saskatchewan civil servant who lives in Regina, by one shot after the first 54 holes of the 72-hole qualifying test.

The first 54 holes were tabulated during the two-day Women's Close competition which Miss Harvey won here last week.

TIE FOR FIRST

Tied for first place in the qualifying round were Mary Masters of Ottawa, Barb Reinhold, of Vancouver and Kay Heliour of Toronto. The 79 was exceptional on a day of high wind and the tightly-trapped, par-74 course.

400 Miles Remain In Bike Race

QUEBEC (CP)—The Tour du St. Laurent bicycle race continues its eastward drive today as the remaining 55 cyclists head here from Trois-Rivieres, a run of 165 miles. Fewer than 400 miles remain to be covered in the 1,500-mile race.

Most competitors say they can take the hills in stride but few feel kindly toward loose gravel—a bone-jarring obstacle they encountered for five of Tuesday's 125 miles from Joliette to Trois-Rivieres. The gravel resulted in 22 flat tires.

Andre Dhaene of Belgium took over the lead in the individual standings from Antoni Palka of Poland, who had been leading since the third lap. The racers start the 12th lap today with Dhaene leading by 58 seconds.

Open Tennis Championships

Aussie Tornado Hits Courts

MONTREAL (CP)—A "willy-willy" hit the Canadian Open tennis championships Tuesday.

"Willy-willy" is an Australian term for tornado, and that's the type of whirlwind performance the Aussies turned in on the courts of the Monkland Tennis Club.

Jumping off a jet from Mexico City and into their tennis shorts, four members of the Australian Davis Cup team stormed through opening round matches in the men's single event in double time.

Fred Stolle, who won a singles match and teamed with Roy Emerson for a doubles victory in Australia's conquest of Mexico, used about 30 minutes to demolish Montreal's Raymond Daoust in straight sets of 6-0, 6-1, and 6-0.

The other Aussies, John Newcombe, Tony Roche and Owen Davidson took less time disposing of their opponents and advanced into the second round. If they were tired, they didn't look it.

"We got up at five o'clock this morning and just arrived two hours ago," Newcombe said after ousting Leslie Szamayde of Montreal 6-0, 6-0, 6-2. "We're really beat. All of us are going to bed immediately to sleep for a year."

EXPECTED TODAY

Emerson is expected to arrive today but tournament organizers are doubtful that either of Mexico's celebrated performers will show.

Antonio Palafox sent a telegram from Mexico City advising that his expectant wife was sick in England and he would have to go to her immediately. But not a word was heard from Rafael Ursua, who was supposed to accompany the Aussies to Montreal.

Most of the highly - ranked competitors played through the second round Tuesday without fanfare. Ron Holmberg of Dallas, Whitney Reed of Alameda, Calif., and Canadians Bob Bedard, Francois Godbout, Reider Getz and Keith Carpenter all scored routine victories.

The only upset occurred in the women's singles, where Hasna Sladek, former Canadian champion and top-seeded, lost in two sets to 23-year-old Judith Travis of Toronto.

MANY MISTLETOES

There are some 1,300 different species of mistletoe found throughout the world; all are parasitic and eventually destroy their adopted tree.

Junior Grad Hero

Bombers Rally, Tie Lions

WINNIPEG (CP)—A 19-year-old youngster, playing his first professional football game, provided the spark that started Winnipeg Blue Bombers on their way back from the football wilderness.

Billy Cooper, a Winnipeg-born junior graduate, caught three passes for 31 yards and a touchdown Tuesday night and ignited a last-quarter drive that enabled the 1962 Western Conference champions to gain a 10-10 tie with British Columbia Lions, the team that dethroned them last season.

Other stars of Bombers' comeback surge that wiped out a 7-1 first-half deficit had familiar names — quarterback Kenny Ploen, 14 completions in 24 pass attempts for 173 yards; fullback Jack Delveaux, 71 yards on 16 carries; end Farrell Funston, four catches for 56 yards, halfback George Fleming, defending WFC scoring champion who contributed a field goal and a single; and defensive stalwarts Dave Burkholder and Larry Janzen, each in on seven tackles.

A crowd of 13,125 fans saw Canadian fullback Don Wirth, bidding to fill the large-sized shoes vacated by Nub Beamer's retirement, score the B.C. six-pointer on a two-yard plunge. Lions' other points came on a punt single by defensive half Nell Beaumont and a field goal by specialist Peter Kempf.

Central Cadets Take Home Buell Trophy

CONNAUGHT RANGES, Ont. (CP)—A prized shooting award for cadet teams, the Buell Trophy, was won for the third time in four years by the Central Command team stationed at Oakville, the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association announced Tuesday.

The eight-man Central Command team won the title by the narrowest of margins over a team from the Western Command, Edmonton.

The two teams both fired a total of 696 of a possible 800 points but the Central Command was awarded first place on the basis of a better first round.

The Eastern Command team was third with 663 points followed by the defending champion Quebec team with 636.

First Casualties Return From Pearl Harbor Story

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The first casualties have returned from Otto Preminger's replay of Pearl Harbor and its aftermath, In Harm's Way.

One casualty from the Hawaiian location is Hugh O'Brian, who entered a hospital for treatment of a tropical virus. Another is Paula Prentiss, who came back with one leg in a cast.

"Broke the darned thing in a scene," she reported. "Worked the rest of the day, though. Didn't dare quit. You know Otto."

Indeed I do. He is the hard-headed taskmaster whose hits is seldom as fierce as his hark. Paula said she got along marvelously with him.

"We had some wonderful fights," said the San Antonio beauty. "Whenever we had a difference of opinion over a scene, he and I had a fine shouting match. I think he likes it that way. It was good for me, too; by the time I did the scenes I had a good steam of emotion up."

FELL IN POTHOLE

Her accident happened on her last day of shooting. She and John Wayne were supposed to be running through the cane fields during the Japanese bombing. Paula stepped into a three-foot pothole.

She finished her work with the ankle swollen like a cocoanut.

"For eight days I had to keep my foot elevated so the swelling would go down," she related.

"I kept looking at it and saying to myself, 'if I'm going to break my leg doing a picture, I ought to get paid for it.'"

The source of her dissatisfaction was her contract with MGM, which allowed the studio to collect handsome fees for loanouts like Man's Favorite Sport, The World of Henry Orient and in Harm's Way, while paying her only her usual salary.

Bosox Sign Al Smith

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Veteran outfielder Al Smith, released by Cleveland Indians Friday, has been signed by Boston, a Red Sox spokesman said Tuesday night.

Smith, 36, began his major league career with the Indians 12 years ago and returned to the Tribe last winter in a deal with Baltimore.

Smith had appeared in 58 games with Cleveland this season, mostly as a pinch hitter. He was batting .162.

Cleveland released him to make room for Max Alvis, who returned after being sidelined with spinal meningitis for a month.

Ottawa Ready For Opener

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP)—An air of confidence prevails as Ottawa Rough Riders make final preparations for their Eastern Football Conference opener Friday against Toronto Argonauts in Toronto.

Coach Frank Clair, although refusing to paint too rosy a picture, says he's not afraid to concede first place in the Big Four to Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

"They'll be tough with all those Canadian Americans on the club," Clair told a reporter.

Assistant coach Bill Smyth says the 1964 Riders are the best he's seen "at this stage of the season."

Riders in four pre-season exhibition games dumped British Columbia Lions, Edmonton Eskimos, Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Montreal Alouettes.

After making wholesale changes in the last two years, Clair added only one new man in this season's lineup.

They are middle guard Ken Lehmann and tight end Jay Roberts, halfback Billy Harris, offensive end linebacker Mike Blum, an Ottawa product.

In addition, Riders have added halfback Ernie White on the injured list — along with rookie quarterback Mike Moscall formerly of the University of Idaho.

White, one of the question marks on the Riders' roster this camp, seemed certain to keep his job until he injured a knee.

Close Race Features Prize Match

By PETER McNAUGHTON

CONNAUGHT RANGES, Ont. (CP)—One of the first stage in the prestigious Governor - General's Prize match fired at the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association championships Tuesday is any indication, the winner will be determined in the final shot in the three-stage event Saturday.

When darkness brought proceedings to a halt at the army's prize range near Ottawa, two men were tied in the first match with 103 of a possible 105 points. Behind them was a field of 98 marksmen, 132 of whom had 97 points or more.

Cpl. F. A. Bailey of Regina and Tpr. R.C. Barwell of Charlottetown headed the field after three rounds and both have been fired from 200, 500 and 600 yards.

"Top shot in the Leiton carries a lead into the second stage of the Governor's, picks up points toward a place on the Canadian team and a trip to Level of the Commonwealth championships at Bisley, England, next summer, and wins a .303-calibre rifle.

The county budgeted $140,000 for the project.

A quiz will be given on material covered at the last meeting. Besides the usual classes there may be a class of hay to judge. The meeting will be held in the board room of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Picton. Mr. Don Welbanks, president of the Oat Club, will preside at this meeting.

IRRIGATION PAYS

We are fast approaching a serious moisture shortage for our farm crops. It is now three weeks since we had any rainfall. Perhaps the one crop which is showing the effects of dry weather more than any other is the corn crop. In several areas of the county, especially on shallow ground, the corn is curling and in some cases "burning up" for lack of water.

The tomato crop is also suffering from this prolonged dry spell. Growers have seen in the past how quickly a 500 bushel crop becomes a 300 bushel crop when there is no rain. You would be watching a similar reducing in yield right now.

Even the apple trees whose roots are much deeper than our inter-tilled crops are beginning to show the effects of dry weather. Trees on light or shallow ground are beginning to wilt. This is, of course, not widespread as yet but will be a problem if dry weather continues.

If growers have an irrigation system or if they can rent an irrigation system, they should be applying water now.

Don't underestimate the value of irrigation— it can be a crop saver Many of your neighbors are now irrigating.

WESTERN BUS TRIP

The National Centennial Commission has made a grant to the Canadian Council on 4-H Clubs to be used for 4-H Travel and Exchange during 1964. The Extension Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture has decided to spend this money to finance an educational bus trip for selected group of 4-H members from the counties east of and including Ontario County, to points of interest in South Western Ontario.

One agricultural club member and one Homemaking club member was chosen to represent each of the designated counties. To be eligible members had to be 16 years of age and have compelled three agricultural club projects or have achieved county honors (completion of six projects.) In selecting the candidates emphasis was placed on 4-H Junior Farmer participation and background.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture in Picton is pleased to announce that Miss Carolyn Hubbs, R.R. 1, Bloomfield and Mr. Howard Pulver, R.R. 1, Carrying Place, have been chosen to represent Prince Edward County on the Western Bus trip —August 10th to 15th.

Some of the highlights of the trip include: Educational tour of Guelph University with talks by professors at the university; visits to farms in Western Ontario; attend "Yeoman of the Guard" performance at Stratford Shakespearean Festival; visit to Ridgetown Agricultural School; 4-H Demonstration programs; tour Libby's Canning Factory, Wallaceburg; tour Dominion Glass Company, Wallaceburg; visit Vineland Experimental Farm, Niagara Falls, Welland Ship Canal and many other points of interest.

Stanleyville Fight Continues; Lumpas Massing

Savages on Warpath In Congo and Rhodesia

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP)—Congolese Army troops are reported still fighting Communist-backed rebel warriors on the outskirts of Stanleyville, the main city of the northern Congo which fell to the rebels Wednesday.

Brief messages reaching the Congolese capital from Stanleyville by a roundabout route said the rebels had occupied the city.

The messages added that troops of the Stanleyville garrison were still battling just outside the city in the neighborhood of the airport.

The airport control tower went off the air Wednesday afternoon after a message saying that the "popular liberation army" had taken over. The rebels are being financed and advised by Chinese Communist diplomats in the neighboring capitals of Brazzaville and Bujumbura.

Messages today indicated that U.S. Consul Michael Hoyt of Chicago and his staff and other Americans in Stanleyville were alive and in good health.

Hoyt, 33, had refused to quit "his post" as long as there is still hope." With him in Stanleyville are Vice Consul Harold Grinwis, radio operators James Stauffer and Donald Parkes and administrative officer Ernest Houle.

TROOPS ROLL IN

Troops of paratroop commandos in full battle gear rolled through the streets of Leopoldville this morning. Other soldiers took up positions outside the capital's main post office and other key government buildings.

AIRLIFT HALTED

An airlift of evacuees from Stanleyville to here was stopped Wednesday night as rebel forces chased off and fired at two planes trying to land.

One of the planes was hit but the pilot managed to fly it back to Leopoldville. The pilot of the second plane, flying in from Bukavu, was reported wounded.

So far more than 300 persons have been airlifted to Leopoldville from the troubled city but it was estimated there were still about 450 non - Congolese in Stanleyville.

LUSAKA (Reuters) — Premier Kenneth Kaunda today pressed an all - out drive to quell the fanatical Lumpa sect amid reports 2,000 Lumpas were massing near Lundazi in the eastern province of Northern Rhodesia for a new battle.

Kaunda told Parliament Wednesday he would carry on the drive against the fanatic followers of "prophetess" Alice Lenshina "even if it means other people calling me a savage." He spoke after flying to Lundazi, scene of Monday's bloody battle in which 58 Lumpas were killed after refusing to surrender to troops.

The death toll in the two days of disturbances stood at 301 today.

Four men have appeared in court in Ndola, Northern Rhodesia, charged with the murder of British assistant inspector Derek Smith, allegedly speared to death at a Lumpa village July 27. They have been remanded in custody until a week from next Monday.

End Near Of Talk On Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons' protracted debate on an interim supply measure enters its ninth day today amid indications the end is near.

Conservative spokesmen said Wednesday the government now has answered most of their questions and they would no longer hold up passage of the money bill.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said the bill be changed to cover three months of spending authority for the government instead of two—August and September.

Friday Council President Merrill Acheson accepted the suggestion and tried to introduce an amended resolution just before the House adjourned at 6 p.m., but he was foiled by Creditiste House Leader Gilles Gregoire.

The Creditiste MP refused his consent to sitting a few minutes after 6 p.m. to pass the measure. He said he wished to discuss first what had been the outcome of the negotiations on the five party leaders.

The Commons adjourned and

Expect North, South Viet Nam Will Be Invited to UN Debate

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Diplomats predicted today the United Nations Security Council would invite both North and South Viet Nam to take part in debate on North Vietnamese assaults on American warships and U.S. retaliation.

Council President Sivert A. Nielsen of Norway suspended debate today so he could sound out delegates to the 11-nation body on the proposal to hear representatives of the two Vietnamese governments. Nielsen said he believes he can convene the council again Friday to report results.

If the North and South both send spokesmen it probably will produce a heated debate on the roles the United States, North Viet Nam and Red China play in South Viet Nam's war.

The debate opened Wednesday at the request of the United urgent council meeting to consider "the serious situation created by the attacks of the Hanoi (North Viet Nam) regime on United States naval vessels in international waters."

The question of Vietnamese participation in the debate was

Time Limit Refused By Opposition

OTTAWA (CP)—The summit political talks aimed at ensuring a rapid decision on a Canadian flag broke down Wednesday night over Progressive Conservative refusal to agree to a time limit on parliamentary debate.

As a result, the Commons was back today in the legislative deadlock which sparked efforts among the party leaders to reach a compromise.

Prime Minister Pearson, announcing the breakdown, placed the blame squarely on the Progressive Conservatives in a meeting with Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, New Democratic Leader Douglas, Social Credit Leader Thompson and Creditiste Leader Caouette.

He said the government will press straight on—without any summer recess if need be—with three items of business, including a request for $606,000,000 in interim spending authority now entering the ninth day of debate.

This item will be followed by a bill to put into effect new tax-sharing arrangements with the provinces. Finally the MPs will be asked to approve the government's "vacuum" maple leaf flag and its companion motion to recognize the Union Jack as the symbol of Canada's Commonwealth connection.

WON'T CALL ELECTION

Shortly before the talks broke down, Mr. Pearson recorded a television broadcast saying "the government does not intend to call an election on any of the current issues that faces us. I want to make that perfectly clear."

"But nevertheless an election could be forced on the country if the opposition use the rules to bring the nation's business, the business of government, the business of Parliament, to a halt."

Western World Praises U. S. But Some Uneasiness Voiced

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pro - Western quarters throughout the world have praised the United States for its stand in the Viet Nam crisis, but some expressed apprehension.

Prime Minister Douglas Home of Britain, returning from a vacation in Scotland, told reporters that the U.S. "has the perfect right to retaliate" against "unprovoked aggression" in international waters.

In Ottawa, Prime Minister Pearson and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker defended the U.S. action but T. C. Douglas, leader of the New Democratic Party, said the bombing of naval installations is tantamount to a declaration of war.

The Malaysian government condemned North Vietnamese naval attacks on U.S. warships as "deliberate . . . provocation." It noted, however, that U.S. retaliation carried the "risk of escalation of the present conflict into full-scale war."

North Viet Nam Minister Protests U. S. Attacks

SINGAPORE (Reuters) — Foreign Minister Xuan Thuy of North Viet Nam has protested against provocative attacks by the United States and its agents," the official Communist North Viet Nam news agency reported today.

He was cited "the U.S. government, the Royal Laotian government and the South Viet Nam administration must bear the entire responsibility for the grave consequences arising out of their dangerous provocations."

The protest was contained in a letter addressed Wednesday to Britain and Russia, co-chairmen of the 1962 Geneva conference, other participants in the conference, and countries making up the international commission in Vietnam—India, Poland and Canada.

The agency quoted Xuan Thuy's letter as saying that on the night of July 30, the U.S. and the South Viet Nam administration "dispatched naval vessels to intrude into the territorial waters of the Democratic Republic of Viet Nam and simultaneously to shell two of her islands—Hon Ngu and Hon Me.

"At noon on Aug. 1, 1964, four U.S. T-28 fighter-bombers coming from Laos bombed and fired rockets at Hon Me, a frontier-post visibly flying the national flag and seven kilometres (about 4½ miles) from the Viet Nam-Laos border.

"They also raided the Nong De village about 20 kilometres (about 12 miles) from the same frontier line, two planes following each other in succession.

"At noon on the following day (Aug. 2, 1964) seven U.S. F-8 and T-28 fighter-bombers coming from Laos launched a second attack against the Nam Can post."

The North Viet Nam government today issued a statement saying that in Wednesday's attacks American jets bombed and strafed a "number of places in the Vinh Sen Thuy area, in the Gianh River mouth, and close to Hon Gay town, causing losses to the people

To Repay Debt Says China

By ADAM KELLETT-LONG

PEKING (Reuters) — Communist China today warned the United States that its attack on North Vietnamese bases meant aggression against China and had gone over the "brink of war."

In a government statement—first official Chinese reaction to U.S. retaliation for torpedo boat assaults in the Gulf of Tonkin and said the "debt of blood" to the North Vietnamese people must be repaid.

The Chinese people will absolutely not sit idly by without lending a helping hand."

The Chinese statement made no mention of any impending Chinese air or naval action against the United States in the Gulf of Tonkin. The U.S. attacks on North Viet Nam constituted the first step in extending the war in Indochina, the statement said. The situation was of the utmost gravity.

Of the Viet Nam torpedo boat incident Aug. 4 the second one in the Gulf of Tonkin, the statement added: "The facts proved beyond question that behind this so-called incident is an outand-out, purposely fabricated by U.S. imperialism in order to extend the war in Indochina."

SAYS TOWNS BOMBED

The Chinese statement said the U.S. had already made against North Viet Nam, including the two bombing earlier this month of North Vietnamese coastal towns.

The provocative statement was worked out at an all night emergency meeting of the country's top leaders, reliable sources said.

Observers said the statement could be the basis for immediate Chinese counter action in the Gulf of Tonkin. On the other hand it could simply be justi-

Printers Invited Back to Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — Printers from the International Typographical Union (CLC) were invited back to work individually Wednesday by publishers of Toronto's three daily newspapers.

Don Purdy, a spokesman for the publishers, said letters from the publishers to the 680 printers on strike since July 13 contain no threats and no promises." Basically, he said, the letters are an invitation for the striking ITU members, who stopped working July 9, to return to work.

Mr. Purdy is also industrial relations director for The Star, one of the newspapers affected by the walkout which the union claims is a lockout. The papers are The Star and The Telegram, evening papers, and The Globe and Mail, a morning paper. They have continued to publish with non-union personnel doing composing room work.

Negotiations between the ITU and the publishers collapsed Friday.

Meanwhile, the Toronto branch of the American Newspaper Guild (CLC) and a branch of the International Printing Pressmen's Union (CLC) issued statements expressing concern at the present state of negotiations. The guild executive committee voted Wednesday night to call a membership meeting Tuesday to ratify a motion which asks the union to initiate further mediation efforts.

SEND OPEN LETTER

The pressmen's statement, from local President Ernest Brooke, said the crossing of the lawful ITU picket line is distasteful and often leads to lasting bitterness. In an open letter to the publishers, the pressmen released a motion passed at a membership meeting July 31 which said it was becoming "increasingly difficult to justify to ourselves and our families the crossing of picket lines."

Next 24 Hours Should Reveal What Reds Plan

Hurried Airlift Over, Await China's Decision

SAIGON (AP) — Air traffic came to a virtual halt through out South Viet Nam today as U.S.- and South Vietnamese forces stood ready to meet any attack from the Communist North.

The general feeling in Saigon was that if nothing important happened in the next 24 hours, the crisis probably would be past.

A steady shuttle of transport planes through the night completed a buildup of troops and material in the area adjoining the North Vietnamese frontier. Vietnamese and American officers in the area were reported expecting a major attack tonight.

However, the alert status in Saigon was nowhere near what it would be if an attack were considered imminent.

So far, the crisis in the Tonkin Gulf has produced no upturn in attacks from the Viet Cong guerrillas in South Viet Nam. Fighting was reported near normal level, with some reduction in incidents.

The U.S.-supported South Vietnamese forces were on an around-the-clock alert. All routine military air traffic was halted. All leaves except for emergencies were suspended for the 16,500 U.S. servicemen taking part in the guerrilla war against the Viet Cong Communists.

Civil defence machinery was set up and private citizens were placed on call. But air raids from the north were considered unlikely.

AT FEVERISH PITCH

Six U.S. Air Force F-102 jet interceptors landed at the big coastal base of Da Nang, 80 miles from the Communist frontier, soon after dusk fell. They said five South Vietnamese army divisions also were prepared to fight in the area. Activity there was reported at a feverish pitch with heavy vehicles including tanks, on the move.

The U.S. sent two squadrons of F-100 and F-105 fighter-bombers to Thailand as a precautionary measure. A squadron consists of 16 to 18 planes. The planes were believed stationed at air bases in central and northeastern Thailand, within striking range of Laos and North Viet Nam.

The Thai government gave its permission for the aerial reinforcement after Thai Premier Field Marshal Thanom Kittika-

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States government and military watched for any clue that Communist China would come to the aid of her Red neighbor in North Viet Nam after the U.S. bombing raids against North Vietnamese naval and supply installations.

Many officials in Washington doubted that China would take outright military action, though the Chinese government said "the Chinese people will absolutely not sit idly by without lending a helping hand."

There was no interference with American reconnaissance flights over the bombed area.

President Johnson, in announcing the decision to bomb North Viet Nam late Tuesday night, said it was aimed as a warning to North Viet Nam not to enlarge the Southeast Asian hostilities in which the U.S. is deeply involved. The raids were ordered after North Viet Nam small naval units engaged U.S. warships in international waters for the fifth week in the Gulf of Tonkin.

The Red Chinese accused Johnson of escalating the bombings "to enhance his position" in the U.S. presidential election campaign and spread the war in South Viet Nam to the north.

DIFFER ON FIGURES

State Secretary Dean Rusk said the attention is explosive in the aftermath of the "very successful" air strikes that cost the Americans two planes downed and one damaged. The North Vietnamese claim they shot down five planes, damaged three and captured one American pilot.

Red China has been supporting the guerrilla warfare in South Viet Nam by funnelling supplies to North Viet Nam by land and by sea via the Gulf of Tonkin.

The Johnson administration obviously was bracing itself for signs of trouble in Southeast Asia, and hoping it would not turn Hitler on Korea. It ordered more planes and ships toward the crisis zone including the carrier Ranger, largest aircraft carriers, the Ranger and 12 destroyers from the West Coast.

The 7th Fleet units were ordered back to normal patrol duty in the Gulf of Tonkin in line with the U.S. position laid before the United Nations that Communist attacks "must be met with measured response" to the

Abandon All Hope for Five Men Still Missing in Mine in France

CHAMPAGNOLE (CP)—Hope was abandoned today for five men still missing deep in the Mont Rivel limestone mine near this French community.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Considerable cloudiness accompanied by scattered showers will cover Northern Ontario most of today. It will spread into central Ontario later in the day and into southern Ontario Friday. Today will be warmer through the northern and central portions of the province. Southern Ontario will likely have to wait until Friday for any significant warming.

Two small vertical sounding drills continued to pierce the mountain in the hope of finding some trace of a truck containing one of the men entombed in a cave-in 10 days ago. But officials said it was too late to pull anyone out alive.

Rescue teams broke into a section where two of the missing men were believed to have tapped out signals three days ago. The chamber was empty and mounds of rubble prevented an advance into other parts of the mine.

Fourteen men were trapped in the huge limestone cavern March July 21. Nine were rescued unhurt Tuesday.

"We would have given anything to have found someone there," said one exhausted worker.

The rescuers said the chamber where they had expected to find the men was about 10 yards long, "but there was nothing there. All round was just piles of rubble from the cave-in. There was no sign of any human life."

Negro Comedian Dick Gregory Tells of Part in Finding Bodies

HONOLULU (AP) — Negro comedian Dick Gregory said today a letter he relayed to the Federal Bureau of Investigation three weeks ago told where to find the bodies of the three slain civil rights workers in Mississippi.

He said he also has given the FBI a tape recording containing names of the killers.

Gregory had offered a $25,000 reward for the information. He did not name its source.

The FBI in Washington said it had no comment.

Gregory, doing a night club date here, called a press conference and said he had considered the letter gibberish before Tuesday when the bodies were found.

"If it hasn't come out already," Gregory said, "you will find they (the civil rights workers) were shot and beaten."

The letter Gregory displayed said: "They are dead and have been since June 22, 1964."

Civil rights workers Michael Schwerner, 24, Andrew Goodman, 20, and James Chaney, 20, were last seen in Philadelphia, Miss., on June 21.

The letter said in part:

"After the civil rights workers were killed (the three rights workers . . . were buried in a field not too far from Philadelphia, Miss., between 8 to eight miles to the right coming south from Philadelphia . . . on highway 491 about 400 yards off the road, and this is why these three civil rights workers have been reported for the missing.

"The site where the bodies were found was about six miles southwest of Philadelphia.

"Two of the three bodies recovered from an earth dam near Philadelphia are the relatively Schwerner and Goodman.

"The third is not positively identified as that of Chaney.

Gregory said the tape recording was made "by a fellow who knows what's going on in Mississippi, and a young man in the civil rights information department in Mississippi." He added:

"The whole thing has been a whitewash from the president to the governor of Mississippi to Hoover and the FBI so

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Stock Exchange has asked management of Consolidated Golden Arrow Mines Ltd. for up-to-date financial statements by the end of August and has disclosed dealings by that firm and shares of Windfall Oils and Mines Ltd.

TSE President Howard Graham said Wednesday the exchange had received a reply from Consolidated President Viola MacMillan concerning Consolidated's dealings in Windfall shares.

Mrs. MacMillan told the exchange that Consolidated acquired 120,000 shares of Windfall on June 1, 1964, and bought a further 30,000 shares for $30,775.

"All of these 158,000 shares have been sold for a total amount of $185,000," Mrs. MacMillan told the TSE.

Windfall shares rose from a 1964 low of 31 cents each to a high of 1.60 on rumors of a rich copper strike near Timmins.

Last Friday the shares declined from $4.15 to $1.04 in heavy trading after President V. A. MacMillan (Mrs. MacMillan's husband) said assays from the first drilled on the Prosser Township property had been disappointing.

The stock closed Wednesday at 73 cents a share. Consolidated rose from a low of 20 cents a share in 1963. Windfall traded was hectic, to 65 cents a share. The stock closed Wednesday at 36 cents a share.

John W. Cummings Ordered To Stand Trial for Firing Gun With Intent to Wound

Magistrate T. Y. Wills today withheld bail after ordering a Point Anne man to stand trial on three counts of endangering the lives of members of his family in a shooting melee three weeks ago.

He committed 40 - year - old John Wesley Cummings for trial at the end of a preliminary hearing but said he would not grant bail until hearing the opinion of the crown attorney on releasing Mr. Cummings.

"My mind is not closed against bail at the present time," he told defence counsel Ben Hurley. "But this matter is so serious I want some assistance in making that decision."

He set Monday afternoon for a hearing with crown attorney John Pringle on the bail request.

Key witnesses called in the hearing — which started yesterday afternoon — were Mrs. Cummings' daughter, Mrs. Jean Sowden, her husband, Howard, and Wayne Cummings, another son of the accused man.

They testified that incidents surrounding the alleged offences outside the Sowden home on Highway 2 opposite Point Anne Live on July 21st.

The pattern of events—alleged by Crown Constable Logue—in the shooting started early in the evening of July 21st, when Mr. Cummings drove to his home west of Point Anne village from a Shannonville hotel by Mrs. Cummings, Howard Sowden, and her brother Wayne. Her mother, a younger sister, Nancy, 16, and Mr. Sowden returned to the Sowden home for a wiener roast. Later that night, Constable Logue and constable James Logue called at the house and gave Mrs. Cummings the keys to her husband's car.

Almost immediately after this Mr. Sowden and Wayne hurriedly drove after the officer, returning within minutes.

On meeting Mr. Cummings' car had pulled up outside the Sowden home.

Mrs. Sowden said she heard a shot fired when her father attempted admission to the house.

In all, a total of four shots were fired outside her home during which she cried a warning to her husband outside.

FIRED TWO SHOTS

One of the bullets, she believed, was fired as she appeared at a bedroom window after grabbing a .22-calibre rifle.

While those inside the house were hysterical, "I was not so worried about us—we were inside," the told defence counsel Ben Hurley, "but I was worried about my husband and my brother-in-law."

In all, she fired two shots from the light rifle—one of them coming through a screen on the window.

"She was just shooting to show that her husband was back, I think," commented Magistrate Wills.

Mrs. Sowden said she fired a second time when she observed her father's car moving away.

"Then I went inside again—and then I wasn't afraid anymore. I was just mad and I just shot that gun and I just prayed it was going to hit something."

She admitted she always had been afraid of her father when he was drinking.

"Sometimes he is drinking he is violent?" queried Mr. Hurley.

"Sometimes."

Howard Sowden testified that earlier that night Mr. Cummings called from Shannonville and with Wayne Cummings he drove down and picked up his father-in-law.

When they arrived at the Cummings house, Mr. Cummings staggered leaving the car.

His wife came out of the house and gave him "hell", the witness said.

Later, during the wiener roast, Mr. Cummings phoned and asked to speak to his wife, but she refused.

He testified that after he went after Constable Logue who immediately called for reinforcements. He returned home ahead of the officer to find Mr. Cummings on the stoop of his house, armed with a gun.

DIVED INTO GRASS

Mr. Sowden said he backed his car up about 50 feet, then dived into the tall grass of an adjacent field.

"That was the time I heard a bullet come through the grass," he recounted. His then crawled to a neighbor's house seeking help.

OPP Corporal John Thompson, one of a large party of police who surrounded the Cummings' home, said he made his way up to the house and arrested Mr. Cummings at his automobile.

On the front seat he found a 303-calibre rifle.

The magazine was in the gun at the time with two loaded shells and an empty shell and a cartridge in the chamber," testified the officer.

"He had been drinking—in my estimation he was not drunk."

Corporal Thompson added: "He was upset I would say to a certain extent. He seemed to be quite angry with his wife."

APPEARED INTOXICATED CLAIM

He said that a father appeared to be "intoxicated" when they picked him up at Shannonville.

Later, after Constable Logue had left the car keys at the Sowden home he and Mr. Sowden decided to return and pick up the automobile since Mrs. Cummings needed the vehicle for work. Mr. Sowden drove the parked outside the Sowden home and decided to seek the officer's help.

They stopped his cruiser near Bellefville, briefed the officer on the situation, then returned. He saw his father on the stoop of the Sowden home and heard one of his sisters shouting a warning.

He saw a shot after Mr. Sowden did stroll from the car and he jumped into the driver's seat. There was another shot which he believed struck the right front door of the automobile.

He told Mr. Hurley that Mr. Cummings at Shannonville had talked of a "conspiracy" between his wife and daughter—but it was not clear what he was talking about. His father, two weeks earlier, he said, stated he was going to "quit" drinking after an automobile accident.

He described the accused as a "very good" father and husband when sober.

Tomatoes, Corn In Quantity On Local Mart

One of the largest mid-week markets in some time was seen this morning. Large quantities of tomatoes, corn and melons were shown augmented by cucumbers, new beets, radishes, onions and other produce. In the fruit line were cherries, peaches, blueberries and a large quantity of huckleberries fresh from the rocks at Kaladar.

Tomatoes sustained a steady price of 15 cents a quart and were a little weaker as the market drew to a close. Corn sold for 60 cents a dozen ears, when the market opened but receded to 50 cents and remained steady at this price. Offering was not large and they readily sold for the early hour. They were of fine quality and grown in the Quinte district. Trade was quite brisk during the morning hours.

Too Many Local Boards Says Professor

KINGSTON (CP)—A professor of law at Queen's University said Wednesday creation of too many local boards and commissions prevents formulation of coherent policies for local development and government.

Speaking briefly to the Ontario legislature's select committee on the Municipal Act and related acts, Prof. Stuart Ryan said essential functions of local government, such as fire fighting, health, police and community planning, suffer in efficiency through territorial fragmentation of local government.

He said such functions should be entrusted to units of government the size of counties. Towns of 15,000 population are too small to be separated from a county for municipal purposes, he said, although they are eligible to be made city-status.

The committee sitting at Ottawa today. Next week it meets in Sudbury, Timmins, Marie and Port Arthur. The following week it sits in St. Catharines, Niagara-on-the - Lake, London and Windsor.

$20,000 Given Girl of Ten Hurt in Mishap

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Supreme Court Wednesday awarded $20,000 to Jean Alice Reid, 10, of Burlington, Ont., for loss of intelligence resulting from a head injury suffered when she was struck by a car near her home five years ago.

In making the award, Mr. Justice John Brooke found the defendant, Alvin Walter, a housewife in nearby Esquesing Township, wholly responsible for the accident in which the girl was knocked down Feb. 1, 1959, while crossing a sideroad on skates in a neighbor's ice rink.

Court was told the girl's head injury left her in a coma for four days after the accident and that her speech was regressed for a time.

Mr. Justice Brooke said he accepted medical evidence that the girl has suffered loss of intelligence so that she will no longer be able to achieve a higher education. He also noted the girl's beauty, personality and present health have not been affected by the accident.

He ruled Mrs. Watkins did not see the girl before the impact although Jean Ann was wearing a bright skating costume and could be readily seen.

The girl will receive the money on her 21st birthday.

Vietnamese Crisis Brings World Closer to Brink of War

By CARMAN CUMMING
Radian Press Staff Writer

The new Vietnamese crisis has brought the world closer to the brink of major East-West war than it has been since the 1962 Cuban crisis.

Why?

The question is made up of many smaller questions and none of them is answerable.

For example:

Assuming the truth of U.S. charges of unprovoked attacks in international waters, why did the little North Vietnamese navy decide to take on the U.S. 7th Fleet.

The question is all the more puzzling since Communists have been so clearly successful in their strike-and-run ground attacks in the South Vietnamese civil war.

NEW TACTICS?

From the point of view of military logic, the Communists would be expected to keep on with their winning formula while the U.S. might be expected to try new tactics to get the South Vietnamese government forces back on the offensive.

In short, does either side really want to escalate the Vietnamese war?

The U.S. insists it does not, although it acted even before the present crisis to add 5,000 men to the 16,000 Americans already "advising" South Vietnamese government troops.

The North Vietnamese also have no apparent reason for wanting to broaden the crisis into a Korean-type war.

The biggest question of all, of course, is whether Communist China is prepared to back up its threats and batter its way into another Korea.

THINKING AN ENIGMA

As usual Peking's thinking is an enigma. But it certainly is better equipped now to take on that kind of a war than it was 14 years ago. It has often derided the U.S. as a "paper tiger." This could be the time when it will decide to try to prove its point.

Also looming in the background is the question of whether or not the Soviet Union will involve itself in the crisis. Lately it has shown signs of wanting to keep itself aloof from the Southeast Asian entanglements.

In the final analysis, it probably will be Communist China that decides whether the crisis will lapse back into a muddy war of attrition or blaze into a spreading and disastrous conflict.

Pictures Show Moon Surface To Be Hard

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ranger 7 moon pictures have led scientists to assume now that the surface of the moon is hard, a leading astronomer of the project reported to the U.S. Congress Wednesday.

Previously, said Dr. Gerard P. Kuiper, it had been speculated there might be a thick, potentially dangerous layer of dust on the surface. But the evidence of the latest pictures "requires us to assume that the surface is hard," he added.

"I am willing to bet that if you walked on the moon it would be like crunchy snow," he said at a detailed briefing conducted for congressmen.

Kuiper told the congressmen two other important conclusions can be drawn from preliminary study of the 4,316 pictures Ranger radioed back to earth:

1. The "rays" that spread out 500 or 600 miles from some new craters on the moon are areas of danger for men landing on the surface. They are a cluster of secondary craters caused by large rocks thrown out from the big crater. In previous earth-based photos, they had looked like some innocent-seeming powder material.

2. The craters caused by direct hits of meteorites are "not bad" from the lunar explorer's point of view. "There are plenty of places where a manned landing would be safe," Kuiper said.

He said the moon pictures give a detail 2,000 times finer than had been possible by earth based telescopic photographs—"a really incredible achievement." The smallest features that can be distinguished are 40 centimetres across, he said, or 1½ feet.

DEEP LIFE

Sea anemones have been brought to the surface from depths of up to 33,462 feet.

Expect North

brought up by Soviet delegate Platon D. Morozov, who introduced a resolution to have the council seek information from North Viet Nam relating to be U.S. complaint and to invite North Vietnamese representatives to take part in the debate.

Chief U.S. delegate Adlai E. Stevenson said the United States had no objection to inviting North Viet Nam but the South Vietnamese should be asked, too.

Stevenson charged that the North Vietnamese torpedo boats attacked the U.S. destroyers in the Gulf of Tonkin and the attacks were part of a plan to subjugate all Southeast Asia. He told the U.S. counterblow was "limited and measured" to discourage further acts of aggression.

Stevenson charged that the was designed "only to make it unmistakably clear that the United States cannot be diverted by military attack from its obligations to help its friends establish and protect their independence. The U.S. had acted in self-defence and in accord with the UN charter.

Stevenson also indicated that the U.S. destroyer Maddox, the first warship involved in the Tonkin Gulf incident, had fired warning shots in the Sunday night engagement that touched off the new Vietnamese crisis.

FIRED ACROSS BOW

He said the Maddox was approached by three North Vietnamese torpedo boats in attack formation and that "when it was evident that these torpedo boats intended to take offensive action, the Maddox, in accordance with naval practice, fired three warning shots across the bows of the approaching vessels."

Morozov denounced the U.S. air raids as "acts of aggression."

Roger W. Jackling of Britain said the United States had the right to act "to prevent the recurrence of . . . attacks on her ships."

Secretary - General U Thant was expected to discuss Viet Nam and the whole situation in Southeast Asia with President Johnson today during a White House visit arranged before the latest crisis arose.

Colborne Girl Still in Coma

TRENTON — A 17-year-old Colborne girl, Dianne Teal, is reported to be in only fair condition in Trenton Memorial Hospital today and is making slow progress in recovery from head injuries suffered in a two-car crash on Highway No. 2, west of Trenton, Tuesday night.

Miss Teal was said by a hospital authority to be in a semi-conscious condition.

The young girl was injured while she was riding in a car being driven by her father, Ross Teal, which was in collision with a vehicle driven by a Trenton man, Charles Kenneth Chestnut.

Miss Teal's mother, Mrs. Violia Teal, is reported to be making good progress in the hospital and Mr. Chestnut is said to be convalescing satisfactorily from surgery performed yesterday for a fractured right knee.

Mr. Teal was not injured in the accident.

Main Runway At Air Station Now Repaved

TRENTON—Repaving operations on the main runway at RCAF Station Trenton, have been completed and the large Yukon aircraft are now landing and taking off. No. 437 "Husky" squadron has returned to base after working out of RCAF Station Uplands for the past month.

Murray Twp. Asks Change in Annexation Law

TRENTON — Reeve Douglas McMaster of Murray Township, Township Clerk Angus Gunter and Councillor Gerald Rose were in Kingston yesterday to present a brief before the Select Committee of the Ontario Legislature asking for a change in the municipal act concerning annexation procedure.

The Township officials claim that the present terms of the act leave township areas at the mercy of the urban municipality and that the act should be changed to ensure township adequate compensation for land assessment lost through annexation.

Murray Township authorities say that they have not received adequate compensation from the city of Trenton for loss of road grants and high school assessment loss.

Norris Whitney, M.L.A. for Prince Edward-Lennox, spoke before the committee yesterday in support of the Murray Township brief.

Ray Cornish, the editor of the Trentonian, returned this week from a two-week trip overseas, with the RCAF. Mr. Cornish spent several days with United Nations troops in Cyprus and also visited RCAF installations in France.

Dubbed "Oswald" by his protectors, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kent of the Frankford-Stirling Road, this rare bird, a Whistling Swan, could very well answer to the name of "Wrong Way Corrigan". Oswald lost his way on his return to Hudson Bay from his winter retreat in Florida, and somehow landed in the Bay of Quinte. His broken bill is in a wire frame, and he'll stay with the Kents until he's well and strong again.

Paradise for Birds Is Home Of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Kent

TRENTON — The home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kent on the Frankford - Stirling Road, is a true paradise for birds. A spring - fed stream tumbles over the rocks at the back of the property, falling away at the base to secluded ponds, which the Kents have enclosed to form retreats for their families of Canada Geese, Muskovey and Peking ducks and mallards.

At the very bottom of the garden, "Oswald," a rare Whistling Swan, has found a temporary home. He'll stay there until his broken bill is healed and his wings are strong enough to bear him away.

Oswald was brought to the Kents this week by Lands and Forests official George Warner from Stirling. Mr. Warner encased the big bird's bill in a wire frame, and now Oswald can eat . . . something he wasn't able to do when Mr. Warner found him on Sunday, floating helplessly in the Bay of Quinte at Bayside, and slowly starving to death, because of his injury.

Mr. Warner thinks Oswald may have caught his beak in a high tension wire. Actually, Oswald didn't have any business being in the Bay of Quinte. After wintering in or near Florida, he should by now be in the Whistling Swan nesting area on Hudson Bay. But Oswald got lost somehow, missed and here he is, looking and acting for all the world as if he means to make the Kent's back garden his permanent home.

The Kents have four Canada Geese this year. The female has been with them for eight years. Originally a pair, the mate died and to the surprise of the Kents and Land and Forest officials, the "widow" deigned to mate again.

"Usually they don't," Mrs. Kent told a reporter yesterday "unlike humans, they generally stay tied for life to one mate."

Each year, two to three goslings are hatched and when grown, are sent to Lands and Forests conservation areas.

Other ducks, sheltered by the Kents, are Muskoveys, Pekings and Mallards.

Last month, the Kents worked to teach a too - friendly Martin to prefer the company of his own kind to the companionship of humans. The Martin, a bird slightly larger than a crow, had been "adopted" by an area resident, who waited for him to fly back to Bird - dom, once his injuries were healed. But Martin had preferred to sit around on his new owner's shoulder. Appalled to, the Kents took on the shoulder - sitting Martin, and eventually coerced him into taking up housekeeping in a bird house on the property.

Crisis in Viet Nam

"There can be no peace by aggression and no immunity from reply."

In these words, with admirable brevity and clarity, President L. B. Johnson on Wednesday stated the foundation of U.S. policy in Southeast Asia, brief hours after U.S. Navy planes had attacked the bases of North Vietnamese PT boats and had destroyed a tenth of that country's petroleum storage capacity.

The bombings followed the repetition of attacks by these PT boats against U.S. naval vessels.

"The attacks were deliberate," President Johnson said.

"The attacks were unprovoked."

"The attacks have been answered."

Defence Secretary Robert McNamara had earlier told newsmen that it was up to the North Vietnamese whether these attacks "will be all that is necessary," an apparently clear statement of intention to refrain from further bombing raids if the North Vietnamese make no retaliatory attacks.

Between them, President Johnson and Defence Secretary McNamara have presented to the world an uncomplicated picture of U.S. policy. It is a policy which the free world should support but at the same time it is doubtful whether the facts are as lacking in complexity as this picture suggests.

• • •

President Johnson says the PT attacks on U.S. warships were unprovoked. The North Vietnamese declare that U. S. ships earlier shelled North Vietnamese islands. This latter claim may be out from the whole cloth, may have no basis whatever in fact. Still, the validity of the word "unprovoked" may be open to question. The North Vietnamese refer to U.S. ships invading territorial waters. Apparently they regard the Gulf of Tonkin as a communist lake. International law would not support them in this claim. If so happens, though, that hours before the first announcement of U.S. intentions to attack the bases of the PT boats we chanced to be looking at an old issue of "Time" magazine. In it was a map of the Gulf of Tonkin, on which was shown the supply routes from North Viet Nam to the Viet Cong in South Viet Nam. Also shown were lines indicating U.S. reconnaissance flights over North Vietnamese territory. The North Vietnamese might consider such flights provocation for the PT boat attacks. They might argue that the U.S. had no right to make such flights. International law would uphold them. But the flights would never have been made had the North Vietnamese not broken their word first.

• • •

This is the danger with undeclared wars. Neither side has any definite line drawn for it, which it knows it cannot ignore without paying the penalty of full-scale war.

Thus an undeclared war can become a full-scale conflict by almost unperceptible degrees, and without either side wishing this escalation to occur. That may be what has happened in Viet Nam.

It is also possible, however, that one side or the other has sought to enlarge the conflict. We should ask ourselves what either side has to gain.

A pretext to attack North Vietnamese bases might be welcomed by some of the U.S. military, but it seems extremely unlikely that President Johnson himself would seek such an enlargement of the war in an election year.

No sensible Chinese government would invite a showdown with U.S. military might, but there is nothing that is sensible in the Chinese communists' attitude towards the possibility of a nuclear war.

On the face of it, this situation provides Russia with a great opportunity to stay aloof while her two great rivals, the U.S. and China, tear at each others throats. But in fact such a policy could result in a showdown between China and Russia for the leadership of the world communist movement.

The Chinese Reds may be just mad enough to desire this, even at the price of a war with the U.S.

The world will uneasily await Peking's reaction to this week's danger-fraught incidents in the Gulf of Tonkin.

We should learn whether the attacks by the PT boats was a case of incident by misadventure or a deliberately planned strategy to spread the war in Southeast Asia.

Legislators represent people, not trees or acres. Legislators are elected by voters, not farms or cities or economic interests.—U. S. Chief Justice Earl Warren.

Ottawa Offbeat
Commons Is Distinguished By Its Vast Emptiness

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Just the other day, Parliament's Public Accounts Committee had to skip a couple of sessions, for want of members hurrying around the Hill, knocking on doors and ringing phones, just couldn't scare up enough MPs for a quorum of 12. For an hour each day, Mr. Chairman sat, waiting hopefully, then quietly called the whole thing off.

Just the other day, the Commons Defence Committee kept important outside expert witnesses waiting 70 idle minutes before 12 MPs were finally corralled in to hear their evidence.

Just the other day, it was a Monday, when the Commons opened for the Daily Question Period and when attendance is at its best, 265 MPs were in the House, outnumbered just about four to one by the empty desks.

Just the other day, Mr. Deputy Speaker had to stop in count beds in the House at mid-afternoon, when attendance perhaps is at its lowest ebb, to make sure there was the required quorum of 20 present.

And just any working day of the week, all out of either Government or the Opposition Lobby and bear the Party White, bonnet clothing almost continuously in late afternoon or midevening, is warning to MPs that the House is getting perilously close to running out of the required 10 Members to keep it in business.

DIFFERENT NOW

So it is not, with the Capital awakening in Mackenzie Turkish bath that the Ottawa Valley becomes every mid-summer.

And the MPs aren't being worked collectively. If not individually, without a holiday break since mid-February.

Then too, just because an MP doesn't happen to be in the House — although it is either at all, most of them naughty are at the opening Daily Question Period — he's not necessarily mean they're not on the job. They could be at work in their office keep in touch with their business rounds of the Government Departments, or even attending to political chores back in their constituencies.

They could be.

But not all the time.

Attendance in the Commons could scarcely be an habitually hit-and-miss as it has been — even at the Question Period — or the House Committees so desperately short of MPs. simply been attending to the public business in other places.

Some of the time, perhaps, the explanation might be valid.

But not day after day after day.

Perhaps it didn't matter so much before Parliament raised the ceiling from $10,000 to $15,000 - plus.

Spending sight or nine months in Ottawa in session might be, and usually was, something of a serious financial sacrifice for many MPs.

But now?

"GUARD CAREFULLY"

Perhaps it still wouldn't matter — or be a hardship — if Parliament itself hadn't set out some rather thoughtful instructions for its taxpayers to stream into the Capital these summer days to do a day's work in it work in a so-often nearly-empty Commons.

For out has come a new souvenir folder which Parliament is providing each of the 750,00 tourists and visitors, instructing them...

"...Walk proudly through the Halls of Parliament when Fall welcomed.

"...Stand silently amid the brave, peaceful ghosts who forged our nation.

"...Wander thoughtfully, on the word-branched walk, thick with a hundred-years of history.

"...Guard carefully... this heritage, that Parliament House may stand."

Right follow, with its counsel to "guard carefully this heritage" was co-authored by Commons Speaker Alan Macnaughton and his Special Assistant, senior Civil Servant George Carter.

"We thought," said Mr Speaker, "it was a good time and place for something we hope may be on the inspirational side.

"We wanted in suggest to people — both our own folk and our visitors — that there is a real kick in being a Canadian."

Could be that not a few of these visitors, viewing the empty desks in the weary Commons these days, might think the Inspiration was needed more on the near-bare Floor than in the packed Galleries of the House.

Seeking Food Incas Ate

BBC London Letter

Of all the wealth of South America that European conquerors brought back to the Old World probably the humble potato was the richest prize. Modern research is now investigating other food of the Incas which never spread to the world at large. In a recent broadcast of the BBC General Overseas Service program "The Farming World", Robert Waller talked about a recent Oxfam grant of over £100,000 to aid research projects which will be carried under the aegis of the Food and Agriculture Organization with the assistance of the Bolivian Government.

Waller pointed out that on the high Andean plateau where the potato is indigenous many other very valuable tubers grow, on which the Incas relied heavily for food supplies but they maintained and even empire of their own. These had never spread to the rest of the world, and it is interesting that with the break-up of the Incas civilization the strains had deteriorated. A number are now being scientifically bred to give higher yields and the considerable genetic variation progressed that it would be possible to produce strains that would flourish in other environments.

"These tubers are a source of carbohydrates", said Waller, "but the Andes also offers various cereals whose possibilities have been virtually unexplored. The small seeds are extremely protein rich. They will grow at an elevation that is prohibitive to wheat and barley, are frost and blight resistant and need little water. The present maize yields are from 440 to 880 pounds per acre, but results as high as 4,400 pounds have been recorded under experimental conditions."

It was hoped that the research project now being set up for the development of indigenous Andean food crops would improve living conditions not only for Indians in Bolivia, but for others living in Chile, Peru, Ecuador and Colombia, and possibly lead to a great export trade.

Policemen Are Human

North Bay Nugget

This week, a story from police court told of how an old man, hungry, weak and very tired, was picked up on a highway by the North Bay area by the OPP.

The policemen took the man to OPP headquarters where he was allowed to freshen up and then was fed by the policemen at their own expense.

They gave the hungry old fellow their lunches and then went out and bought him another meal.

According to law, the man was charged with vagrancy and the court fined him $1 and suggested payment be suspended. He was given the option of serving 10 days in District Jail. He chose the latter for obvious reasons.

This kind act by the police officers touches the heart. It proves once again, as other instances of a kind or compassionate nature have, that policemen are human, too.

So often, people are ready to condemn a police officer, or are unwilling to aid him when he needs assistance.

Acts like this compliment the men and their force, the OPP as they do the other forces.

Tangible results of efforts of the City Special Property Committee, working unheralded and unsung for the past five years, are now seen in the hundreds of residences which have sprung up during that period of time on hitherto vacant lots of the city. For, thanks to the foresight and business acumen of the members of this committee, over 350 city lots, taken over for taxes, have been disposed of to city residents for nominal sums, and are now not only sources of additional revenue for city coffers, but form the foundation for "things of beauty" that should be joys to their owners for many years.

Women With Least Try to Show the Most

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: People who like music that puts them in a "mood" don't understand the nature of music at all — which is not to evoke a definite mood, but to set free the listener, but rather to put him in the skin of the composer and permit him to identify with feelings that are not his own, but which expand his own range of feeling.

An intelligent person hasn't achieved his full adulthood until he can be at least as kind to dumb people as he is to dumb animals.

At social functions, it is invariably the women who have the least who try to show the most; which recalls Beerbohm Tree's description of one of his leading ladies: "She is like a poor photograph — under developed and over-exposed."

Advocates of "taking the rod" to children to prevent their delinquency forget that one frequent boy come from homes where the father is tyrannous, repressive, and brutal; the only child who can benefit from a spanking is one who doesn't need it very much.

No matter how modest we may think we are, each of us at heart is firmly convinced that he is a shrewd judge of character; and it is this universal delusion that confidence men prey on with unfailingly gratifying results.

"One irrational slogan is worth a thousand facts" is an old Persian proverb I have just made up for the election season.

The basic difference between an artist and an entertainer — which is vague in most people's minds — is that the artist tries to satisfy himself, while the entertainer works to satisfy his audience; the artist tries to simply command the popular appeal of entertainers because they do not give the public what it wants but what it ought to want.

The need for superiority is so strong in some people that they can't buy a new type of lightning rod for the home without half hoping for a severe lightning storm in the neighborhood.

Only those who have gone to the courts can properly appreciate Voltaire's wryly rueful remark: "I was never ruined, except twice: once when I lost a lawsuit, and once when I won."

When we stop regarding infidelity as a cause of broken marriages, and begin treating it as a symptom of some deeper dissatisfaction, only then will we be on the right road toward solving the problem of two disparate personalities trying to get along.

When we talk about ourselves, we usually reveal only what we want to; it is when we talk about others that we unconsciously reveal most about ourselves.

To Your Good Health
Food Allergies Biggest Cause of Annoying Eczema

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is eczema incurable? My seven-year-old grandson has had it since he was a baby.

His mother puts a salve on the open lesions. Could it be allergy? His father was allergic as a child. Is there any specific medicine for this condition? Would food help? — G. G.

Food allergies are by far the biggest cause of eczema in children; usually the youngsters acquire a tolerance later, and the problem disappears. (Egg white, milk fats, various grains such as wheat, barley, corn, and oats are the most frequent offenders.)

Identifying the foods is very important, because then you can regulate the diet to avoid them.

Salves don't do much in the way of a cure, but it is important to prevent the raw, sore places from picking up germs. Lots of other kinds. These are secondary infections which can continue even after the original cause has been corrected. If salves are used to forestall such infections and for purposes of soothing the sore areas, that obviously makes sense.

Dear Dr. Molner: I was stupid enough to use a liquid hair remover on my face and neck, thinking it would never mirror, or would be easy to remove. I have been a nervous wreck since. I gradually saw it come back, and I feel it shows on my face when it turns cold before. Is this the case? What happens if one continues using this hair remover? — Mrs. H. S.

There is no evidence that it makes hair come back heavier or in different shape. This depilatory you have is probably nothing but the shock of seeing the hair grow again after, for a time, having had perfectly smooth skin. You can repeat the treatments as necessary.

Dear Dr. Molner: My feet perspire so freely that my shoes turn white on the outside. Could this solution (aluminum chloride) be used safely on the feet? — Mrs. L. S.

It can be safely be used on the feet, and a 20 to 25 percent solution would probably be best.

Start with a weak one in the solution to whatever strength you request.

Dear Doctor: My son has used every deodorant on the market but still has considerable perspiration. He tried aluminum chloride and it doesn't work either, but at least it does not irritate his skin. Could you explain why? What else can be done? — Mrs. M.

Aluminum chloride works in some cases in which commercial preparations fail, but there are still some cases in which even it fails. If the principal problem is underarm perspiration, then shaving may be the answer. If there is heavy underarm hair, nothing is going to work too well. Some men think it is "too feminine" to shave under the arms, but that can make the difference in solving or not solving the difficulty.

A word of warning: No deodorant or antiperspirant should be used immediately after shaving.

Dear Doctor: My teen-age daughter has a perspiration problem and we would like to try aluminum chloride. Can you repeat where to get it and how to use it? — Mrs. J. P.

You can have your druggist prepare a solution. In general they make it in strengths of from 10 to 25 percent. (If stronger solution is irritating, use a weaker one. You might, for example, take the 25 percent solution and add water to reduce it to about half.)

Many Uses For Seaweed

Saint John Telegraph Journal

Seaweed is mostly a nuisance to New Brunswickers. One day we may wish we had more of it.

The only variety to exploit commercially at present is dulse. It commands a good price, supply just about matches demand, and we have no particular need to seek to extend appreciation of its great virtues to the unwashed and unsophisticated unfortunates beyond our seagirt shores. Let them eat peanuts. If they acquired a taste for dulse we would probably run short ourselves.

But there are extensive beds of Irish moss around our coast, particularly on Northumberland Strait, which could be worked. Similar beds are being harvested in PEI for export to the U.S. and to Nova Scotia, where a million - dollar plant has been established for several years to extract carrageenin and other alginates from Irish moss, kelp and similar seaweeds. The extracts will surprise you. They are used in medicines and chocolate milk to keep solids in suspension, in shaving cream, ice cream, and puddings to make them smooth, and so on.

Ed: great list.

There is no evidence that it makes hair come back heavier or in different shape. This depilatory you have is probably nothing but the shock of seeing the hair grow again after, for a time, having had perfectly smooth skin. You can repeat the treatments as necessary.

Dear Dr. Molner: My feet perspire so freely that my shoes turn white on the outside. Could this solution (aluminum chloride) be used safely on the feet? — Mrs. L. S.

It can be safely be used on the feet, and a 20 to 25 percent solution would probably be best.

Start with a weak one in the solution to whatever strength you request.

Dear Doctor: My son has used every deodorant on the market but still has considerable perspiration. He tried aluminum chloride and it doesn't work either, but at least it does not irritate his skin. Could you explain why? What else can be done? — Mrs. M.

Aluminum chloride works in some cases in which commercial preparations fail, but there are still some cases in which even it fails. If the principal problem is underarm perspiration, then shaving may be the answer. If there is heavy underarm hair, nothing is going to work too well. Some men think it is "too feminine" to shave under the arms, but that can make the difference in solving or not solving the difficulty.

A word of warning: No deodorant or antiperspirant should be used immediately after shaving.

Old Hay Bay Church Has Been Preserved

PICTON (Staff) — The Hay Bay Church, located on the south shore of Hay Bay near Dorland, is the oldest United Church edifice of any existence today. It was the first Methodist church to be built west of the Maritimes. It is a link with the original settlement of Ontario, for most of those who built the church in 1792 had arrived in 1784 to settle in a wilderness that had only been hastily surveyed the year before.

The annual service is held there the last Sunday in August.

This church was for many years the centre of vigorous Methodism, which grew by 1900 into the largest Protestant body in Canada and which formed the largest communion that entered the United Church of Canada in 1925. Less than 75 years after its founding the congregation built a new house on another site and a few years later erected still another, its present church, but the old church has been preserved and stands today as a witness to the labors of the early pioneers and a symbol of their faith.

The early settlers of Hay Bay were, however, more than the builders of Methodism. They were builders of a country. Shannondale Park is pointed out at the re-opening of the old church in 1912 that among the descendents of the pioneers to the building fund of the church in 1792 he could name, besides many doctors, lawyers, engineers, magistrates and municipal offices holders, seven members of parliament, including one provincial premier, nine Methodist preachers "and I don't know how many Methodist preachers wives."

Then he went on to say that it was indeed a stroke of good fortune to be on the subscription list because it was a list of some of the makers of Canada, the builders of the first Methodist Church.

Most diplomats here were convinced that China, despite tough words, is loath to get involved in a direct conflict with the U.S. in Southeast Asia, especially if Russian military support was not guaranteed.

Associate State Status For Quebec?

QUEBEC (CP)—The proposal that Quebec become an "associate state" of Canada will be a major issue when 1,000 delegates gather here this weekend for a two-day convention of Le Rellement des Creditistes.

The Creditistes also are to discuss entering provincial politics in the next Quebec election, expected in 1966.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette has said there is no question yet of choosing a provincial leader for Le Rallement's proposed provincial wing, but a committee is drafting a platform to be placed before the convention.

Pearson, Martin and PC Leader Defend Actions Of U. S. in North Viet Nam

End

about 10 minutes later the hour-long leaders' meeting ended in disagreement. Prime Minister Pearson told a press conference that Mr. Diefenbaker had rejected a "compromise" proposal advanced Monday by New Democratic Leader Douglas.

The government and the three small parties all favored in principle Mr. Douglas's plan. Under it, conclusion of the flag debate would have been postponed to the fall and limited to one week or so. Mr. Diefenbaker objected that a time limit would in effect be a gag rule.

Mr. Pearson said the government will press ahead with three items: interim supply, legislation increasing the pensions' share of personal income tax and the companion resolutions for the leaf Canadian flag and for recognition of the Union Jack as the symbol of Canada's royal and Commonwealth connections. All these measures would have to be dealt with in that order before the government would consider calling a summer recess, he said.

Mr. McIlraith was expected to introduce a resolution for three months' supply today. The taxsharing bill that will follow is expected to be debated at length.

Most of Wednesday's short sitting was taken up by more government replies to some of the 220 questions asked by Conservative MPs in the drawn - out money debate. Statements were made by Transport Minister Pickersgill, Health Minister Judy LaMarsh and Bruce Beer, parliamentary secretary to Agriculture Minister Hays.

Mr. Diefenbaker coupled his suggestion for a three - month supply bill with a proposal that the latest version of the Canada Pension Plan be dealt with before any recess is called. The government plans to publish a white paper on the contributory pension plan shortly and hold off debate until the fall.

Thailand's armed forces were placed on full alert. The military build-up was intensified with the arrival at Bangkok of 33 M41 tanks in a U.S. Navy ship.

Two squadrons of jet fighters and reconnaissance aircraft landed at Hickam Air Force Base in Honolulu from the U.S. mainland for movement to the western Pacific.

The two squadrons of fighters contained about 50 F-100 Super Sabre fighters.

FEAR INCIDENTS

In Saigon there were fears of intensified Viet Cong incidents.

The U.S. embassy issued security precautions to Americans in the form of a "grey alert" after two bomb incidents in Saigon, although neither involved Americans.

U.S. personnel were asked to remain home as much as possible when off duty, to avoid large crowds in the city, to take special precautions in their choice of public transportation and to be on the lookout for explosive devices in vehicles.

However, an embassy spokesman again emphasized it is not there are no plans for evacuating the 1,900 American civilians in South Viet Nam.

South Viet Nam's Premier, Maj.-Gen. Nguyen Khanh, appealed to the country to unite in the crisis touched off by North Viet Nam's torpedo boat assaults on U.S. destroyers and the retaliatory American raids.

PRAISES STAND

Philippine Vice - President Emmanuel Pelaez said the U.S. action in Tonkin Gulf represented "the kind of firmness that can rally the people of Southeast Asia against Communist aggression here and anywhere else in the world."

The Manila Bulletin said the United States "deserves recognition for showing firmness tempered by restraint in the face of provocative action."

Australian External Affairs Minister Paul Hasluck said his government believes the American action was completely justified. Australian newspapers also supported the move and hailed President Johnson for his stand.

But the Jakarta newspaper Indonesian Observer said the United States should stop sending warships into Tonkin Gulf. "In time of high tension incidents can be loaded enough for the slightest reason," it said.

Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri called an emergency Cabinet meeting in India's cabinet Wednesday after receiving a message from Johnson about the bombing.

A spokesman for the external affairs ministry said India is "deeply disturbed" by events.

The Statesman said "Communist forces are out to provoke the United States into rashness.

"There could be no surer way of precipitating the carrying of war into North Viet Nam than the American naval vessels in the open sea."

But the Times of India said the Tonkin Gulf incidents did not have occurred except for the presence of U.S. warships.

"The first fruits of the presence of the U.S. 7th Fleet in Southeast Asia are a rapid and dangerous increase of tension," it said.

MOSCOW WARNS

In Moscow, the Russian government warned that United States attacks on North Viet Nam could lead to a widespread armed conflict with "dangerous consequences."

The Soviet comment came in an "authorized" statement from the official news agency Tass, broadcast on Moscow radio after a day of official silence on the crisis.

West German officials expressed support for the U.S. moves, but expressed hope that the Viet Nam situation could be "normalized" and peace quickly restored.

North Vietnamese naval action against American warships, and that the U.S. wants no extension of the war in South Viet Nam.

ANNOUNCES RESULTS

Defence Secretary Robert McNamara shortly after the raids said Wednesday that in 64 sorties planes from navy carriers destroyed or damaged some 25 per cent boats, heavily damaged their torpedo bases and destroyed an oil depot capable of storing 10 per cent of North Viet Nam's petroleum. He said smoke from the oil tanks was seen rising 14,000 feet.

McNamara gave the American losses as two planes shot down and two damaged. Later he revised the damage estimate to a single plane.

In a television interview Wednesday night McNamara disclosed that the Americans had Undertaken reconnaissance missions over the bombed areas that confirmed the air strikes were "very successful" — and that the immediate crisis in the gulf was over.

The U.S. defence chief said the reconnaissance flights drew no anti-aircraft fire such as shot down the two attacking American planes, but McNamara noted that the American bombing and strafing attacks had knocked out some anti-aircraft batteries.

The estimates, McNamara added, indicated the air strikes wiped out two-thirds to three-fourths of North Viet Nam's operational patrol boat fleet.

VOTE YEARS

The United States has held presidential elections every four years since 1788.

Time

He repeated this stand to reporters when the talks collapsed following a day of comings and goings of party leaders to his office.

Mr. Pearson's broadcast said the opposition, by debating the interim spending bill at such length, wants to force the government to withdraw the flag resolution.

"Well, we don't propose to yield to this kind of tactic, to these threats, and indeed to this ferble. But we do not intend, if we can avoid it, to allow this situation to bring about an election. We do not think an election is in the best interest of the Canadian people at this time." HOLD CAUCUS

Mr. Diefenbaker, who consulted the caucus of Conservative MPs before meeting first privately with Mr. Pearson and later with the prime minister and other party leaders, made no immediate comment.

Mr. Pearson was to make a statement to the Commons today and Mr. Diefenbaker was expected to reply at that time.

For some weeks, Conservative sources have said the opposition intends to debate the flag and other measures fully. They have said they're prepared to debate until Christmas and battle the government's proposed flag design right into an election if necessary.

Political sources said that barring some new and successful compromise moves by Conservatives faced two alternatives.

They could continue with plans for extensive debate on the measures before the Commons, including the flag on which a number have said they are confident no vote will ever be taken.

Or, they could curtail their debating efforts and let the flag issue come to a vote, knowing the government has been pledged enough Commons votes from among smaller opposition groups for the flag to be approved.

RIOT OVER PRICES

BOMBAY (AP)—Two persons were reported killed, 36 injured and 305 arrested in day long food riots and related hooliganism Wednesday in Ahmedabad, capital of India's Gujarat state. A state government communique said large-scale looting, arson and stone-throwing followed a one-day strike sponsored by opposition parties to protest increase in "od prices. The communique said police fired on a mob after failing to disperse hoodlums.

MR. AND MRS. BRUCE RONALD DeGENOVA

DeGenova – Boomhour

Rev. Roy Vessey officiated at the wedding ceremony in Collegiate Hill United Church, when Shirley Marie Boomhour, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Boomhour, Belleville was united in marriage to Bruce Ronald DeGenova, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony DeGenova, Belleville.

Wedding music was played by Mrs. L. Blakely, Belleville, who accompanied the soloist, Miss Lynna Brown also of Belleville, in appropriate vocal renditions.

The bride, given in marriage by her father wore a floor-length gown of organza over taffeta enhanced with a round neckline and long tie - point sleeves. The bodice as well as the bell - shape skirt was adorned with a border of duchesse lace with matching lace under-crias - cross pleated design of self material. The back of the skirt fell softly into a chapel train. A shoulder length veil of nylon tulle flowed from a coronet headdress and she carried a white Bible crested with red roses.

The maid of honor Miss Judith Whitmore of Frankford and the bridesmaids of Miss Sandra Crawford and Miss Sandra Claus, both of Belleville were dressed alike in full length silver - blue brocade dresses matching chiffon jackets. The little flower girl Miss Janet Lynn King, cousin of the bride wore a white lace dress over blue chiffon underskirt with matching cummerbund. All four attendants carried baskets of white and pink pom poms and 'mums. Master Peter DeGenova was the natty little ringbearer.

Mr. Robert Grant of Belleville was groomsman, while Mr. Michael DeGenova, brother of the bridegroom and Mr. Keith Boomhour, brother of the bride ushered the guests.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Shrine Club, Belleville where the bride's mother received the guests wearing a knitted dress with matching linen duster and a corsage of 'mums. Assisting was the bridegroom's mother attired in linen sheath with matching jacket and a corsage of pom poms.

For the wedding trip to a cottage at Otter Lake near Parry Sound, the bride chose a silk turquoise sheath with matching duster, white accessories and a white gardenia corsage.

Guests were present from Toronto, Trenton, Belleville, Sussex, England, and Lyons Falls and Dexter, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. DeGenova will reside at 53½ Murney Street, Belleville.

Focus on Problem Pupils

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP)—Every classroom has its problems — the gifted, the slow, the handicapped children.

They don't fit easily into a public school system geared to the broad middle group of students.

Many, through force of circumstances, have been lost by the wayside or have not had the encouragement or opportunity to develop their full potential.

Sometimes their problems have gone unrecognized or have been inaccurately diagnosed.

This summer 1,100 teachers in Ontario are learning the skills needed to teach such children, whether in special classes or in regular classrooms. In Toronto, Port Arthur and Ottawa they are taking courses designed for an Ontario certificate, although a few of the teachers are from other provinces or other countries.

In the last 10 years the number of special classes in Ontario has tripled. There now are more than 1,000. The count has almost doubled in three years.

And it's only a beginning, says D. A. MacTavish, director of auxiliary educational services for the Ontario department of education.

'PUBLIC IS READY'

"The next 10 years are going to be fascinating. New emphasis is coming through. A lot remains to be applied. I think the public is ready. I don't think school boards will have to talk a community into it, and that is a change from a very short time ago."

Mr. MacTavish directs the five - week summer school courses. Qualifications: Its students are teachers with a minimum of two years experience. Its instructors all have taught special children.

And the subjects of the courses are broad — special children who come with the consent of their parents, often on the recommendation of their regular teachers.

The student teachers study such basic things as child growth and development. They also learn about work being done in special fields.

And they choose a specialty in which they learn from teachers who know, and from their temporary pupils, how to deal with the children, how they will react, how to organize work to fit their needs.

Not all the teachers will have special classes in which to instruct their pupils when they return home. Some will have to do a classroom juggling act, giving individual attention within a group.

Mr. MacTavish estimates that about 60 per cent of the Toronto group will work in special classes, but the percentage will be lower in other areas.

The courses teachers may choose vary from year to year. This summer, the first - year choice includes how to teach the retarded child with speech difficulties, the gifted, remedial work, and children with such afflictions as brain damage and cerebral palsy.

DUTCH MARRIAGES

Every year 8,000 civil marriages take place in Rotterdam, Holland.

MR. AND MRS. ROGER STUART GIBSON

Gibson – Cook

Gladioli decorated the altar of Glen Miller Anglican Church for the wedding of Shirley Ann Cook of Belleville, daughter of Sgt. and Mrs. C. C. Cook, No. 1 Wing, France to Roger Stuart Gibson of Glen Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Gibson.

Rev. F. Downing performed the wedding ceremony, and the organist was Miss Ann Downing.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Wallace Bell entered the church in a white gown of pure silk with fitted lace bodice and short sleeves embroidered with irridescent sequins. The flared skirt had a fitted waistline with a back bow and a chapel train. Her elbow length nylon tulle veil was set up high and gathered at the front with a cluster of rosettes. Her cascade bouquet consisted of red roses and white 'mums.

Mrs. Donald Reid, R.R. 5, Belleville was her sister's matron of honour. The bridesmaid was Miss Ruth Gibson of Glen Miller. The attendants were pink organza over taffeta with a lace overjacket. A pink bow was formed at the front of the waistline. Their pink headdresses were similar to the bride's but with shorter veils. They wore white accessories and their bouquets were smaller versions of the bride's.

Mr. Donald Reid, R.R. 5, Belleville was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. William Bell, Belleville and Mr. Ralph Gibson, Trenton.

A reception was held at Glen Miller Community hall where the bride's aunt, Mrs. Bell, received wearing a street length turquoise sheath of silk organza with matching lace bodice and short sleeves. Scalloped lace added a deft touch to the neckline. The skirt was accented by a cummerbund and back panel. She wore white accessories and a white gardenia corsage.

The bridegroom's mother assisted, wearing a powder blue three-piece knit suit, pink hat, white accessories and corsage of pink carnations.

The bride's table held a three-tiered wedding cake topped with flowers, and small clusters of flowers on the white lace cloth.

For a motor trip through New York State and New England States the bride wore a two-piece blue suit, blue hat and gloves, white accessories and corsage of white carnations.

Guests attended the wedding from Belleville, Trenton, Toronto, Bowmanville and Quebec.

Mr. and Mrs. Gibson are residing at 2319 Lakeshore Blvd. West, Toronto.

Miss Ruth Gibson was hostess at a shower at her home in Glen Miller before the wedding. Co-workers at Ontario Hydro honored the bride at a dinner and presented her with a Mixmaster and blanket.

Playground Activities

WILL CHOOSE QUEEN

Playground Queens from the twenty-three playgrounds will vie for the Miss Fenny Carnival crown on Thursday evening at the East Hill Playground at the corner of Bridge St. and Bleecker Ave. 6.30 - 8.30 p.m.

Queens for the various playgrounds were chosen on Tuesday evening and afternoon and the twenty-three lucky winners will compete for the city-wide crown at the annual penny carnival.

As usual it will be an evening when the penny is still king in a day of inflated prices, so it naturally follows that kiddies from all over the city will come loaded with pennies for an evening's fun and also to lend moral support for their particular playground Queen.

HARRY J. CLARKE

On Friday, July 31st at 2.30 p.m. a very successful miniature penny carnival was held at Harry J. Clarke. There were about 120 children present. There were numerous booths, a fish pond, hit the cans, fortune teller, ring toss, weight guesser, fat lady; guessing game — Beth Wood; age guesser — Deborah Hope; clothes peg drop — Christine Bone; peg toss — Lyn Wood; penny drop — Donny Welch; what am I — Raymond Welch; refreshments —Tony Vane and Jim Slather.

Winners of the two guessing games were: corn — Danny Bone; marbles — Lyn Wood.

Winners of the auctioned doll and the penny board were Sheila McLaughlin and Rosalind Rogers.

Winners of the clean-up contest for the person who picked up the most papers were: 1st — Richard Outette; 2nd — Beth Wood.

This special event was a combined venture of Mrs. J. Clarke supervisor — Pam Murray and Stanley Park supervisor — Janet Lambert.

The supervisors would like to thank all those who helped set up the booths and those who worked in them. The profits from the miniature penny carnival was used for a marshmallow roast, Tuesday, August 4th, parents' night.

The Experts Say
Don't Get Carried Away At Auctions Says Expert

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — The most important thing to know at an auction is what the merchandise you're bidding on its worth to you. Decide that ahead of time and don't get carried away.

People should never buy anything at an auction that they haven't seen beforehand," says Ben Ward-Price, owner of a Toronto auction gallery.

"Every auctioneer has goods on view before the sale. You should go around and have a look at them.

"If it's a piano you are interested in, you should be able to spend $10 or $15 to send in a piano tuner to look at it."

Mr. Ward-Price suggests that when taking an advance look, you decide what your top price will be. If you wind up bidding more than you feel the item is worth to you, the only person who is going to be happy is the one who offered it for sale.

"When you buy brand new stuff you can return it. In an auction sale you can't. When you buy it you own it. With the fall of the hammer the goods are sold."

CAN'T STOP BIDS

Mr. Ward-Price emphasizes that auctioneers are usually acting on consignment and they are obligated to get the best price possible. For this reason, the bidder has no protection except his own good sense.

"The auctioneer can't normally stop the bidding. If he is acting in good faith he can't just knock a thing down quickly."

Dealers who purchase goods at auctions with the intention of reselling them never buy without examining the merchandise first.

"The average customer doesn't know values too well but a dealer has to. If you know dealers you can bid with them. If a dealer bids $150 it's a bargain to you at $180."

Mr. Ward-Price says customers should also do comparison shopping before buying at an auction. Find out what the current price is for an oriental rug or an antique sofa, then base your own evaluation partly on that.

"As for the bidding there's nothing much to it. All you have to do is hold up your hand."

Traditionally, Mr. Ward-Price says, the price will go up 10 per cent on each bid. If the last bid was $100 and you hold up your hand the auctioneer will say $110.

But if the price is in the thousands it may go up $100 or $250 a bid.

"Provided an item is in good condition—not faded and so on, it is a bargain. And if you want to sell it again you will probably get the price you paid for it. But the instances of people getting 'finds' are almost nil because the dealers look goods over."

TRANQUIL INDIANS

Pawnee Indians may have been the first users of tranquilizers. They brewed a drink from verbena flowers to quiet the nerves and induce sleep.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

Religion often properly comes under attack by those who label themselves "intellectuals." No one can argue the need for rationality in human affairs; we avoid the light at our own peril. Intellectuality, unhappily, is a sadly missed element in our political and cultural life. And yet, knowledge by itself can do harm rather than good; this is especially apparent when we observe the manner in which many modern intellectuals "pity their-trade." They have succeeded in fragmentizing the world even as they have been successful in splitting the atom. In our days, the pursuit of knowledge is often equated with intensive specialization in fractional fields of investigation. The intellectuals are indeed right when they speak of the need for rationality in human behavior. They are wrong when they identify wisdom with facts, insight with information, humaneness with knowledge. Indeed, our generation suffers not so much from a lack of knowledge, but rather from the absence of a passion for its righteous use.

Ours is an "expert" society so highly involved and so technical that most of us leave decisions and conclusions to those whom we think are more competent. We worship the specialist and deify the technician. But, truth to tell, while they often look like gods, they sometimes act like fools. They take the adulation of the public far too seriously, imagining themselves really to be what the less-informed public thinks they are.

There are no greater follies than those of the so-called wise man. When he errs — he errs large! He may be sure of his knowledge; he is, often, much less sure of himself. Sometimes his over-concentration and "expertness" serve to trip him up; he thought he knew everything, and he should have known better.

HITLER'S PROFESSORS

Hitler's professors were men of great scientific achievement who stood in the forefront of human intellectual attainment. But they were capable of being used and prostituted to destroy human life barbarously, in cheap, efficient and scientific ways. They were outstanding technicians, but as men, they were dupes and knaves. They made no small, insignificant errors; theirs were big, massive — expert!

We admire proficiency and mastery and in our technological age, those who know a lot about precious little, reach top status. In blind unsophistication, we snub broad, humane knowledge in favour of "specialized" information. Or what is worse: we disqualify the good man on the grounds that he is not the best man. The obverse is more likely: the "best" man is not always a good man.

TUREEN AUCTIONED

LONDON (CP) — A silver soup tureen made for Catherine the Great of Russia sold for $12,000 at Sotheby's auctions. It was part of an Imperial service made in St. Petersburg in the 18th century and dispersed to buyers all over the world after the 1917 revolution.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: I've been invited to a party and was told I may bring my own escort. A young man I date frequently has agreed to go with me, but shouldn't the hostess send him a personal invitation as well? Also should I introduce him to the other guests, or should the hostess do this? — F. A. L. Allentown, Pa.

Answer: Correctly, the hostess should invite your date personally, either by note or over the phone. When you arrive at the party, you should introduce him to the hostess and she in turn, should introduce him to her other guests.

QUESTION: My fiance wants to invite several business friends — and their wives — to our wedding and reception. I have no objection to his inviting his office friends, but I fail to see why their wives have to be included since neither he nor I have ever met them. I'm preparing the final guest list, and would like to know if it would be proper only to invite the men. Would you please advise? — A. L. Cincinnati, Ohio.

ANSWER: If the men are married, their wives should be included in the invitations.

Successful Living

Talking Things Over Often Solves Many Problems

There's much to be said for communicating.

Not long ago a woman who had divorced her husband said to me "You know, my ex-brother-in-law and his wife are still fighting it out. But they haven't left each other. Perhaps if Roy and I had fought it out a little more, we might still be together!" Few years before divorce they had spoken to each other very little.

A recent article in a national magazine carries the title "Some Couples Reserve One Hour Each Day for Cocktails and Fights."

Let's see what you, my readers, have to say about it. One wife writes:

"The point is, I have reached the end of my patience. I am so depressed I feel like crying most of the time. I would like to be able to come into my house singing at the top of my voice, without feeling guilty that I might disturb my mother-in-law."

DORIS CLARK

This is from a husband:

"We go for days without speaking. If I ask my wife what's wrong, she just says 'Nothing'. But there must be something because she just isn't the happy carefree girl I married."

A teen-ager says:

"I'm getting so I just hate my mother. She simply lays down some stupid rule which I am supposed to follow, and when I ask her why, the answer is 'Because I say so!'"

A group worker tells me that she spends half her time trying to persuade her boys and girls to talk to their parents. But this is a two-way street. Mothers and dads who have been through the mill need to think back to their own tender years and present themselves open-minded and unshockable to their young hopefuls.

If parents see themselves as molders of character, they must also see that they get absolutely nowhere with the response, "Because I say so!" Does this teach anybody anything?

Weekly fighting sessions for married couples are hardly ideal, but there's little to be said for virtuous long-suffering silence. The only way we are going to have the rough corners knocked off is by coming to see the other person's point of view. Where two adults care enough about each other, they will reach out for this understanding and make it easy to talk.

Situations get out of hand. Husbands and wives take each other for granted. Shortcomings they hadn't anticipated disappoint them in each other. One day they discover that they are actively unhappy. One won't speak. The other realizes he or she must seek outside help.

If wife or husband has the courage at this point to seek out and talk to a counsellor, there may be salvation here. With enough warm regard, such a couple can be helped to settle down to the way life really is, and to a better relationship with the not-quite-perfect partner who, after all, is flesh and blood, and theirs.

If you are a teen-ager, a young married, a tired businessman, or a grandmother, worried about a deteriorating human relationship, take that first step toward talking it out with your own offender. Clearing the air may save something precious for both of you. — DORIS.

Holt Family Of Regina Used To Camp Life

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A two-month cross-country camping trip with seven children isn't every woman's idea of a holiday.

Mrs. Frank Holt of Regina admits her friends thought she was crazy when she first mentioned the idea. "But people don't understand how much we are to the camping life. We spend many of our holidays camping on short trips and the children have grown up in the ways of living in a tent."

She and her husband decide on the trip to show the children their country. "Once you have seen the St. Lawrence Seaway it becomes a very real thing and more easily understood.

"History comes alive for the children when they have visited the places where such early explorers as Cabot and Champlain first set foot on Canadian soil."

Mr. Holt was with the family for the first two weeks, but flew home to his job from Montreal on July 13.

Since then his wife and children have been through the Maritimes and are now well on their way back. They travel in a station wagon with one cabin tent. Their target for returning to Regina is Sept. 1.

IS UNIQUE

The Holt family is unusual for more than its nomadic habits. Only two of the children, Barbara, 15, and Kelly, 12, were born to Frank and Florence Holt. The others have been adopted through Saskatchewan's Foster Parent Plan. They are: twins Ann and Jane, David, 5; and Jamie, 11. In addition, during the school year, Mr. and Mrs. Holt act as guardians for two Indian girls who are bursary students at a Regina collegiate.

Mrs. Holt was Chatelaine magazine's Mrs. Chatelaine 1963. She is secretary of the board of mission of the Anglican Diocese of Qu'Appelle, and an active member of the Women's Auxiliary.

Chinese Men Told to Change 'Feudal Ideas', Put on Aprons And Help Wives in Homes

By ADAM KELLETT - LONG

PEKIN G(Reuters)—Chinese men who do not help their wives with household chores have been told to change their "feudal ideas" and put on aprons.

But the aim is not, as in many other countries, to allow wives to go out and enjoy themselves. They will get more time so they can play their part in "building socialism."

The campaign was conducted mainly in the letter columns of newspapers, as such campaigns usually are here. It started with a dirge against men who think themselves "too big" to help in the house.

A typical letter from an unidentified worker was printed recently in the national labor union newspaper Workers' Daily. He wrote:

"One day when I was very busy doing my household chores, a friend of mine dropped in suddenly and asked me to go out and have a good time with him. I told him I had a lot of work to do in the house and could not join him.

"He was not at all pleased. He said to me: 'You are not a grown man at all, but just an old woman.'

CHIDES FRIEND

"At that, I told my friend that he was taking the wrong view and advised him not to play at being the 'big man.'

"As a matter of fact, I myself once had the idea that I was a 'big man.' During the early days of my marriage, I, too, thought that it was 'the duty of wives to do the household chores and that it would be shameful for a man to do them.

"Later, when we had a child, my wife was so busy that she rushed out to the factory where she works and back again every day. She was so busy at home that she had no time for work or study.

"One day, while we were resting, she began to argue with me. 'We live in a new society now,' she said, 'where men and women are all equal. Therefore they should both do the household chores.

"'What is more, if you give me a helping hand, then I can do my work in the factory with not worrying, and that is very conducive to the building of socialism . . . .'

"Since then, I have been doing some of the work in the house. I could not do it very well at first, but my wife taught me patiently and, as I persisted, I gradually became used to it.

WIFE KIND

"Now, no matter whether it is washing the dishes, looking after the child, going shopping, or cleaning—I do it all. My wife is very kind and she always does the same for me.

"When she is on night shift, I always look after the child so that she can get a good rest and go to work again with plenty of energy. When I am on night shift, she does the same for me.

"Now both my wife and I can join study groups and do social work enthusiastically.

"She is the leader of her production group and also of the labor union group. Her group works so well that they have earned a lot of praise.

"When I see her organizing production so well, I am so pleased that words can hardly express the pleasure which I feel," the unionist declared.

ANTIQUE HOME

MONTREAL (CP) — Frank Higgins decided to open an antique store after his mania for collecting got out of hand. "At one point I had a kick on old locks," he said. "Before I knew it, I had 25. It was getting ridiculous." Now not only are the contents of his store but most of the objects in his apartment are for sale.

Abandoned Children Worst Problem for London Board

By ALAN WALKER

LONDON (CP)—"It breaks my heart to do this," says the pencilled note left beside two abandoned babies.

"Please don't think I don't love them. But I have no money for bed or food."

Thus two more toddlers are added to the list of homeless children cared for by the London County Council.

In cases of abandonment, there's nearly always a note. Anguished mothers seem self-compelled to apologize before dumping a child. Some notes are sad. Some are desperate. Some are cynical.

"You wanted me to have your child," says one message left with a 10-month-old girl in an apartment building hallway. "Well I've had two—so here's one of them."

HUGE PROBLEM

What does a vast city like London do about its homeless children? London has one of the worst child care problems in the western world. The harassed county council and its one 300 child welfare workers usually have about 10,000 children "in care." It spends nearly £5,000,000 a year on them.

In the last year for which figures are available, 1,241 babies and children were abandoned, deserted or lost in London. "Abandoned" means the alone in public places. "Deserted" refers to children left by parents in the care of others, when the parents don't return.

In 1962, 1,833 illegitimate babies were born in London. Many of them ended up at the county council nurseries. Others came from families in which the husband has died or deserted his wife (unusually an oppressed mother with a large family finds—like the old woman who lived in a shoe—that she can't cope with her brood and tries to put one or two children up for adoption. If that fails she abandons them.

The difficulty of finding foster parents causes more problems at an anything else. There is a large floating population of children under care of the council. Parents temporarily distressed often turn their young over to the council until the family can retrench, when the children return home.

APPEAL ON TV

These youngsters can't be put up for adoption but must be kept in homes unless foster parents can be found. But many people who love children are unwilling to become foster parents because the real parents can at any time demand their children back. So now there are television commercials begging childless couples to take babies into their homes for short periods.

It is not as simple as it may seem for parents to put children into the care of the council. Officers visit the homes to see whether any alternative can be found. The officer also decides how much, if anything, parents can contribute to the cost of their children's upkeep.

Somewhere in the middle of the bureaucratic whirl a distressed mother with a child or two, pin it to the clothing of the baby she genuinely loves; finds it hard to leave affection and apology where both will be quickly found.

Public sentiment usually is directed towards children thus squalling tot left in a phone booth sticks in the newspaper readers' minds. The council feels, however, that more credit should be placed on the parents' problems.

Greater magnanimity and concern for them could help them do what is usually best for all—keep the family together.

Five Eggwhites For Angel Food

by Mary Moode

A reader in Virden, Manitoba, sent me a recipe for an Angel Food Loaf which she recommended. It interested me for it called for only five egg whites. I often have egg whites leftover from making mayonnaise so I tried her angel loaf and also decided to freeze it. It froze fine.

I made mayonnaise from the 5 leftover yolks and decided they were companion products that hundreds of Canadian housewives would welcome this summer. The angel loaf sliced wafer-thin and will be welcome for summer meals to serve with fruit or ice cream and of course the mayonnaise is excellent for summer salads, particularly potato and chicken.

This process takes 15 minutes.

Into cold beater bowl put egg yolks, mustard, salt and sugar and beat with rotary or electric beater until thick. Slowly begin to add in finest possible stream the cold oil. (Note: I used a bottle of oil cooling but wonder was mostly cotton seed with some olive oil but no characteristic flavour. This is bottled by a Canadian Italian firm and has a plastic-tube insert when re-strains and to some extent controls the small steady stream of oil so desirable in mayonnaise-making.) Stop oil whenever it is not being emulsified into yolks at once. Alternately add lemon juice by teaspoonfuls. When about ¼ of the oil as added in this emulsification, you can begin adding it in a larger screen, but don't rush it. Stop when-ever oil collects at sides, until beater takes it into the emulsification. You will learn when to check the oil stream after you have made it 2 or 3 times. Keep beating, adding oil and lemon juice alternately until all are used. Store in two covered 24-oz. jars. Excellent instead of butter on sandwiches and for all of your summer salads. If you find it too thick it may be diluted with little cream of sour cream or with common salad dressing.

A highly professional product.

ANGEL FOOD LOAF (using 5 egg whites — courtesy Phyllis F., Virden, Man.):

½ cup sifted cake flour, ¼ cup unsifted icing sugar, 2-3 cup (5) egg whites, ½ teaspoon cream of tartar, dash of salt, ½ teaspoon vanilla, ½ teaspoon almond extract, ¼ cup granulated sugar.

Sift together the flour and icing sugar 4 times. Beat egg whites in beater bowl; with the cream of tartar, salt, vanilla and almond extract until soft-ly stiff, then gradually add the ½ cup granulated sugar until very stiff. Remove beaters. Gradually fold in, with rubber spatula, the flour mixture until blended. Turn into ungreased 10 x 5 x 3" loaf pan. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 25 minutes or until when tested with fingertips at centre cake springs back. Invert on cake rack one hour, then loosen sides with pointed knife, knock once or twice on counter and cake will fall from pan.

HOMEMADE MAYONNAISE (using 5 egg yolks — yield: 48 oz.):

5 medium-large egg yolks, 1 tablespoon dry mustard, 1 tablespoon salt, 1 to 3 tablespoons sugar, one 32-oz. bottle cold salad oil (see below), ½ cup cold lemon juice.

Queen Elizabeth Prefers To Make Her Own Tea

By HELEN CATHCART

Helen Cathcart has written books about the British Royal Family than any other living writer and is considered the best informed, as well as the mostly widely published author in this field. Her forthcoming book "Elizabethan" will be published shortly. She is the author of "Her Majesty," "The Queen and the Turf" and "Prince Philip, Sportsman."

Have you ever noticed how unthinkingly the customs of leatime vary in every household? The quiet ceremonial of the tea-table is always been traditionally British — and fittingly it is nowhere heightened with touches of more intense individuality than in the homes of the Royal Family.

If you could have tea with the Queen in her sitting-room at Buckingham Palace, you would be surprised and intrigued, I think, to find that she likes to make the tea herself. The recent months of relaxation from public duties have brought the boon of teatime enjoyment with her friends and time to wait for the kettle to boil.

The Queen uses an early Victorian silver spirit kettle that Prince Philip had skilfully transformed into an electric kettle. And at the Palace Her Majesty keeps her own special blend of tea in a lovely jade tea caddy that once belonged to Queen Mary.

At Windsor, too, the Queen has a caddy of cedarwood veneered in ivory and ebony which also belonged to her grandmother, a family heirloom handed down indeed through six generations. Though now nearly 150 years old, it is still kept in occasional use, lest it should lose the characteristic aroma of tea.

YOUTHFUL PRIDE

Other tea-table accessories were wedding gifts, which the Queen still uses after 17 years with a youthful pride in. You may admire a silver tray gifted as a gift from the City of Birmingham or perhaps see one of a set of gossamer lace cloths given her by the people of Malta.

There is even a charming silver caddy-spoon that tells a story of a penny subscribed by each of the nurses and youthful patients of a children's hospital. And at Balmoral the Queen always likes to use the tea-service of old Scottish silver, with its eighteen tea-spoons presented to her by the men and women of Aberdeenshire.

Whenever children are present, the Queen likes to use a silver cream jug in the shape of a cow, knowing it is bound to amuse them.

Another little idiosyncracy is revealed in her dislike of tea-leaves. During an overnight flight across the Atlantic, Prince Philip appeared in the galley to pour his wife an early morning cup. Then he exclaimed in consternation, "Oh, dear, I've forgotten to use the strainer. Now we'll have to throw it away."

TRAY FOR DOGS

At home the Queen's page always looks over the tea-tray to ensure a strainer is present. Another unfailing ritual test a little tray set for the dogs. Ever since she was a little girl, the Queen has always put an old cloth on the carpet and mixed food in a bowl for her dog, and her corgi, Sugar, receives this attention today with wagging tail.

All the royal ladies are knowledgeable about china. Admiring a new pattern perhaps at an exhibition the Queen can rarely resist looking underneath a piece for the maker's mark. When visiting a Staffordshire pottery, the Queen tried her hand putting a leaf pattern on a bowl and commented "Not bad!"

MARGARET DESIGNS SET

Yet Princess Margaret is perhaps more expert. Not long ago, she looked around in vain for a tea service in modern style in royal blue and grey to suit her sitting - room. The Queen has a pleasant set of china with lavender blue borders, though this is not quite the same thing, and the Princess ultimately decided to design a tea service of her own.

She made many drawings before getting it just right.

The 66 - piece service, specially made for her, has floral panels of pale grey feathers with gold and white trimmings against a royal blue ground. The teapot lid is topped by a silver - gilt coronet instead of a finial. The service has proved brilliantly functional in use but was, of course, expensive to produce.

Princess Alexandra, on the other hand, readily solved her own tea - table problem when she admired the Lunsville pattern service used by her sister-in-law, the Duchess of Kent, and place it on her own list of wished - for wedding gifts. Princess Alexandra and Princess Margaret also share the same polka dot pattern in their nurseries.

TWO SERVICES

Dutch law demands a civil marriage ceremony before a church wedding may take place.

Nothing Is More Revolting Than Cigar-Smoking Woman

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Several months ago I began to take out a very attractive woman who is successful in business and well-known around town. She is gay, interesting and a perfect companion.

Three weeks ago this woman went to Europe on business. When she returned I went to the airport to meet her. Her plane landed 20 minutes early. When I arrived, there she was, sitting in the airport smoking a cigar. It wasn't one of those dainty little cigars, Ann, it was a big, black one, the kind pool players and politicians smoke.

ANN LANDERS

When I asked what she was trying to prove, she replied, "It's very fashionable now and frankly, I enjoy it."

I'm a fairly sophisticated guy, but somehow I don't feel comfortable around a cigar-smoking woman. Should I make an issue of it? — SMOKE RINGS.

DEAR RINGS — They are going to hate me in Copenhagen but I can think of no sight less feminine or more revolting than a woman with a big black cigar in her face — unless it is a woman who chews tobacco.

I don't know the intensity of your feelings about her but in any discussion of your mixed values the relationship, she will give up the heaters — just because you ask her to.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Are you losing your buttons? Parents need all the help they can get in our child-dominated society. Here you come along and say kids should be allowed to talk on the telephone for twenty minutes every evening.

We have three teen-agers in our lunatic asylum called home. This means tying up the phone for one solid hour every evening with nonsense and yakety-yak.

Why should these nitwits have 20 minutes? Don't you realize the Gettysburg address can be delivered in about ten minutes? Hamlet's soliloquy takes less time than that.

Because your column is the hub of activity in our house I implore you to take another look at the problem and revise your advice. — BUSY SIGNAL.

• • •

DEAR SIGNAL — Teen-agers hardly ever phone each other to recite the Gettysburg address anymore. They generally talk about who went where, with whom, who said what and how, plus other trivia which may sound like a lot of yakety-yak to you but to the kids it is the core of their existence.

It's important for kids to be in touch, and the telephone fills an emotional need.

(And now a word for you teens who want to use this ammunition against your parents: Twenty minutes is the limit, so don't tie up the horn for hours and say "Ann Landers says it fills an emotional need.")

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Am I losing my mind? Tell me please if you think I should see a skull mechanic.

Last week when introducing my father-in-law to a neighbor I forgot his name. I was absolutely horrified.

Yesterday I was rushing to the bus and I began to talk to myself. I said, "Slow Down, Take it easy." What frightened me was that I answered myself. "I said, "Yes, I will slow down. There is plenty of time."

I know that talking to one's self is one thing, but answering is quite another matter. Help, please. — ALLISON.

• • •

DEAR ALLISON — I know of no one whose memory has not filled and him occasionally, and as for talking to one's self — and answering — we all do that, too. So cheer up and welcome to Semi-Kookville — where all of us visit from time to time.

Liquor can ruin your mind, your body and your life. To learn the booby-traps of teen-age drinking, write for Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-Age Drinkink," enclosing with your request 25c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Office Girls Get Break by New Project

LONDON (CP)—A holiday exchange scheme for secretaries in Canada, Britain and France has started operations here.

A non-profit project started by Patricia Hewett and called Office Ambassadors, it's aimed at making it easier for office girls to travel abroad.

If an English secretary would like to spend her vacation in Canada, the organization arranges for her to stay with a Canadian girl who has a similar job and interests. The same goes for girls in Canada and France.

The first British hostess is Jill Bertrand, 23, of Newhaven, England, and her guest is Wendy Lyons, 23, of Toronto.

SEEKS BAN

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP)—Nanaimo and District United Church Women have asked city council to pass a bylaw banning organized sport or recreation on Sundays during hours children could be in church. The women said they feel children are not attending church when they could be. Ald. George Bryce has recommended council study the matter.

Construction Roundup

By ANDY TURNBULL

BUILDING PERMITS

Building permits issued in the city during July covered work valued at $320,500. The total includes $165,900 worth of new housing, $98,553 worth of new commercial buildings, $104,863 worth of new institutional building and $4,875 worth of assorted garages, carports and signs.

On a six-month average, there is more work in town during 1964 than there was last year. Total new residential construction is up from $1,176,600 during the first six months of 1963 to $1,345,670 during the first six months of 1964. New commercial construction figures are much higher this year, $781,902 compared with $35,000 last year, but commercial renovations and additions are down slightly from $80,280 in 1963 to $70,600 in 1964.

There was no new industrial construction during the first six months of last year, and permits were issued for $10,000 worth of it so far this year. Industrial renovations and additions are down, though, from $206,000 last year to $74,300 this year. New institutional construction totalled $482,138 last year but only $243,467 this year.

Total construction for the first six months of 1963 was $2,535,307 on 196 building permits. For the first six months of this year, 218 building permits covered a total of $2,718,507.

SEWER WORK

Beaver Construction is finishing latest sewer connections on Strathcona and Victoria Ave. This week and shifting sewer-building operations to the west end of the city. Work started Tuesday morning on Adrian St., but stopped just as quickly. City and Beaver engineers expected to start on Adrian St., but Beaver bumped into solid rock just below the surface. Beaver superintendent Archie Savery said Tuesday that work would start on Sidney St., between Maple and Tracey, Wednesday, and work on Adrian St. would resume later in the week.

SURFACE STATION ST.

City works men started Tuesday to regrade, gravel and surface treat Station St. east of Herchimer, one of the last unpaved roads left in the city. The work should take only two or three days, according to assistant city engineer Richard Kraft. Reason for the job, he says, is that it will save money in the long run, over the cost of using road binder to lay dust on the street.

SMITH TRANSPORT GARAGE

First pour of concrete for the new garage at the Smith Transport Terminal made it about one third of the walls for the building last Thursday. Second pour may be completed by the time you read this and the third pour should be done by the end of the week. Superintendent Donald Newton had hoped to do the job in two pours, but steel shortages gave him the choice of three small pours, using the steel as it is delivered, or waiting for enough steel to make the bigger pours. He chose to make three pours instead of two. The roof will be poured all at once, close to 100 cubic yards of concrete, in about three weeks. Completion date for the building is mid-September and Newton says he expects to make it.

STEVENSON FORD SALES

Block is showing above the ground now at the new Stevenson Ford Sales site, and the footings have been checked, Superintendent Jack Wickens says there are about 3000 blocks in place now, and he hopes the test will be laid in two or three weeks. Steel columns and I-beam supports go in then, then open-web steel joists and a deck roof. Plans are to have the building ready for the 1965 cars, which will be out about the middle of September.

RAY HEDGER MOTORS

Ray Hedger put the first of a dozen service-entrance doors on his new building Tuesday. He hopes to do about two a day from now on, and have them all in place sometime next week. Meanwhile, Quinte Roofing started Wednesday to finish the roof.

SIR MACKENZIE BOWELL SCHOOL

Walls are up to roof height around the gymnasium-auditorium area of the Sir MacKenzie Bowell School on Sidney St., and concrete sub-floors are being poured throughout the building. Superintendent Dick Wickering says he poured the first floor section early last week, and has been pouring every second day since. He expects to be finished by the end of this week. Terrazzo will go over the concrete in the lobby and halls, hardwood on the stage and in the industrial arts rooms, and more cement and tile in the classrooms.

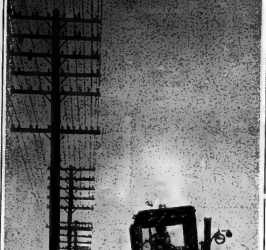
Cement being poured now, by the way, is covered with sheet plastic to keep it moist for a week to cure properly. Wickering says it saves a lot of work and does a better job. The plastic is used only once, then thrown away afterward.

There's a change in the plans of the school. When school board officials saw how deep the foundations were going, they decided some of the space under the floor might be put to good use later. There's a linlet cast in the foundation walls now, at the east end of the school. With the linlet already there, it will be simple to knock out a hole and install a door into the foundations, when and if it is needed.

HOLLOWAY ST. UNITED CHURCH

Herman Luymes of Miron Wiggers Construction is satisfied, if not entirely pleased, with the slow progress on the new church. Luymes says the job is up to now. Luymes blames Wednesday though, and Vosdamp is out on holidays. Bradshaw's masons are laying block now to bring the walls up to grade level for backfilling, and carpenters are building a header ing in the foyer of the addition.

WATER MAIN



Working south from Dundas St. on Sidney, Lightfoot Construction men are laying only one or two lengths of pipe each day. length is 16 feet), per day on the Sidney St. water main. Reason is that the work is through solid rock and there is a 16-inch main just four or five feet from the 24-inch main being laid. That means no blasting and no heavy machinery. Instead, men with hand-held drills are drilling the rock about every six inches and splitting it out by hand. There's a backhoe on the site, but that can work only in the clay near the surface.

About the end of the week, the work will move into a new problem. When the main was planned, everyone assumed that a lane running along north of the railway tracks and west from Sidney St. was city property. Now it turns out that the lane is a private driveway, serving Robert E. Griffith and Ken Gibson, who live just north of the filter plant. So the Belleville Utilities Commission has to get easements to run the main along north of the tracks to where the tunnel for it has already been pushed under. And Lightfoot's men will be ready to cut along the lane about the end of the week—which complicates matters.

Even if there is a delay though, it won't make much difference to when the main can be put to use. Venturi tubes needed to complete the hookup of the main inside the filter plant haven't been shipped from England yet, according to Norm Lightfoot.

INTELLIGENCER BUILDING

Steel reinforcing rod, 47,500 pounds of it, arrived Wednesday morning at the side of the new Ontario Intelligencer building and workmen started to prepare the forms for the base cement walls. The steel delivered Wednesday will reinforce the foundations for the bed for the big press, according to Superintendent Nathan Carr of Andrew Construction. Meanwhile, in the centre of the hole, back-hoes and trucks are still clearing away the rock loosened by blasting. There may be a week's work or more, just in finishing the excavation.

ON STATION STREET city employees started Tuesday to grade, gravel and surface treat the road. The road, one of the last stretches of gravel in the city, is being treated partly because of the high cost of laying dust on gravel roads.

Plan to Set up Federal Loan To Finance Feature Film Production Is Announced

MONTREAL (CP)—A plan to set up a federal loan fund from which private Canadian film companies could obtain financing for feature film production was announced Wednesday by Secretary Lamontagne.

He said the government intends to ask Parliament for authority to establish the fund, adding that it may take "some months" before this can be done. Details would be announced later.

Mr. Lamontagne said the plan would underwrite the costs of producing feature-length films of high quality in Canada.

"In our view, one of the important limiting factors in our country has been the scarcity of risk capital to finance such film production," he said. He was speaking at a ceremony marking the 25th anniversary of the National Film Board, a federal agency, Mr. Lamontagne said it is highly desirable to establish a feature film industry in Canada. Technical facilities and talent were readily available.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said in the Commons Wednesday he questions seriously any move by the federal government to assume the risk of private feature film production in Canada. He said that at a time when Canada is facing so many problems it did not appear to be a matter of priority that the government should assume the risk of private film production.

He asked whether the announcement means that the government is going to give the private film industry a bonus to increase its profits. Was the National Film Board to be an agent of the government in an attempt to compete with Hollywood and the British film industry?

Transport Minister Pickersgill replied that loans would be made to private film-makers only, not to the National Film Board. Several documentary film producers were in business already and prospects for successful Canadian feature films were good.

The formation of a privately-financed company to produce feature-length Canadian movies was announced in Montreal Wednesday.

Harry Horner told a press conference that Enterprise Films Limited, based in Toronto, has been formed to produce six full-length movies. Mr. Horner is executive producer and president of the new company backed by "25 leading Canadian businessmen."

Russian Press Reports Clash Factually

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Soviet press treatment was restrained today on American raids on North Vietnamese naval bases.

Pravda, the main Communist party organ, carried a Tass news agency announcement that U.S. attacks on North Viet Nam could lead to widespread armed conflict with "dangerous consequences."

But, except for the two headlines "Aggressive activities of the U.S.A. in the Gulf of Tonkin" and "an encroachment on sovereignty," it made no comment of its own.

The Tass announcement was printed alongside the joint American, Soviet and British communique marking the first anniversary of the test ban treaty.

Pravda and other newspapers also carried factual reports of official announcements on the conflict made in Washington and Hanoi.

U. S. Right To Retaliate Says Home

LONDON (CP) — British Prime Minister Douglas-Home today called the North Vietnamese assault on American warships unprovoked aggression and said the United States was right to retaliate.

The prime minister cut short a Scottish vacation to return to London for talks on the crisis. He told reporters at Euston station:

"This was an unprovoked aggression on United States warships in international waters. Therefore the United States has the perfect right to retaliate, and it is for the United States to decide what form the retaliation takes."

Douglas-Home headed into an intensive round of talks on Southeast Asia problems today with Malaysian Premier Tunku Abdul Rahman.

Sanitary Conditions at Camp Improved

FERGUS, Ont. (CP)—Dr. B. T. Dale, medical officer for Wellington county, said Wednesday he found sanitary conditions improved on his second visit to the children's international Summer Villages camp at Belwood Lake, 12 miles north of Guelph.

Dr. Dale had warned Tuesday sanitary conditions at the camp were below the average standard for Canada and it might have to be closed.

The month-long camp has attracted 40 children, all 11 years old, from 10 countries including Sweden, Japan, Mexico, India, France, The Netherlands, Norway and Canada.

Dr. Dale had said a boy suffering from a sore throat was admitted to the camp without a medical examination and was later put into sick bay at the mother's request.

He said Wednesday, "The camp authorities have complied with all my directions and I am satisfied with the co-operation I am receiving from them. The sick boy from Kitchener has been sent home."

The doctor said he intends to visit the camp regularly but now is satisfied it will not be necessary to close it for health reasons.

The camp is being sponsored by the Waterloo, Ont., Jaycees of the CISV, organized in 1957 as the first chapter in Canada. A second was formed in Ottawa last year.

NDP Leader Douglas questioned the wisdom of acting against shore installations, an action he called tantamount to a war declaration.

Transport Minister Pickersgill announced plans to set up a $25-million fund to help private companies produce Canadian feature movies.

Conservative MPs withdrew abruptly from the protracted supply debate but Creditiste MPs then prevented passage of the $636,000,000 supply bill.

Greeks, Turks Battle Along Cyprus Beach

NICOSIA (AP) — Greek and Turkish-Cypriots battled today with mortars and rockets along the Turkish beachhead in northwest Cyprus.

Sporadic firing continued at mid-day in the area known as Tillyria, a mountainous promontory dotted with small Greek and Turkish villages.

Turkish-Cypriots in the area control about 10 miles of coast, their only beach on the island. United Nations observers say the Turks have landed men and arms there.

The UN declined to estimate whether the renewed fighting meant Greeks were preparing a new drive to oust the Turks from the coast. A UN source did say, however, that the use of rockets and mortars appeared significant.

Swedish UN troops were pushed into nearby mountains to fight a large forest fire believed touched off by mortar fire.

Downtown Nicosia had been the scene of violence Wednesday night. One Greek-Cypriot was killed and four others injured during a two-hour street battle.

It was the heaviest street fighting since December, when the eight - month civil war erupted. Turks opened up with machine-guns on the Greek sector, ping street of the city's Greek section. a UN report said, and the Greeks returned the fire three minutes later.

Soil Judging, Land Use Contest Held in Sidney

Approximately 4 county 4-H club members competed in the annual Hastings county soil judging and land use competition held Wednesday at the Walter Savage farm on the 4th concession of Sidney township.

The competition was an all-day affair with the juniors registering in the morning at the Foxboro Co-operative.

Then followed a road tour up the 5th of Sidney to Wallbridge with co-operators receiving soil conditions and drainage problems.

In the afternoon the juniors were addressed by Jack Haggarty, regional soil specialist from Brighton, who gave instruction on soil judging.

The juniors were divided into groups for judging of four different soil areas, ending up by giving reasons and stating the crops which each type of soil would be most profitable.

EDUCATION TOUR

The main objective of the competition was to help juniors become more familiar with soil structure and soil type and to learn which crops are best suited for each type of soil.

The competition was arranged by county agricultural officer representatives, W.D. Tupper and Lyall MacLachlan with the co-operation of the Hastings County Soil and Crop Improvement Association.

The high contestant in the junior and intermediate divisions are presented with silver trays by the Moira River Conservation Authority. Junior section winner was Donald Gordon of Corbyville, while Alan Thompson of Moira was top intermediate contestant.

North Viet Nam Ruled By Ho Chi Minh, Skilled, Ruthless Communist Leader

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

North Viet Nam is a Communist-ruled land of mountains, deltas and sandstone plateaus covering more than 61,000 square miles in the northeast portion of the indochinese peninsula.

Its 16,000,000 people are ruled by Ho Chi Minh, one of the most skilled and ruthless of the world's Communist leaders. He led the successful fight to end French rule over Indochina.

From forested, 10,000 foot mountain ranges, the Red River emerges to water the northern rice paddies. Blessed with still-undeveloped mineral resources, the country has a rich potential for industrialization.

But North Viet Nam is reportedly caught in the grip of an economic depression with black marketing, corruption, food shortages, unemployment and low wages.

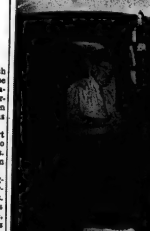
Rice is rationed and the rice crop is heavily damaged by drought and blights. It used to have dropped in 1963 to less than 4,000,000 tons compared to 4,700,000 in 1962. Even under the French, North Viet Nam knew when to "drain — could not grow enough rice for its people.

North Viet Nam and its pro-Western southern counterpart were born in 1954 after Ho's forces crushed the French colonial armies at Dien Bien Phu, ending a seven-year war.

Soviet premier Khrushchev proposed his dream of total control of Viet Nam in favor of a compromise achieved by the Geneva armistice powers.

This called for division of the country into two military zones with unification elections to follow in 1956.

The elections never were held. Convinced that the South Vietnamese would never agree to unity on their terms, the Communists began the guerrilla campaign which they hope will win them control of the south.



There is no accurate information available on the size of North Viet Nam's military, with Vietnamese sources say there may be as many as 500,000 men in the army, but U.S. intelligence sources place the total at around 200,000.

North Viet Nam's tiny navy includes 16 motor torpedo boats, all designed and most of them built in the Soviet Union.

North Viet Nam also received from the Soviets in 1961, a dozen 50-ton, 42-knot aluminum hulled boats, all constructed and equipped in Russia.

Scots Open Attack On Landed Gentry

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP)—Bitter complaints are being heard that large areas of Scotland are held as private preserves by aristocrats and millionaire sportsmen.

"It really is time we stopped bowing before these interests . . . They are probably the biggest single enemy of progress in the Highlands," said T. G. Willis, Labor member of Parliament for Edinburgh.

Pressures for change are building up from various directions and take on added significance as the United Kingdom approaches a general election with Sir Alec Douglas-Home, one of Scotland's great hereditary land-owners, leading the Tories.

Rocketing meat prices have raised demands for a big increase in Scotland's beef production. A big new pulp mill at Fort William has dramatized the possibilities of reforestation by modern methods. Prime minister Norway has 62 such mills.

Then there is the feeling, comparatively new in Britain, that not only the rich and powerful but ordinary folk have a right to get away from it all on vacations.

Worsening congestion in London and other "southern" areas has created a longing among millions to escape from the noise and bustle and share—however briefly—in Scotland's solitudes. The land owners don't like this idea. The weekly New Statesman says:

"The coming battle will be fiercest in the Highlands, where, with 54 people to the square mile compared with 10,512 a square mile in London, utter solitude for days on end is still possible over vast curving tracts of hills and moors, and on the great curving beaches which stretch empty to the horizon."

As the pre-election Parliament wound up at Westminster, Sir David Robertson, independent, outlined a plan to regenerate the Highlands by fertilizing from the air vast areas of barren land for cattle raising.

Robertson, member for Sutherland and Caithness in far-north Scotland, quoted protest letters alleging appalling misuse of land. He said most civilized countries would be ashamed to own a "desert" like Sutherland where crofters try to pick a living from a few acres while across the fence thousands of acres go unused except for hunting and fishing.

MILLIONAIRE RESERVES

"Gross privilege is given to a few millionaires to go up to the Highlands and reserve great sporting estates," he said.

"The result is silence, desolation and decay. They do not want any more human beings than are required to serve them on the hill and on the river.

"They do not want industry. They do not want the things that are essential for the future of Britain. And this is allowed to go on and on."

Greatest land owner is reported to be the Duke of Buccleuch with 500,000 acres. Prime Minister Douglas-Home is a lightweight in this league with some 80,000 acres in the border area. Some 10 others own 100,000 acres or more.

"Not an inch of private land in Scotland will be given up without a fight," says The New Statesman.

MAN OF DISTINCTION—Henry S. Hamilton, '77, holds two distinctions attained while serving Canada during two world wars. On Feb. 19, 1915, he became almost certainly the first Canadian serving with the Canadian Expeditionary Force to be wounded in action. Later, during the years 1914 to 1918, Mr. Hamilton, who had graduated as a lawyer in the spring of 1914, left his home town with the Sault contingent of the 2nd Battalion Aug. 20. After receiving preliminary training at Valcartier, Que., he sailed for Europe in September.

Five months later he was shipped into action.

He was wounded 15 hours after going to the front as a sergeant with the 2nd Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force.

A German shell exploded over his trench, showering metal bot sharpnel into his right leg. All day he lay in the trench, waiting for the cover of darkness so he could be carried to safety.

On his back for two months, he returned to the front in five months.

He received his commission at the front in 1916 and when the war ended he was major.

During the Second World War, as a lieutenant - colonel commanding the Sault militia, he was in charge of civil defence for the area, rated a key spot because of its vital canal.

It was his September, 1939, address at Liberal member for Algoma West replying to the throne speech that summed up his philosophy of freedom and the dignity of man.

"We are confronted," he said then, "with a problem that knows nothing of the individual and has no obligation to obey, that knows nothing of the value of human individuality and human liberty, whose instruments are ruthless and unscrupulous force and violence, an utter contempt for the things we have been taught to value.

"Believing this, to me this war is Canada's war. To me the defeat of Britain is the defeat of Canada. The defeat of France is the defeat of Canada. To me the death of every British, French on Polish soldier, sailor or airman in resisting German force and violence at this time is a life given in the service of Canada.

"We must make every effort to bring our whole capacity to bear in the struggle that is before us."

Ultimate Terror of War

By KEN SMITH

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP)—"The ultimate terror of war is death or mutilation on the battlefield."

Those are the words of Henry S. Hamilton and he knows what he's talking about, for he holds two distinctions in connection with Canada's role in two world wars.

In the first, on Feb. 19, 1915, he became almost certainly the first Canadian serving with the Canadian Expeditionary Force to be wounded in action.

In the second, in September, 1939, as Liberal member of Parliament, he moved the address in reply to the speech from the throne, in effect Canada's proclamation of war.

He has other intimate connections with war, too—his recollections of the front in 1915 after, he returned to action from hospital; his younger brother Robert killed in action in August, 1918, just a few weeks before the armistice; his son Malcolm, who flew Typhoon fighter-bombers in the Second World War.

So when he has, in a calm voice almost bare of emotion, of the terror of war, you listen. Because he knows.

HORROR UNEXPECTED

Mr. Hamilton now is 77 and still practices law from the office to which he returned shortly after the First World War.

Interviewed in that office, surrounded by long rows of legal tomes, he talked of the years 1914 to 1918.

"I haven't held details in my mind. It's not the sort of thing you dwell on—men killed, some good, some bad . . . fear . . . the trenches. . . .

"I suppose there was a feeling of excitement, because the horror of war wasn't known to us.

"In the second war, it must have been different because the memory of the slaughterhouse in the first was still vivid."

He said, after a pause, his most dominant impression of the early days at the front was Germany's preparedness especially as far as equipment was concerned.

"They had, in some sections, four times the number of artillery guns while ours sometimes were even rationed on the number of shells they could fire in return.

"But eventually we got equality and then a preponderance of guns. And that was sweet music to cursed soldiers, when we could outshoot them.

"Equipment saves human lives in war, and you have to pay for the lack of it with human lives."

Another, and bitter, memory he has kept of the early days of the war was the army's policy of not commissioning men from the ranks at the front.

Instead, officers with no battle experience would be sent to France to take command of war - toughened soldiers who had learned at bitter cost about the hell that surrounded them.

It wasn't, he said grimly, the best of morale boosters.

That policy eventually was changed and by the end of the war he rated the Canadian Army one of the best fighting units on the Western Front.

Mr. Hamilton, who had graduated as a lawyer in the spring of 1914, left his home town with the Sault contingent of the 2nd Battalion Aug. 20. After receiving preliminary training at Valcartier, Que., he sailed for Europe in September.

Five months later he was shipped into action.

He was wounded 15 hours after going to the front as a sergeant with the 2nd Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force.

A German shell exploded over his trench, showering metal bot sharpnel into his right leg. All day he lay in the trench, waiting for the cover of darkness so he could be carried to safety.

On his back for two months, he returned to the front in five months.

Hobby Show visitors will be able to find important messages to relatives and friends in Canada and either other countries in the hemisphere and to members of the armed forces anywhere in the world. Communications will be handled by Metro Toronto's six ham radio clubs with help from Hamilton and Oshawa groups.

That just scratches the surface. The show is huge and incorporates a multitude of interests. Don't miss it.

Rehabilitation Is Surveyed

VICTORIA (CP)—British Columbia is making an organized effort to help rehabilitate ex-convicts by getting the opinions of employers about hiring persons who have served time in B.C.'s prisons.

S. Rockborough Smith, provincial director of corrections, is conducting a survey of 126 municipalities and 1,000 employers to find out how many of them would help by giving jobs to public offenders on their release from jail.

The survey asks what kind of training the employers would like to see prisoners get and what type of organization they would like to deal with in hiring ex-convicts.

Penology researcher C. J. Duvetter, noting that more than 10,000 of the 14,844 person in B.C. prisons at the end of 1963 were "repeaters," say the offer of a job is the greatest boost a convict can receive in his bid to resume life outside prison.

Our Architectural Heritage

By LENNY WILLIAMSON

THE ROBERTSON HOUSE
At 184 William Street

Our Victorian ancestors' infatuation with the remote past has left us with a collection of mock medieval buildings of varying degrees of architectural merit.

Few of them approach the high standard of the Robertson house at 184 William St., a rare and delightful survivor of the early Gothic Revival.

The first examples of Carpenter's Gothic had a fairytale quality about them which was lost as the western world became more and more submerged under the clutter of the gingerbread age.

BUILDING TALENTS

It appears that James Noseworthy, a local contractor, built the house about 1855 as a model, a tour-de-force calculated to display his building talents in one grand gesture.

Undoubtedly he was inspired by the revolutionary design of Elizabeth Cottage in Kingston. It would be interesting to know why Noseworthy gambled on such an advanced design for a speculative enterprise, and why no one commissioned him to construct another like it.

FAKE BUTTRESSES

The early Gothic was frankly fun. Builders like Horsey in Kingston and Noseworthy in Belleville imitated stone cathedral tracery with carved woodfestooned along the eaves, added fake skeletal buttresses to the vestibule and perched a frivolous oriel window in the centre gable.

Their passion for peaks was more restrained than that of their successors — they contented themselves with a gable at the front, pointed caps on the buttresses and an arched tracery over the panes in the oriel window.

Noseworthy could not resist letting his style express all tastes. He added Italianate paired brackets under the eaves and filigree trim balconies at the second storey windows. His finishing touch was a cast iron shield over the door, where every proper Tudor householder displayed his coat of arms.

The Robertson, with a stroke of genius, painted their clan's crest on plain shield! It is a perfect match for the St. Andrew's cross motif in the iron railing around the front yard.

This Presbyterian fencing enjoyed quite a vogue around Belleville, for it is repeated many times in fences and as cresting on the roofs of houses.

When the Gothic cottage was introduced into Canada it came as a romantic relief from the formality of the Greek Revival and the self-importance of the Tuscan Tower.

We are indebted to James Noseworthy for his lighthearted design. Mr. and Mrs. Robertson, who have preserved all its gay frivolities for us to admire.

LA Blanks Birds; Yankees Clobbered

Ontario Intelligencer SPORTS

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Dean Chance, who shares his off-the-field escapades with Bo Belinsky, now has hooked onto a guy to share his shutouts.

Chance usually works alone on the mound, but needed a collaborator Wednesday night and found rookie Bob Lee a willing accomplice as the two combined efforts in Los Angeles' 1-0 shutout over the pennant-hopeful Baltimore Orioles.

It was the Angels' second successive shutout against the Orioles, their ninth in the last month and their 18th of the season, tops in the American League. And Chance and Lee have had their hands in an even dozen.

Lee, who got to be a reliever with the Angels because he didn't want to be a reliever with Pittsburgh, now has shared six shutouts with his Angel teammates, pitched scoreless ball for 22 1-3 innings over a 10-game stretch and lowered his earned run average to a brilliant 1.58.

A 26-year-old righthander, Lee was in the Pirate farm system until he balked at being a reliever. He became a starter—after taking a cut in salary—and during spring training was sold to the Angels for $25,000.

Los Angeles manager Bill Rigney soon found out what the Pirates were talking about and Lee went back to the bullpen. He hasn't started since May 15, appearing in relief 43 times.

NO COST TO ORIOLES

The defeat didn't cost the Orioles anything in the pennant chase as all three leading contenders lost for the second night in a row.

The first-place New York Yankees remained one percentage point in front despite a 10-1 beating by Kansas City Athletics and the third-place Chicago White Sox stayed a full game off the pace after a 3-1, 13-inning loss to Detroit Tigers.

Elsewhere, Harmon Killebrew hit his 38th homer as Minnesota Twins belted Boston Red Sox 6-1 and Cleveland Indians walloped Washington Senators 9-3.

Lee allowed only one hit and struck out four over the final three innings after Chance, who got the victory for a 12-5 record, kept the Orioles scoreless for six innings despite allowing eight hits. The Orioles stranded 10 runners.

The Angels scored the game's only run in the third on Lennie Green's double and a single by Jim Fregosi, tagging rookie Wally Bunker, 12-3, with his first defeat since May 30.

MATHEWS GETS HOMER

The Athletics got the job done against Chicago hurlers with Ned Neal Mathews hitting a grand slam homer and Rocky Colavito driving in three runs with a 4-for-4 performance, including his 20th homer. Colavito now is hitting .300 against the Yankee in 11 games this season.

Orlando Pena, 9-10, got the victory, allowing the Yankees' lone run on Joe Pepitone's homer in the seventh. Al Downing, 8-6, was the loser.

The Tigers beat the White Sox and Juan Pizarro, 14-6, when Don Wert led off the 13th with a single and Dick McAuliffe followed with his 20th homer.

Tony Oliva and Killebrew hit consecutive homers in the first inning and Bernie Allen connected in the second for the Twins and that was more than enough for Camilo Pascual, Pascual, 11-8 with his first victory since July 11, allowed only three hits, one a homer by Carl Yastrzemski.

Chico Salmon and Leon Wagner hit back to back homers in the fourth inning, powering the Indians to their victory over the Senators.

Joyces Meet Oshawa Here Tomorrow

Belleville Joyces, thoroughly rested after the conclusion of the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association senior schedule, go to the playoffs mat here tomorrow night.

They meet the Oshawa Merchants in the first game of the league semi-finals at the Fair Grounds starting nine o'clock.

The second game of the yet undecided series is scheduled for Little Britain next Tuesday.

Little Britain and Ajax tangle in the other semi-finals tonight.

While it was not announced, it is likely the Joyces will again be asked to send their ace hurler Bill Latchford to the mound in an effort to clinch the important first game.

Joyces finished with a 10-6 record to win the league pennant. But the playoffs' trail might prove a tough one. It is a new league and opposing teams may prove equally in the chips-down series.

Defeat Top Marksmen

Widow Wins Shoot Trophy

CONNAUGHT RANGES, Ont. (CP)—A 54-year-old Calgary widow, who shoots once a week for recreation, matched shots with some of the Commonwealth's finest riflemen Wednesday and sent them down in defeat.

Mrs. Jean McKeever, mother of four children ranging in age from 10 to 17 years, won the Alexander of Tunis event over 215 competitors including 28 Olympic gold medal winner Pat.

The cheerful, attractive Mrs. McKeever was tied with six others after the regulation 10 rounds had been fired from 900 yards at the army's rifle range west of Ottawa. The seven shooters all had 47 of a possible 50 points.

The shoot-off which followed resulted in one of the most impressive displays of cool marksmanship seen here in many years.

Five of the seven leaders showed up for the shoot-off. After five shots, the field was reduced to Mrs. McKeever and Maj. W. H. Macnay, a member of the British rifle team and veteran competitor at the Commonwealth championships at Bisley and Kendal.

OUELLETTE MISSED

Both had fired five consecutive bullseyes. Among the three top marksmen unable to show up with the pair was Olympic gold medallist Gerry Ouellette of Ottawa.

Mrs. McKeever and the major each fired three more shots with Macnay scoring before Mrs. McKeever fired a final bullseye after ninth in a row from 900 yards—and the major sent one slightly off centre.

Earlier in the day Mrs. McKeever, fired 119 of a possible 125 in the Macdonald aggregate, only one point behind the winner, Lt.-Col. Douglas C Merry of the British rifle team.

The two fired 24 bullseyes and a score of 99 in the Letson match fired Tuesday—only four below the top mark set by Mrs. McKeever in contention for a berth on Canada's Bisley team.

In other action Wednesday, a 13-man team from Alberta won the provincial championship, while a team from Nova Scotia took the cadet title.

Tpr. R. C. Barwise of Charlottetown scored 34 of a possible 35 points in a shoot-off with Cpl. E. A. Whalley of Regina to win the Letson match. They had finished the regulation 21 rounds Tuesday in a tie.

Track And Field

254 Enter Olympics Trials

ST. LAMBERT, Que. (CP)—More than 250 athletes from Nova Scotia to British Columbia inaugurate the new, controversial Seaway Park this weekend and trials to fill 15 berths on Canada's Olympic track and field team.

All of Canada's top track athletes are entered for the two-day trials starting Friday, including distance ace Bruce Kidd and Bill Crothers and Vancouver's Harry Jerome, co-holder of the world record for 100 metres.

Records are likely to take a beating on the track, the first in Canada made of a commercial asphalt (grasless) instead of the traditional cinder mixture.

The Amateur Athletic Union of Canada has indicated it will vote to accept records set on St. Lambert's non - conventional track when that body meets to-day on the eve of the trials.

Canada is a member of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, world governing body for track and field, which has refused to recognize records set on non-cinder surfaces.

"If any world records are set," said George Hunt, co-chairman of the trials, "they will, of course, be submitted to the IAAF which is expected to recognize such times in the near future."

Top Stars Defeated

Upsets Feature Women's Open

CALGARY (CP) — Upsets dotted the first round of match play in the 1964 Canadian Women's Open golf champion ship Wednesday as two of the three top money winners on the ailist honors were shunted to the sidelines.

Barbara Renwick of Vancouver and Kay Hellerud of Toronto were defeated by Sue Hi ton of Oshawa, Ont., and Miss Miller of Oshawa, respectively. Miss Renwick and Mrs. Hellerud tied for third money in the race for medallist honors Tuesday with 77.

Three of six players who fired 78 in the qualifying round —Joanne Goulet of Regina, Carolyn Gallagher of Toronto and Mary Ellen Driscol of Saint John, N.B.—also were eliminated. Miss Goulet was 40 miles an hour and sent medal scores soaring.

Sue Miliken of Toronto lost a thriller to 1964 Canadian junior champion Sandra Post of Milton, Ont., on the 19th hole.

Miss Milligan, former Alberta and Ontario interprovincial team member, rallied from behind a four-hole deficit to lead one up on the 18th tes. But she hurled her second drive to bush and got down in five to Miss Post's par four to send the match to the 19th hole. Then Miss Milligan three-putted from inches off the back edge.

Perhaps the most surprising event was the loss by Mrs. Hellerud, Miss Hilton, 24-year-old member of the Ontario golfing team that won interprovincial honors, outplayed Mrs. Hellerud most of the way and decisioned the victory.

Nancy Stoddard, of Toronto, the other member of the Ontario junior squad, dumped Bes Briggs of Saskatoon 8 and 1.

Defending open champion Marlene Stewart Streit of Toronto topped Mrs. Peter Bentley of Vancouver 6 and 5 for the most one sided victory of the day.

A surprising threat was Mary Fenton of Halifax, who took Gail Sheppard of Toronto to the 19th hole before bowing. Mrs. Harvey, won the Canadian women's close championship last week.

Another Ontario golfer, Rosemary Phillips of Cornwall, defeated Mrs. Robert Lyle, of Montreal, 2 and 1, while May Gay, of Kitchener, lost out to Mrs. H. E. Hunt, of Calgary, 4 and 3.

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARTER, Sports Editor

The private feud between Ray Villmer and Sweet Daddy Siki did not stop at last Friday's upset when Big Ike Eakins came to the Broadway Peacock's rescue enabling him to beat the St. Louis Buzz-saw in their "rubber" singles battle.

Villmer was simling when he left the arena and offered to take on both Siki and Big Bill this week either in singles or both at once.

But the powers that be figured Villmer might use a little help in subduing the ornery pair so they assigned none other than Gentleman Jim Hady to back up the Villmer play.

This, mes wrestling amis, looms as the choicest mat tidbit served to the faithful this semester.

As is known there is no love lost between Villmer and Sweet Daddy and Big Bill Eakin's interference last week did not enhance his popularity either with Villmer or the fans.

Eakin is well known for his ring skullduggery and you can bet the cookie-jar change he'll dig deeply into his bag of tricks come fish-day evening. He'll have a willing lurer in Siki who's dislike for Villmer could blossom into a lot of fireworks.

Eric Froelich, the good-looking German lad who made a fine impression here a short while ago is back in the semi-finals with Johnny Foti.

Duke Noble, former second of Sweet Daddy Siki, will tangle with Chief Suni Warcloud in the preliminary.

Looks like an evening of hellery, high jinks, with possibly a touch of near-mayhem tossed in for good measure.

SOFTBALL

Tweed Lumbanks and the city's Ellis Juniors hit the tough Belleville District Softball League finals trail tonight at the CNRA Park, quite likely festering two of the loop's outstanding hurlers, Bobby Ethier and Blaine Healey.

I'm not so sure about the Ethier selection since the youngster fashioned a brilliant four-hitter Tuesday night to eliminate the Trenton Printers in a fancy 4-0 shutout.

If Ethier goes to the hill, this game should develop into an eye-pleasing pitchers' duel since Healey is regarded as one of the best flingers in the district.

However, after their convincing win over Trenton on Tuesday, the city youngsters are keyed up and ready to battle the hard-fighting crew from Currytown.

The series is a best-of-seven affair with the second game likely played in Tweed Saturday night or Sunday. However, this is not definite. It likely will be arranged at tonight's tilt.

On other softball pastures, Lightfoots and Barriage Landscapers are in a series to decide, the Commercial League semi-finals. Lightfoots eliminated City Hotel from second place while the Landscapers took care of their opposition.

The Commercial League has been productive of some fine softball this season and has provided sports activities for a lot of players who would not be able to play otherwise. The loop brass deserves a pat on the back and while their stripe won't win any world titles, they're supplying a lot of sport and fun for player and spectator alike.

PLAYGROUND TRACK MEET

Belleville's first Playground Track Meet is scheduled for the East Hill Playgrounds Friday starting 1.30 p.m. Coach Norm Carter says the age groups are open to 10, 12, 14 and 16 years with boys and girls competing separately.

Events include 50, 100, 220 and 440 sprints and other regular track meet fixtures. There will be special relay races.

The winners of Friday's meet will qualify for entry in the Ontario Playgrounds Track and Field Championships scheduled for Peterborough August 22nd.

The meet here is a step in the right direction for minor track and field and should lead to bigger and better meets in the future. Youngsters intending to enter should contact their playground leaders immediately.

Ford Frick To Retire This Year

NEW YORK (CP) — Ford Frick, 69, under whose guidance the major league baseball map has underwent vast changes and expanded from coast to coast, has announced his retirement as baseball commissioner when his present term expires next year.

Frick told the Associated Press Wednesday: "It's just what I have said all along. Now I've just made it official."

Frick has been commissioner since Sept. 20, 1951, and has a contract through Sept. 21, 1965. However, he said he was ready to step aside as soon as the club owners elect his successor and had so notified the 20 club owners by letter Tuesday night.

"I'll stay on as long as they want me to—that is, until the end of my term," he said. "If they want me to stay around and work with the new commissioner for a while, I'll be happy to do that too."

Speculation as to his successor immediately centred on Joe Cronin, president of the American League; Senator Kenneth B. Keating of New York and Judge Robert Cannon of Milwaukee, who has been counsel for to the major league player association for five years.

Argos Have Better-Balanced Offense

TORONTO (CP)—Ever since the dawn of the Toble Role era in 1960, Toronto Argonauts have been passing more and enjoying it less.

The 1964 Argonauts may or may not find their way back to the Eastern Football Conference cellar for the third straight season. But they'll be going with a better-balanced offense than the lopsided attack that Rote and his successors have been running for the last four years.

When Jackie Parker took over as Argos' quarterback in 1963, he inherited a team that had to be moved by the pass or not at all. Opponents happily unfurled their umbrella defences and waited for the quarterback to start throwing.

Never an outstanding passer and hampered by a knee injury that prevented him from taking off on his patented rollouts, Parker threw willingly enough. So did Sandy Stephens, who spelled the former Edmonton-lan when the knee kept him out of action.

They threw enough passes to Dick Shatto to get him the EFC scoring title, but not enough to get the Argos into the playoffs. CAN RUN NOW

Parker and Karl Sweetan, the rookie from Wake Forest who has ousted Stephens as understudy, haven't looked any better in the passing department in Toronto's pre-season exhibition games. But for the first time since Cookie Gilchrist headed the conference in running in 1959, the club appears to be developing an effective ground attack.

It is based not only on Parker and Shatto, both starting their 11th year of Canadian football, but on George Hughley and Ron Hatcher, late-season pickups of 1963, and Sherman Lewis, a promising newcomer.

The team has added other assets. Ron Howell and Len Chandler, both returning after a year's inactivity since parting company with Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Ottawa Rough Riders respectively, give Argos a punt-return team that may rival Hamilton's Tommy Grant and Garney Henley. And Jim Christopherson, from Minnesota Vikings, is a reliable place-kicker.

Last year's respectable defensive backfield has been bolstered by the shift of punter-Dave Mann from the offensive team. All-star Jim Rountree, Jeff Atchison, Don Furil and John Wydareny are back.

Linebackers are soldovers Ron Brewer, Butch Lacure, Ed Hoerster, Christopher-on and Milt Campbell, the 29-year-old onetime United States Olympic decathlon star who will be a naturalized Canadian in time for the second game of the schedule.

Walt Radzick and Billy Shipp return as defensive tackles with Bob Streiter of Miami, Fla., or Hoerster at middle guard. All-star John Autry has been cut as a defensive end with holdovers Ed Harrington and Jerry Wilson slated as the first-stringers.

Offensively. Argos have veteran Norm Sonebargh at centre, guards John Rauhick and Harrington and tackler Danny Nykoluk and Radzick from last year's squad with rookies Dave Pivec of Notre Dame and Lee Sampson of New Mexico State breeding the candidates at offensive end.

Don Paquette, acquired from Montreal Alouettes, and veteran Marty Martinelle are available for duty on the line along with Jon Rechner in the offensive backfield.

Mays Defies Cold, Blasts 2 Homers

—Did It For Manager

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

"I shouldn't be playing" said Willie Mays. "I'm doing it only to help the manager."

It's a cinch Willie wasn't doing it for New York Mets.

San Francisco Giants' star centre fielder showed up at Shea Stadium Wednesday night nursing a heavy cold and when manager Alvin Dark made out his 4lineup, Mays wasn't in it.

But five minutes before game time Willie decided to play. The say-hey kid then clouted two home runs, his 30th and 31st of the season and the Giants defeated the Mets 4-1.

Dark's position as manager was reported shaky following racial remarks attributed to him by a Long Island newspaper. Dark denied the quotes to reporters Tuesday and then held a club meeting to explain his position to the players Wednesday.

STARTS RALLY

Mays' fourth-inning homer tied the score 1-1 and before the inning was over, San Francisco had taken the lead on hits by Willie McCovey and Tom Haller.

McCovey tagged his 15th homer in the seventh and Mays clubbed No. 31 in the eighth.

The power show didn't help the Giants in the National League pennant race. San Francisco fell two games back of Philadelphia Phillies who swept a doubleheader from Houston Colts 4-1 and 2-1. St. Louis Cardinals topped Chicago Cubs 4-2, Milwaukee Braves downed Cincinnati Reds 6-3 and Pittsburgh Pirates edged Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3 in other NL games.

The three homers were the first for the Giants in Shea Stadium this year.

WINS EIGHTH

Ron Herbel went the distance for San Francisco, scattering six hits to win his eighth game. Joe Christopher's sacrifice fly produced New York's only run in the third inning.

Richie Allen's leadoff homer in the ninth inning gave the Phillies the second game after pinch-hitter Cookie Rojas drove in Tony Taylor with the winning run in the seventh inning of the opener.

Bill White's three-run homer helped the Cardinals trip the Cubs. Bob Humphreys, who relieved starter Gordon Richardson in the sixth, hurled four innings of shutout ball to preserve the victory.

Eddie Mathews's two - run homer started a five-run Milwaukee spurt in the eighth inning that gave the Braves their victory. Leo Cardenas and Don Pavletich homered for the Reds.

The Dodgers nursed a 3-2 lead into the ninth but Jim Pagliaroni's leadoff homer against Ron Perranoski tied it. After Dick Schofield singled, Bob Miller replaced Perranoski and walked Bob Bailey. Roberto Clemente singled home Schofield.

Weekly Fishing Report

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario lands and Forests officials teamed up this week in the first of a series of weekly reports that may offer guidance to the province's anglers.

This week's report, covering eight of 22 districts, reflected recent heavy rainfall across the province that left conditions only fair but some improvement was forecast. Reports were as of Wednesday.

The reports:

Gogama — Prospects improving after spell of bad weather but no waters outstanding.

Kemptville — Pickerel and pike fishing in Rideau River at Kemptville above average; muskellunge fishing in Ivy Lea area of St. Lawrence River very good.

Kenora — Mid - summer angling normally slow in Kenora district; pickerel fishing fair to good in Lake of the Woods and Eagle and Wabigoon lakes and English River; smallmouth bass fishing good, with catches up to two pounds reported from Whitefish Bay, Lake of the Woods, Cavier, Cedar, Tree, Crow and Worth lakes; northern pike catches below normal size; lake trout slow; speckled trout inactive and no reported successes.

Lake Simcoe—Speckled-trout streams muddied and swollen by recent heavy rain but conditions appear to favor brown trout in Credit River and rainbow and brown trout in Nottawasaga River system; lake trout and whitefish slow in Lake Simcoe; pike and bass reported in Lake Simcoe and in the Couchiching, Georgian Bay and Severn River areas.

Lindsay — Smallmouth bass fishing fair to good in Apsley area; pickerel and muskellunge fair to good in Gooderham-Haliburton area; pickerel, muskellunge and speckled trout fair in southern portion of district.

Jets Blast Bisons 9-0, Leafs Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sherman (Roadblock) Jones, a pitcher who had won his last eight games, got his come-uppance from Columbus Jets, a team on a five-game losing streak.

The Jets, solidly entrenched in seventh place in the International League, hammered Jones and his successors for 10 hits as they clobbered Buffalo Bisons 9-0 in the first game of a doubleheader Wednesday night. The Bisons salvaged the nightcap 2-0 but lost a precious game in their struggle for the league lead.

While third - place Buffalo dropped 9½ games back, Syracuse Chiefs and Jacksonville Suns remained a game apart as the first-place Chiefs downed Atlanta Crackers 3-2 and 7-2 while the Suns whipped Rochester Red Wings 6-3 and 10-2. In a single game, Toronto Maple Leafs edged Richmond Virginians 2-1.

Fleming May Not Play Mon.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A sprained ankle suffered by British Columbia Lions' halfback Willie Fleming during the season - opener with Winnipeg turned worse Wednesday and the Lions may have to do without him for their Western Football Conference game against Calgary Stampeders here Monday.

That Winnipeg game was "the hardest hitting opener we've ever been in," said coach Dave Skrien.

Defensive back By Bailey suffered a slightly sprained ankle, quarterback Joe Kapp has bruised ribs; defensive end Mike Martin has a pinched nerve and an arm injury which started swelling during Wednesday's practice and offensive tackle Bill Frank is suffering an aggravation of an old neck injury.

Dark's Future Uncertain

Mets Deny Stengel Story

NEW YORK (AP)—New York Mets deny an Associated Press report that they have made a decision concerning Casey Stengel's return as manager in 1965. And San Francisco Giants won't comment on the report that Alvin Dark will be dismissed as their manager.

Casey's contract expires at the end of this season, Dark's Sept. 1.

M. Donald Grant, chairman of the Mets' board of directors, commenting Wednesday night on AP report that Stengel and the Mets will reach a parting of the ways at the end of the season, said: "No decision has been made. . . . We will not discuss it until the end of the season . . ."

Stengel, obviously disturbed by the story, told reporters: "The AP is not running my life and Relcher is not running my club."

Dark's status remains unchanged. Horace Stoneham, owner of the Giants, has been silent Dark, who had expressed his views in a Tuesday press conference on the controversial racial issue in which he had become involved earlier, had a short meeting with his players in the privacy of the clubhouse before the game Wednesday.

"I let them know what I always believed and what I will continue to believe," he said. "That's all I can do."

Dark had been quoted by a Long Island columnist as saying Negro ball players are men truly inferior to whites. He denied the story at Tuesday's press conference.

Favor Bears Over All-Stars

CHICAGO (AP)—If Chicago Bears live up to the role of solid favorites over the college all stars in Friday night's game at Soldier Field they probably will do it in the air.

Although the Bears won the National Football League title last year by ball-control football, Bill Wade will be tempted to limber up his arm against the college boys.

"The all-stars may have trouble with their pass defence," said Wally Lemm Wednesday at the camp of his St. Louis Cardinals, who scrimmaged against the all-stars last week. The Cardinal coach also thinks the collegians may not be able to mount a strong pass rush on the Bears' quarterback.

Comic Strip to Be Shown By ABC Early Friday Eve

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It's taken quite a while, but the comic strip is finally coming to network television.

The creators of Yogi Bear and Huckleberry Hound, have fathered a cartoon feature called Jonny Quest, which as a new ABC entry will be a combination of humor and adventure.

It will depart radically from the usual cartoon approach in that the characters will be human (as opposed to talking dogs or foxes) and drawn with an attention to style and detail.

A comic strip was tried several seasons back when an animated Dick Tracy was seen on some stations, but the new venture is much more sophisticated and elaborate.

ABC will launch the series in a 7:30-8 p.m. Friday spot, now reserved on all networks for programs attractive to small fry.

Jonny is a small, lucky boy or about 11 who is catapulted, week after week, into wild and woolly adventures. He will have close calls from creatures of the deep, savage Indian tribes, avalanches, even the abominable snowman.

He will travel the world, accompanied by his scientist father (all adventure shows now have to have a scientist somewhere in the cast- and an all-around athletic who teaches judo, karate, jujitsu and who often rescues him.

Joe Barbera, who with partner Bill Hanna dreamed up the show, says that because it is expected children will watch it, there will be no mad scientists or two-headed monsters. Nor will there be shooting and other gory dispositions of villains.

NBC will spend up to 13 years helping in the establishment of 13 TV stations for Saudi Arabia.

Actress Couldn't Get Job Until She Lost Accent

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — How would a mother feel if her 18-year-old daughter left home for the big city?

"I was terrified," says Mrs. Lucille Cole, mother of actress Elizabeth Ashley. "I told everybody at the office where I work in Baton Rouge that she was still attending at LSU (Louisiana State University), I was so upset that I couldn't bear to talk about it without breaking out in tears," she said while visiting Liz in Hollywood.

Miss Ashley is the electric brunette who scored on Broadway as Art Carney's daughter in Take Her, She's Mine, then established her stardom with Barefoot in the Park, to be between she played George Peppard's sometime wife in The Carpetbaggers. Several critics said she was the only worth while element of the movie.

Liz explained her flight from Louisiana:

"I felt it was something I had to do. I envisioned myself as a character out of a Hemingway novel—Lady Brett Ashley, perhaps, with a bit of Madame Bovary. I wanted to be a wild, tempestuous, larger - than - life character and New York seemed like the only place for me."

After her plane fare, she had $141 in savings from modelling. She didn't know a soul in New York.

Liz got work right away as a model, then gave some thought to acting. She had never done any, but she was accepted for

...dy at the neighborhood playhouse and then faced her greatest challenge: Losing her southern accent.

"I couldn't get jobs until I did," she said.

Scientists on Skis Probe Arctic Ice

By ALLEN SACKMANN

MOULD BAY ,N.W.T. (CP)—Camping outdoors may appeal to some people but its hard work for a Scottish-born physicist on a wind-swept glacier in the heart of the Arctic.

Dr. W. S. B Paterson is studying ice formations on a mountain about 2,000 miles north of Edmonton in hopes of learning something of the physical properties of the region 200 to 300 years ago.

His camp is about 1½ miles from the site selected for the research being carried out as part of the federal government's Polar Continental Shelf Project.

Each day Dr. Paterson and his three assistants don skis and climb the glacier, hauling their equipment by hand.

The glacier is on Meighen Island and is about seven miles long, three miles wide and 450 feet thick.

Using a new thermal electric drill which melts its way through the ice, Dr. Paterson removes an intact core from the hollow bit. The core of ice, in five-foot sections, is ship ed to Ottawa for study during the winter months.

SEEKAGE OF CAP

"Most measurements in the past have been done on the surface but more can be learned by going down into the glacier itself," he says.

"It may help us determine the age of the ice cap when it was most active and part of the history of the island itself."

Other scientists, American and Russian, have drilled through ice caps in Greenland and the Antarctic but this is the first project in the Canadian north.

With the hole through the cap Dr. Paterson takes temperature checks which, he says, may tell how the climate has varied in the region over the last 200 years.

He is also checking whether glaciers on Meighen Island are building up or melting. This is done by driving stakes into the ice and putting a mark at the surface, then checking the marks the following year. In four of the five years the Meighen ice cap has been tested, it has been found to have diminished.

Dr. Paterson works with other Canadian and American scientists doing aerial photography of the many ice caps in the Arctic. Pictures will be compared with those taken five to 10 years from now to determine changes in the glaciers.

DRIFTED IN OCEAN

On Brock Island, another part of the Polar Continental Shelf Project is being carried on by Dr. Hans Weber and his associates. They are doing gravity and hydrological surveys that may give a clue to when and how oceans were formed.

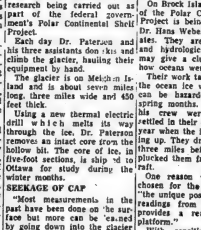
Their work takes them out on the ocean ice where conditions can be hazardous during the spring months. Dr. Weber and his crew were just getting settled in their ocean camp this year when the ice began breaking up and drifted more than three miles before an aircraft plucked them from their frozen raft.

One reason the Arctic was chosen for the gravity test is "the unique possibility of doing readings from the ice which provides a reasonably stable platform."

With sensitive instruments, the gravitational pull is measured. It varies, depending on the thickness of the earth's crust and its composition. The study also gives some indication of minerals that may be in the ocean.

In the hydrological research, Ross Douglas uses a small instrument that sends a sound wave through the ice to the ocean floor. The length of time it takes the echo to bounce back, combined with knowledge of the speed of sound in water, tells him how deep the ocean is in a specific place.

1,500 FEET DEEP



On the edge of the polar shelf —the land stretching out under the ocean for as much as 100 miles—the water is about 1,500 feet deep, it has been found. Beyond the shelf it drops to 12,000 feet.

Findings of these two studies are correlated with the results of seismic studies made across the Arctic ice. Crews set off subsurface blasts of dynamite which are recorded as listening posts located on various islands.

The seismic crews move constantly and have been known to sleep under the Arctic sky without a tent. But one man who sets up his tent regularly now is Tony Overton. He was asleep in his sleeping bag when a polar bear grabbed him by the arm and began dragging him away. A companion awoke in time and shot it.

The experience led Mr. Overton to design an Early Bear Warning System — "It's charged wire that extends around his tent. A slight pressure against it sets off a buzzer.

Tomorrow: Arctic pilots earn respect from scientists.

Gold in Cans

EDMONTON (CP)—Souvenir-hunting tourists will be able to buy canned black gold this summer.

Jim, Ed and Lawrence Kostyshyn are canning quantities of crude oil in their garage and distributing it through stores in Edmonton.

"We're the oil capital," one of the brother says. "Don't you think we should have a real Alberta souvenir?"

Lawrence is tap man and measures four ounces of crude for each can. Jim runs them through a rented canner. Ed puts on the "Black Gold of Alberta" labels.

If the project is a success, they have another idea.

"We might just do up some wheat in little bags for a souvenir of Saskatchewan."

Give Signal to 'Scramble'! Then Attack

Mosquitoes Have Air Battle Program

LONDON (CP) — A scientist from Canada who has spent a considerable time studying the habits of mosquitoes says they operate according to a rather intricate "attack program" similar to Strategic Air Command.

Dr. R. H. Wright of the British Columbia Research Council reported on his findings at a recent meeting here of the International Congress of Entomology.

He says mosquito repellents work not because they smell nasty to the insect but because they disturb its attack program. In other words, they are more like a radio beam that upsets a bomber's automatic pilot mechanism than a weapon to scare the attacker away.

A squadron of mosquitoes always keeps a number of their group in the air. The signal to scramble comes when a prey comes within attacking range, the alert being given by carbon dioxide which is exhaled by all humans and animals.

Then, says Dr. Wright, the mosquitoes head up-wind. The next stage is triggered by currents of warm or moist air which curl up from every warm-blooded target.

If the mosquito finds itself flying out of this congenial atmosphere back into cooler air, a sharp turn is triggered and the chances are that this will bring it back within the warm currents.

The final stage is a visual approach and landing. But the program calls for "no memory function or sense of direction" in the insect, Dr. Wright says.

Mastery Of Rules Will Be Vital In Flag Debate

PC's Predict Issue Won't Come to Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — Prospects are for the Commons to resume the flag debate early next week. All parties are preparing for a tough battle in which mastery of Commons rules will be at a premium.

The Liberals and the three smaller opposition parties—New Democrats, Social Credit and Creditistes — anticipate a long and gruelling debate kept alive by Progressive Conservative speakers.

The Conservatives have already given a hint of their plans in the Commons and privately that a great many more of their members want to participate than the 30 who spoke previously. Some Conservatives predict the flag resolution will never come to a vote.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker has already given a hint of one feature of the Conservative attack. He has suggested that the government postpone the flag debate to include the Canada Pension Plan.

Informants say that the Conservatives will build up a drumfire of similar suggestions as the debate progresses. The aim is said to be to portray the government as so bent on having a decision on the flag that no other matter of public importance can shake them.

PM RECOGNIZES TACTIC

Prime Minister Pearson recognized this in his national television speech Wednesday night. He said the government is "told that it (the flag) is a relatively trivial matter and that we should go on with other legislation."

"The time has come for a decision: There is no use saying that, as I see it, let's postpone it until spring or next summer or a year from now. We will always have legislation facing us that some people will say is more important that a flag resolution."

He said he believes a flag will bring Canadians together. He says the sense of unity and a feeling of pride and confidence in Canada.

4KKK Men Held By FBI

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Four white men were arrested by the FBI Thursday night in connection with the slaying of a Washington, D.C., Negro education-ist who was killed by a shotgun blast as he drove through a rural Georgia area. The FBI said the men were members of the Ku Klux Klan.

U.S. Commissioner Girard Hawkins said one of the four—James E. Lackey, 28—admitted complicity in the death of Lemuel Penn, an army reserve lieutenant-colonel slain July 11 as he drove along a rural northeast Georgia highway near neighboring Colbert. Hawkins said Lacky implicated the others.

They were held in jail under bonds of $25,000 each after arraignment before Hawkins on charges filed under the new Civil Rights Act.

Meanwhile, state authorities looked into the possibility of filing murder charges against Lackey, a gas station attendant; Herbert Cuest, 37, a garage operator; Cecil William Myers, a yard-picker and laborer, and Joseph Howard Sims, 41, a machinist, all of Athens.

The federal charge against the men carries a maximum penalty of $5,000 fine and 10 years' imprisonment while a first - degree murder charge filed under state laws can carry the death penalty.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover announced the arrests in Washington climaxing an intensive three-week hunt for the slayers.

World Press Tense and Divided In Opinions of American Actions

LONDON (Reuters) — The world press remained tense and sharply divided in its opinion of American action in North Viet Nam today as U.S. forces in the Pacific continued a state of alert.

Russian newspapers today gave more space to the situation and hostile foreign reaction to the American moves.

Pravda, the Communist party daily, used about half a page on the story. In a comment headed "Aggression in the Gulf of Tonkin" the paper accused the U.S. of "looking for a pretext to strike."

Pravda warned that "rash steps and provocation in this region are fraught with the most dangerous consequences."

Generally, the Soviet press stressed the danger of a widespread conflict in Southeast Asia if the United States does not immediately stop "aggressive activities."

SUPPORT U.S.

French newspapers remarked today on the calm attitude of President Johnson in his handling of the situation. The British press remained largely in support of the United States.

In London, The Daily Telegraph said "much verbal indignation" could be expected from Moscow over the American action, "but unaccompanied by any action likely to aggravate the conflict."

The Japanese national daily, Asahi Shimbun, called on the United States to restrain its military activities in Viet Nam before the situation developed into a second Korean War.

Hedged Pledge of Freedom Of Movement Made to UN

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Relaxing his stand slightly, President Makarios has made a carefully hedged offer to arrange a mission for United Nations peace-keeping forces to areas on Cyprus barred to them.

The Greek - Cypriot president's cable Thursday to Secretary-General U Thant appeared to retreat from the adamant position Makarios took July 28 when he wrote Thant that it was not possible to let UN peace-keeper Fetsiliva areas "where requirements of absolute secrecy on matters of state defence and security are involved."

Thant had protested to Makarios that Greek-Cypriot authorities were barring UN troops from Limassol and other parts of areas where the Greek-Cypriots were landing arms. He asked the Cypriot government to honor its agreement granting the UN forces "full freedom of movement" throughout the island.

In his note Thursday, however, Makarios told Thant:

"Irrespective of the legal views expressed in your communication, it is my desire to assure your excellency that the United Nations force in Cyprus will enjoy full freedom of movement throughout the territory of the republic.

"The only exception will be certain localities . . . access to which may be arranged after consultations between the government and . . . Gen. Thimayya."

Cubans Paddle For 300 Miles On Inner Tubes

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Five Cubans floating on inflated automobile tire inner tubes were fished from the Atlantic Thursday, and they said they had paddled 300 miles from Havana.

They said they had been bobbing and swaying with two crude oars for six days. Five of them without food, on what started as a makeshift raft.

But rough weather had battered it badly, bursting some of the tubes and washing away planks they had used for seats.

When they were picked up 35 miles off West End, Bahamas, sharks were swimming nearby. "The men were sitting and lying half in the water and were badly burned and suffering from exposure.

Canada Ready To Make Offer

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government has virtually completed its hearings of industry's views and stands ready to make its initial tariff-cutting offers in Geneva on Nov. 16 to start the Kennedy round of multilateral bargaining.

However, the date—already once set back because of the U.S. election—may again be postponed unless there is some break within the next few weeks in the continuing deadlock between the United States and the European Common Market over agriculture.

The Americans have said bluntly that unless the Common Market softens its views on agricultural protectionism by September or October, the U.S. may not be prepared to table on Nov. 16 its exceptions to the proposed 50-per-cent linear cut in tariffs.

Sources here say Canada's position is much the same.

There seems to be only scant hope in Ottawa that the farm issue will be eased, let alone solved, by Nov. 16. In fact, the full Canadian negotiating team does not plan to be in Geneva until January, though some members of it will be there next month.

Supply Bill Passed

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons passed an interim appropriation of $1,037,030,100 Thursday after nearly two weeks of debate and turned to a bill increasing the provinces' share of personal income taxes.

The interim supply measure will enable the government to pay its current bills in August, September and October pending approval of the 1964-65 spending estimates.

The Senate was to reconvene today after a week-long holiday to consider the supply bill.

The long supply debate ended with a heated scrap over the CBC. Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and Ralph Cowan (L—York - Humber) criticized the publicly-owned corporation for what they said was unchecked spending and "one-sided" news reporting.

Finance Minister Gordon and Robert Prittie (NDP—Burnaby-Richmond) said their respective parties support public broadcasting.

URGES SALE

Mr. Cowan accused the CBC of wasting "millions of dollars" "on a gargantuan scale" and of competing unfairly with private broadcasters. He urged that the CBC be entirely liquidated, its assets being sold to privately-owned radio and television stations.

But Diefenbaker said the CBC had been set up by a Conservative government in 1935 and his party still believes in a public broadcasting corporation responsible to Parliament.

He said the government had not answered opposition questions about CBC operations and had also failed to receive reports from parliamentary control. He again called for a Commons committee on broadcasting to investigate the whole field.

Mr. Diefenbaker objected to the CBC for its political reporting, which he said he found pro-Liberal and sometimes near-slanderous.

DEFENDS CBC

Mr. Prittie said the CBC should not be subjected to witch hunts by politicians. The present system of voting annual government grants to the cor-

Dead Woman Had Wound In Her Back

LONDON Ont. (CP) — An autopsy was to be performed today on the body of 32-year-old Victoria Irene Mayo, found dead in a downtown apartment Thursday.

Detectives said the woman had a wound in her back but the death was not being termed "murder." They said they were conducting a "death investigation."

Detective - Sergeant Frank Christie, leading the investigation, said an empty beer bottle, two drinking glasses and a leather jacket were removed from the apartment Thursday night.

Detectives said the apartment showed no signs of a violent struggle and the apartment was locked from the inside with a chain and bolt.

The body was found by Mrs. Jean Bonk, owner of the building, who entered the apartment through an open window at the back of the building after she got no response to her knocks.

Death Mandatory For Profiteers, Prosecutors

Premier States Week Will Decide Destiny

SAIGON (CP) — Premier Maj.-Gen. Nguyen Khanh today proclaimed all of South Viet Nam in a state of emergency. His proclamation in effect placed the country under martial law.

The proclamation gave military courts jurisdiction over all violations of public security with a mandatory death sentence without appeal for terrorists, provocateurs and profiteers.

Khanh said: "I am leaving once the "coming week will decide the destiny of our entire people."

The state of emergency provided for press censorship but it was expected this would affect the local press only.

"According to the needs of national defence, a partial mobilization of manpower will be decreed and applied," he declared.

LEAVES FOR FRONT

After reading the decree and broadcasting it to the country, Khanh said: "I am leaving right now to deal with my soldiers at the front." He told reporters he would leave for the 17th parallel—the border with Communist Viet Nam.

At the Viet Nam border itself, South Vietnamese forces remained on full alert but U.S. advisers said they doubt that the Communists would launch an attack at least for the present. One senior U.S. adviser said if the North Vietnamese had moved in anger over the U.S. retaliatory bombing of their naval and supply installations, they would have done it by now. The American air strikes took place Wednesday.

The response of China particularly was the subject of speculation when President Johnson ordered late Tuesday night the air strikes against the North Viet Nam mainland in retaliation for what the U.S. says were unlawful attacks in international waters by North Vietnamese patrol boats against U.S. warships.

U.S. Defence Secretary Robert McNamara Wednesday held a press conference at the Pentagon; U.S. defence headquarters, and said that while he assumes Peking may send in some combat aircraft to help North Viet Nam defend, it has been no indications of any substantial Chinese military movements in the last few days.

What's more, McNamara said there is no evidence the Chinese have helped North Vietnamese in the Tonkin Gulf action when U.S. destroyers Maddox and Turner Joy.

REPORTS UNCONFIRM D

U.S. military and intelligence sources in Hong Kong today backed up McNamara and said they had nothing to count official reports from Nationalist Chinese military source: that Red China sent about 100 Soviet-built MiG fighters to Hanoi Thursday to reinforce the North Vietnamese Air Force.

Earlier U.S. intelligence sources in Hong Kong had described as "highly inflated" Chinese Nationalist reports that large Chinese Communist army units had been shifted from Central China to the southern border provinces. One source said much of the activity involved work on roads and communications and reinforcement through an open window at the back of the building after she

It said President Johnson's request that the Southeast Asia question be brought before the United Nations Security Council revealed the U.S. was planning to use the UN "as a tool for intervention."

The demonstrators this morning paraded past the North Vietnamese Embassy in the diplomatic quarter here. Embassy officials stood outside to collect petitions and acknowledge the shouting.

Marchers in light summer clothes, wearing straw hats against the blistering Friday August sun, included factory workers, students and rifle-carrying militia.

The demonstration was highly organised and orderly. Marchers went straight to the office of Nguyen Thanh Phuong, charge d'affaires just across the U Thant Favors Parley

WASHINGTON (CP - AP) — UN Secretary-General U Thant has suggested to the U.S. government several undisclosed possibilities to help solve the crisis in Southeast Asia and says he personally favors another 14-country Geneva conference to deal with the problem.

Thant also expressed the opinion that the Security Council is not the place to bring about a settlement in Southeast Asia at this time because of the council's limited powers and the fact that North Viet Nam, the key power involved, is not a member.

Thant visited Washington Thursday for a day of talks with President Johnson and other high U.S. officials. The president climaxed Thant's visit with a gala White House banquet.

On the question of a new 14-country Geneva conference, Thant differed with the American position. Communist China, North Viet Nam and Russia have been urging such a conference without any preconditions.

The U.S. says that rather than having another Geneva conference now, it would be better for the Communist nations to start living up to the agreements made at the last one, held in 1954 that resulted in the partitioning of French Indochina into four states — North and South Viet Nam, Cambodia and Laos.

EXPLAIN REASONING

U.S. officials said today the United States asked for Security Council consideration of the North Viet Nam PT (patrol-torpedo) boat action because the U.S. wanted calls for a report when a member acts in self-defence.

The U.S. call for the council session amounts to reporting before the Security Council, not asking it to take any action now, the officials said.

Thant and the U.S. leaders also talked about UN operation in Cyprus and about UN finances. The latter, the UN chief sai dthe Soviet and other governments still are opposed to the financial basis of the peace-keeping operations in The Congo and along the Gaza Strip.

Thant's brief London-Johnson's exchange of toasts at dinner Thursday night had a peace theme.

Johnson said: "The will for peace in the world is a will that springs from the soul of the human race. That will is stronger tonight, stronger in this decade, than it has ever been before in the history of the human race."

He said United States "takes great satisfaction in the success of the United Nations, the purposes it has and the tasks it has undertaken and the cause of peace on earth "for which we all work together."

In reply, Thant said it will be his constant endeavor to try to live up to the high standards by which the UN members 'practise tolerance" and live together in peace.

FBI Claims Former Psychiatric Patient Wrote Worthless Letter

HONOLULU (AP) — Negro comedian Dick Gregory reported that a letter he turned over to the FBI three weeks ago practically put the finger on Mississippi graves where the bodies of three civil rights workers were found Tuesday.

But sources close to the FBI in Washington said Thursday that the letter Gregory received was written by a former psychiatric patient and proved worthless in the long hunt for the three men missing since June 21.

Gregory told a press conference Wednesday night that he had considered the letter a phoney until the bodies were found.

He said he also had delivered to the FBI a tape recording in which a Mississippi man told an account of how the three men were slain and the names of five men involved in the slayings. He said the tape was an interview of the man by a member of the civil rights information department in Mississippi.

Informed sources in Washington said the letter, according proved of no more value than the letter.

Washington sources said federal agents found the letter writer told investigators that he had been asked. He was investigated immediately after Gregory turned over the letter to the government. They said the letter writer told investigators he had no information about the bodies but would "soon" except what he had learned from newspapers and magazines.

Meanwhile, southeast of Philadelphia, Miss., FBI agents fanned out around Old Jolly Farm Thursday, questioning residents for clues to who killed the three civil rights workers and buried them in a nearby red-dirt dam.

Deputy Sheriff Cecil Price said pathological tests showed bullets in the Negro and one each in the two white youths. All had been shot from the front.

Private pathologists identified the bodies of Andrew Goodman, 20, and Michael Schwerner, 24, both white New Yorkers. The third body is apparently their Negro companion, James Chaney, 21. Law enforcement scientific background on Chaney has not yet permitted the FBI to confirm the identity officially.

Peking Starts Three-Day Demonstration Against U. S.

PEKING (Reuters)—Columns of marchers shouting slogans and waving banners and flags staged a mass demonstration here today against "U.S. imperialist aggression" against North Viet Nam.

The demonstration was on the same massive scale as those held here during the Cuban crisis in 1962 and the trouble in Panama last January. Observers expected it to go on for at least three days.

Meanwhile, the top Chinese Communist party newspaper, People's Daily, said today the United States had "wholly mis-calculated in launching air strikes against North Viet Nam."

"The Vietnamese people, the Chinese people and all the revolutionary peoples of the world are not to be cowed by warships, aircraft and guns of the United States," People's Daily said in an editorial quoted by the official New China news agency.

Joe Greene, MP, Enters Race For Leadership

By BOB EXELL

TORONTO (CP)—J. J. (Joe) Greene, member of the House of Commons for Renfrew South, formally announced his candidacy for the Ontario Liberal leadership today, coupling it with a challenge to Charles Templeton to meet him in a television debate.

For Mr. Greene 44, an Anglo-Celt lawyer, it will be his second attempt to win the Liberal leadership. He was also in the race when John Wintermeyer was chosen in 1958. Mr. Greene finished third, behind Walter Harris, former federal finance minister.

By tossing his hat in the ring, Mr. Greene brings to six the number of men who have declared their candidacy for the Liberal leadership, vacated by the defeat of Mr. Wintermeyer in the Ontario general election last Sept. 23.

Mr. Greene, who first entered the House of Commons in 1963, singled out Mr. Templeton as being the only one of the other five contestants who has the "dynamism" that might unseat John Robarts and his Progressive Conservative government.

IGNORES OTHERS

At a press conference he completely ignored those regarded as the leaders in the Liberal fight—Robert Nixon, 39, and Andrew Thompson, 38—saying only Mr. Templeton had "that quality of dynamism without which a party so long in the wilderness cannot get the enthusiasm and support to achieve office."

Mr. Greene said he realizes that challenging Mr. Templeton, a former television personality, to a TV debate is a "calculated risk."

"He is an experienced and polished television performer, while I'm a backwoods lawyer," he added.

Mr. Templeton, 48, is a one-time evangelist who resigned as executive news editor of the Toronto Star to seek the leadership and the vacant Toronto Riverdale seat in the legislature.

Besides Mr. Nixon member of the legislature for Brant, and Mr. Thompson, member for Toronto Dovercourt, two other provincial members also are in the race—Eddie Sargent (Grey North) and Joe Gould (Toronto Bracondale.)

Mr. Greene told the press conference he does not regard his own lack of a provincial seat as a serious handicap. He referred to the late Mitchell Hepburn, the Ontario Liberal premier who left federal politics to gain the Ontario leadership, saying Mr. Hepburn had not been hampered by starting from the federal arena.

The grey - haired father of five, who presented his wife, three daughters and two sons to the press gathering, compared the Conservative government of Premier Robarts with the former Union Nationale regime of Maurice Duplessis in Quebec.

HITS PATRONAGE

"The Conservative patronage-fed machine is just as rich just as powerful and just as effective as ever was the Duplessis machine in Quebec," he said.

SARGASSO SEA?—No, just an example of the heavy algae growth this year in the mouth of the Moira River. Low water conditions, and bright sun and detergents speed algae growth.

Mouth of Moira River Infested With Algae and Dirty, Foul-Smelling Weeds

Fresh water algae — or just plain weeds.

Whatever the term used, it is a hated word for outdoor lovers, who each summer seemore and more favorite summer recreational spots infested with a mass of dirty and foul smelling weeds

In some areas, such as at the mouth of the Moira River, the water surface is so solidly matted that boating is impossible.

And this one incidence is duplicated many times over in shallow areas further up the river with algae growth in Moira Lake south of Madoc being of special concern.

Aside from the unpleasantness when algae growth gets excessively bad it materially detracts from the recreational value of an area.

CAN'T PINPOINT CAUSE

Experts seem unable to pinpoint the cause of the algae growth but a general belief is that fertilizer draining into lakes and streams from rural fields, and wash detergents, have a tendency to aggravate the growth.

But this argument doesn't hold true in all instances. Opposed to the use of detergents is the fact that neither fertilizer drainage or detergents are present in Moira lake and yet the algae growth is still present.

There was considerable concern early this summer when algae growth in Moira Lake appeared a month earlier than usual. In fact the growth was so bad that a team of government department experts from Toronto did a survey in an attempt to come up with the cause of the trouble.

To date, however, there has been no report from the Moira Lake survey.

MANY COMPONENTS

One thing known is that shallow water, warmth and sunlight all combine to promote algae growth.

That is one of the reasons for the heavy concentration of algae in the river mouth.

Bearing out this sunlight theory is that beneath the CPR railway bridge where sun never reaches, there is a complete absence of algae growth.

When the algae growth appeared in Moira Lake a month earlier this year, the sunlight and warmth theory was advanced as a possible cause.

There was little or no snow cover on the lake last winter and the ice was possibly thinner than usual. The thought was this allowed warmth from the winter sun to penetrate and give the algae an early start.

IN MOIRA LAKE

And in many places along the Moira River course, particularly adjacent to areas where there are housing sub-division, the algae growth is described as "a mess."

The cause of the algae growth still defies the experts, and once the growth occurs remedial practices are costly and somewhat unsatisfactory.

The bottom growing algae growth can, of course, be cut off below the water, but even then the weeds continue to grow.

HAS DRAWBACKS

Another control method is to use chemical spray, but this also has its drawbacks.

First various permissions from various authorities must be received before the spray can be used. When it is used, the algae growth is killed, but the dead weeds remain on the surface, and are as big a nuisance as ever.

Cost of chemical control is another factor which discourages its use. Over a large water area the cost is said to be somewhat prohibitive.

Residents Protest Size Of Watermain

TRENTON—At last night's meeting of town council, a petition protesting the proposed installation of a 16-inch watermain on Henry St., between Dufferin Ave. and Queen St., was read. Henry St. residents complained the projected Local Improvement cost of $1.12 per running foot frontage, annually, was excessive, and said such a large main was not needed on this street. Cost of the installation is estimated at $36,763. Notice of council's intention to permit the Trenton Utilities to install the main, divided the cost between the PUC, ($11,600) and the owners taking up the slack.

Clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry first explained that the published figures had been revised, and the owners would be paying $7.80 per running foot frontage over a 15-year period, which worked out to 80 cents per foot annually.

Howard Hallick from the PUC told council that 16-inch main had been recommended for this street for fire protection purposes, as water pressure is low in this area. The present mains, ranging in size from one inch to four inches, are inadequate, according to fire underwriters' standards. Mr. Hallick said the residents were being charged local improvement taxes as if they were getting a six-inch main, and the PUC was taking on the biggest percentage of the cost.

Councillor Rose Burtt said the Henry St. residents would be paying for the cost of their own installation, as well as for new water main installations on Dufferin Ave. through their general tax rate.

The revised scale of payment will be published again, and Henry St. residents will be able to lodge a protest if the new rates do not meet with their approval. The protest could be taken through to the Ontario Municipal Board should the residents and the PUC not come to an agreement.

Low Weir Dam To Be Built At Moira Lake

Last minute survey work preliminary to the construction start of a low weir dam at the outlet of Moira Lake is being carried on this week by the Moira River Conservation Authority.

Lightfoot Construction Ltd. of Belleville has been awarded the contract for construction of the dam. The contract price is $5,806.58.

The survey work being done this week is to spot the proper location of the dam which will control the summer level of Moira Lake. Construction is expected to commence next week.

Order Company To Start Paving By Noon Today

TRENTON — J. M. Tominson, the consulting engineer hired by the town to oversee reconstruction projects on Dufferin Ave., Dundas St. E. and Sidney St., this year, has notified the Rayner Construction Company of Toronto to get its paving sub-contractor working on Dundas St. E. by noon today, and the road, including Gilmour Hill, open by Monday, . . . or "forget about the subcontract."

Mayor James MacDonald told council last night it was "ridiculous" for the road to have been closed off for the past four days with no signs of paving."

Rayners have until Aug. 24 to complete the entire project, or face a $200 a day penalty. Councillor Joseph Gould, chairman of the public works' committee, told council last night Rayner meant to ask for a three-week extension on the project. Two previous extensions have been granted.

Murray Twp. Draws Nearer To New Building

TRENTON — Murray Township drew one step closer to its new township building Wednesday night when the reeve, D. G. McMaster and the members of township council instructed the clerk, Angus Gunter, to draw up a by - law, which would enable council to sell debentures to the $15,000 to finance the building.

Mr. Gunter has already applied to the Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs for a $10,000 Centennial grant for the building, and $5,000 will be taken out of the general funds, to make up the $30,000 cost of the building. Work on the structure is expected to start in the fall and the project may come in for a winter works grant, also.

The building will house council chambers and the clerk's and other offices.

In other business at Wednesday's meeting, council voted to pay the village of Frankford $350 for the services of the Frankford fire department last month, and $250 for a fire at Turneliffe's Lathe Mill.

It was noted that the warden's guard will be held at Presqu'ile Point on the afternoon of Wednesday, Aug. 12. Reeve McMaster is also the warden of United Counties of Northumberland and Durham.

Township assessor Henry McColl reported he has assessment field work almost completed.

Left Too Soon

The battle for Stanleyville, capital of one of the provinces in the eastern part of the Congo, is clear proof, if any were needed, that United Nations troops left that unhappy country too soon.

Though some of the rebel forces may have some crude idea of communist ideology, in essence their aim is a return to a primitive tribalism and a renunciation of the legacy of civilization, scant though it was, which was their only reward for long years of Belgian rule.

If these tribesmen have their way, the Congo will be dismembered and the inevitable process of civilization will be set back many years.

By one of those strange quirks of fate, the man who first espoused this idea of "separatism," Moise Tshombe, is now entrusted with the task of trying to preserve the vast and varied territories of this equatorial land as a unified country.

Despite this, his heart may well be in the fight, for from the first Tshombe has been on the side of the civilized, as opposed to the tribal, life. He sought an independent Katanga, because this would relieve that rich area from the necessity of contributing heavily towards the development of other backward areas. Now, though, these essentially tribal enmities have assumed proportions which threaten the very existence of the country. It is doubtful if Katanga could long continue to enjoy the type of life Tshombe wants should he fail to check the rebels. It is not so much a case of the rebel armies threatening to extend their control throughout the whole Congo —the land is much too big and the rebels far too disorganized for that — but of the spirit of tribalism spreading until every man's hand is raised against every other man.

The whole story of the Congo is a tragic one, an awful example of all the white man's worst errors, from early cruel exploitation through years of failure to prepare the natives for self-rule to the final and virtually irremediable error of relinquishing control far too soon.

The Belgians never gave the Congolese the same chance as that the British provided the Africans in Ghana, in Nigeria, in Tanganyika and recently in Nyasaland and Kenya. And even most of these former British colonies have their woes.

Portable Pensions Again

Premier John Robarts has suggested that provincial experts meet to consider what type of legislation would be required to make private pension plans "portable" across provincial boundaries.

The provincial premiers, including Premier Jean Lesage of Quebec, have enthusiastically endorsed this proposal.

This raises several interesting points.

First of all, there is the question of whether private pension plans are likely to flourish if, and when, a comprehensive Canada-wide pension plan of the kind proposed by the Federal Government actually becomes law.

Then there is the quick approval by Premier Jean Lesage of Quebec for Premier Robarts' proposal. Mr. Lesage mentioned, in particular, the value of the portability of pensions between Ontario and Quebec, because there is a large exchange of workers between these two provinces. We wonder whether Quebec separatists will take note.

Of course, private pensions could still be carried across the boundaries of the two areas, even if these boundaries should eventually divide two nations, rather than two provinces. But it would be most unusual to find two separate nations co-ordinating their services in such a manner.

This brings up another point with respect to portable pensions. There is no today, and never has been any legal barrier to private pension plans being portable. They can easily be made so, providing the firms sponsoring the plans agree. Such agreements have been rare, if not virtually unknown, in the past for two reasons. In most cases firms commenced pension plans as a method of holding reliable, trained workers. The plans serve this purpose only if the worker loses his pension rights if he leaves for another firm. And, secondly, the fact that workers who change their employment after a few years get back only their own contributions to most pension plans has made it possible to provide higher pensions for those who remain. Portable pension plans will either cost the employer or the employee more money, or will not provide as large a pension as those which are not portable.

Religion in Canada

Cobourg Star

Dorothy Fraser claims that the top people in Canada are Anglicans.

Writing in a London, England, periodical, Miss Fraser says Anglicanism is tolerant and vague and makes little demand upon its adherents. The clergy move easily within all circles of society, and their pretty churches make a satisfactory background for marriage and funeral rituals.

Miss Fraser admits that a smaller number of Top People are Presbyterians, and Kirk ministers are the best-educated in Canada.

Christian Science appeals to financial and business people; especially to educated women of a domineering type.

Unitarianism has had small impact in Canada, despite the fact that many eminent Americans were part of the intellectual outlook.

The vast majority of Canadian parents want their children to take part in some religious activity, and the middle class is overwhelmingly attached to the United Church.

"United Church ministers," points out Miss Fraser, "are well-trained but have less educational background. They have a noticeable tendency to hop in and out of their profession as if it were a job rather than a vocation.

From the rigidity of the salvationist of the Salvation Army, the United Church has moved farther liberal theology embellished with ancient ornaments. In so doing it has become the most Canadian of churches."

Teutonic in background, the Lutheran has several branches in Canada, "irrespective with headquarters in the United States."

"One hundred years ago," Miss Fraser continues, "Canadian business was almost controlled by Scots, Presbyterian, Baptists, but they are shading down into a lower social class. An occasional Presbyterian can still be found in this faith, but usually the members are semi-skilled workers."

Lowest income group, the unorganized and the unskilled belong to a multiplicity of evangelical sects. "These are strong in very small towns among somewhat depressed people."

Roman Catholicism is a special case in Canada. Miss Fraser writes: "In Quebec, settled by the French in Jansenist times, it is a State Church. The higher clergy are well educated, although the country priest may not be — much of Quebec's present unrest is due to its lack of facilities for modern education —largely operated by religious orders.

"Canadian Catholics are puritanical in morals and when they visit Europe they are shocked by what they find."

Apart from the orthodox Jews, there are the persecuted Doukhobors, the distinigrating Doukhobors, and the declining Quakers. About 80 percent of the Japanese are Buddhists, while many of the Chinese have joined various religious denominations. Added to these are the little conclaves of British Israelites; a handful of spiritualists, cults, and such curiosities as the Temple of More Abundant Life in British Columbia.

Miss Fraser deplores the fact that the ancient religions of the First Canadians, the Native Indians were ruthlessly crushed. "French Jesuit priests missionaries had the field to themselves for a long time, and one would still meet a wedding girl speaking English with a French accent acquired at a mission."

Miss Fraser summarizes her reaction to religion in Canada: "It is a social institution, a shop for Church as others look for a car. On the way up in society, one starts attending a church according to his need —and there are non-believers who feel that church is a useful church for business reputability.

"All the Canadian political parties, except the Liberals, who are strongly Roman Catholic, try to get a denominational candidate, for this will automatically draw the "dear little old lady" vote regardless of political principles. But woe betide the candidate who has no religious affiliation!

"I must no leave the impression," concludes Miss Fraser, "that every man, woman and child goes to a church of some type. There is a far greater attendance than in England, but many people are apathetic. They still "use" the church for marriages and funerals, either have a vague idea that what they call Christian values should be maintained."

What Is Poverty Today?

—Milton Spectator

The present debate on the anti-poverty bill in the United States Senate should be instructive for Canadians at a time when the Canadian Welfare Council is making a study of the poor in this country.

If the bill is approved by the Senate, the U.S. will spend almost one billion dollars in a first trial period on anti-poverty programs, most of them concerned with training and education all aimed at combating poverty.

Some senators, opposed to the bill, find it difficult to argue against it without appearing that they are in favor of a continuance of poverty. The strange situation has developed in which it is no longer possible for a legislator to oppose a welfare program, even if he believes its merits to be dubious, without seeming indifferent to the needs of a section of the community upon whose votes he must depend when election time comes around.

No person with charitable instincts can be content when he suspects there are pockets of poverty in an otherwise prosperous country. But what is poverty? It seems to have become another of the many relative terms which are glibly used these days and never defined. Certainly it cannot be assessed on a rule of thumb based on income alone. There are far too many variants for that.

An income that might classify a person as poor in a big Ontario city could mean a comfortable living in a rural part of the Maritimes.

The U.S. Bureau of Statistics drew a line at $4,000 a year for an American family of four, and $2,000 a year for a person living alone, and declared that all below it were poor. This arbitrary line set the total of poor in the U.S. at more than thirty million.

In 1961, 62 percent of Canadian families had incomes in excess of $4,000; 77 percent had incomes above $3,000; and 87 percent above $2,000. Of those living alone, 43 percent had more than $2,000 and 57 percent had less.

These figures do not take into account where these incomes were spent, or the individual circumstances of those who received them.

Poverty is often more than lack of money. It can also be social, educational, or inherited and hereditary. Our industrial society is conducive to the creation of pools of poverty in big cities.

In a report entitled "One-third of a Nation," prepared at the request of the late President Kennedy and recently published, he revealed that either physically or mentally unfit. If these young men were considered incapable of performing military training, how would they measure up in an increasingly technological society where only a decent living?

A few months ago 2,500 of these rejectees were interviewed and it was found that three out of four were in depressed areas; half came from poor families; 80 percent were school drop-outs; their unemployment rate was 26 percent (almost six times that of the national average) and most of them were unskilled.

Many of these will form the poor of the future. The aim behind the anti-poverty bill is designed But will training camps and educational programs achieve the desired aim of enabling them to raise their living standards to the mean national standard?

The U.S. labor force will be augmented by some 26 million young people by the 1960's. Of there, it is estimated that about one-third will be unable to work out the skill or education needed to earn an adequate living in a technological society. In face of such a prospect, one billion dollars a year seems pitifully inadequate, if not futile.

Hydrographic survey of the Mines and Resources Dept., Thursday issued a memorandum on a series of "Seiches" which occurred on Lake Huron June 18 and described them as the "sharpest and largest" recorded at Goderich, during the 30 years that water level records have been kept there.

Seiches are caused by drop in the air pressure over one part of the lake as compared with the pressure on the rest of the lake. As an area of low has the water surface under it raises and the water is consequently drawn off from other parts of the lake, causing a sudden fall in levels. often at distant points. Reports that the violent changes in water levels on that day were due to a tidal wave, were incorrect. Lunar action had nothing to do with it.

Immaculate Government

Hamilton Spectator

Social Credit has been in power in Alberta since 1935 when the late William "Bible Bill" Aberhart led the "funnymoneyoos to a surprising victory at the polls. Next year he will celebrate its 30th anniversary as the government of Alberta. Most Albertans under 43 remember no other political way.

Much of the credit for this modern day phenomenon is due Premier Ernest C. Manning, who, at 36, was Alberta's provincial secretary and who at 34 in 1943 succeeded Mr. Aberhart as premier. He has run an almost immaculate government, and whenever there has been a hint of conflict of interests, he has moved in with his trusty axe and chopped off portfolios.

Good luck has been Mr. Manning's too, of course. He didn't put the oil in the ground, but many of his supporters think he did. and he didn't discover it or bring it to the surface, but thousand of voters swear he did. And he did he personally bring about the marvellous post-war boom that continent has been enjoying, but you'd guess he did if you talked to some of his more ardent believers.

Nonetheless, Mr. Manning has done a really splendid job as premier of Alberta. Many of his fellow members of the legislative assembly are mediocrities at best, yet he has managed always to run provincial affairs expertly and honestly. He is due partly to his own considerable ability as an administrator, but partly to the fact that honesty is the only policy if you want to keep getting elected.

Thanks to Mr. Manning's belief that political rules must be strict, there have only been suggestions of impropriety since he became premier. He has always moved swiftly when he heard the suggestions. Which is why he suddenly asked for the resignation of his able provincial treasurer, the Hon. E. W. Hinman, on Tuesday. He said the resignation was asked for, and given, because Mr. Hinman in a private capacity was connected with the promotion and operation of various company enterprises not associated with the government. A definite conflict of interests, in other words.

There's a lesson in this for all politicians. If you want to stay in public office, you stick to the business of government.

Renal Diabetes Peculiarity Rather Than a Disease

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My son is 32 and when he went for his army physical, they found sugar in the urine. We had a blood sugar test made and the doctor said he had renal diabetes, and there wasn't anything that could be done except diet.

Could a kidney specialist do anything? — Mrs. L. W.

Relax. You are too much upset over something that doesn't warrant it. For that matter, suppose your son had real diabetes? It's not "good" but it isn't tragic, either. Even with diabetes mellitus, people now live useful and happy lives. Thirty or 40 years ago, no. But now yes.

But you aren't even confronted with a real case of diabetes. Perhaps no diabetes at all. But I'll explain.

With diabetes, the body cannot make use of the sugar in the diet. Instead of being used, the sugar first accumulates in too large concentrations in the blood. After that the excess sugar begins to "spill over" into the kidneys, and it is excreted through the urine. Hence a urine test is the first (and simplest) test for diabetes.

Your son has been found to have what you call real diabetes, but a much better term is renal glycosuria. (Glycosuria means "sugar in the urine.") This does not necessarily mean too much sugar in the blood. What happens is that the blood sugar "spills over" at a high blood level. In short, the blood sugar can be at a safe and normal level, but because of the "spilling" the sugar in the urine can be higher than usual. This situation is a peculiarity rather than a disease.

Thus with renal glycosuria, the urine always shows too much sugar and the immediate thought is, "This must be diabetes." But when further tests are made, it turns out that it isn't diabetes. It is that rarer condition, renal glycosuria.

A sugar tolerance test dialing- under between the two. This test is better than either a simple blood sugar test or the simple urinalysis.

There is no treatment for renal glycosuria. It is not a kidney disease.

Most people with renal glycosuria do not develop diabetes. A few do. Therefore, there are two things which a person with renal glycosuria should do:

1 — Realize that it is not diabetes mellitus.

2 — Realize also, that in a few cases diabetes may develop anyway but is unrelated to the renal glycosuria. Diabetes is a very common ailment. It occurs in three to five percent of the population.

3 — Play safe, and have the sugar tolerance test at reputable intervals — every five years — to make sure that real diabetes isn't developing, yet masked by renal glycosuria.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 27 and in the years have had four miscarriages. I also have thyroid trouble and am very much overweight. Can you explain to me how keeping having these miscarriages and what I can do to prevent them? — O. L.

There are many causes of miscarriages. Both conversion of obesity and thyroid trouble are important approaches to the problem. But in view of your weight, I think you should have a thorough check for diabetes, including a sugar tolerance test. Unrecognized diabetes is often a factor in miscarriages

Other possible causes can be considered by your doctor. In some instances there is no answer, and many times there is.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have the terrible habit-of chewing coffee grounds. Is this harmful? I have been told it will dry up my blood. — X. Y.

It's a quirk of appetite rather than a "terrible habit." I see no harm in it and if certainly won't 'dry up your blood.'

Automation Great Promise, Great Threat

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The National Sharecroppers Fund estimates that there are more than one million American migrant farm workers, if we include the wives and children who work and travel with them.

These people are the most grimly disadvantaged element in our national life. If the "war on poverty" is going to be more than a slight political skirmish, Congress must begin paying attention to these wandering folk who live nomadic lives without adequate housing, education, and even the minimal decencies for their children.

Last year, the average migrant worked only 126 days of the year, and earned only $1,123. He has little protection by law, and is excluded from mainstream of social legislation. He is the forgotten man in the labor market; hardly any community feels responsible for his welfare.

It is easy to say that the fruit growers who employ such migrants should pay them more and treat them better. But many of the growers themselves are in a constant squeeze. In the cherry country, where I spend the summers, few of the growers are highly profitable enterprises — the vagaries of the weather and of the market have driven all but the hardiest out of the business.

The few affluent growers have already switched to mechanical harvesters. In a few years, no doubt, all the orchards will be able to dispense with migrant harvesting labor. In one sense this is all to the good; picking crops is dull and deadening work, fit for an animal rather than a human.

But what, then, of the one million migrant workers and their families? They will be thrown to the bottom of the economic totem pole; they have no further down to go. When even their minimal talents are no longer called for, what use will society have for such powerless, unschooled, and unprotected by law?

These are questions that society does not like to ask itself; we hope that by ignoring them, they will go away somewhere and not bother us. But the danger is like physical disease — if attention is not paid, and treatment is not given, the condition gets worse. It is too late for anything but the most radical measures.

Automation is a great promise, and an equally great threat. It can relieve mankind of boring and soulless work, but it can also shake the social order to its very foundations. We are in the era of the second industrial Revolution one much more profound and widespread in its consequences than the first. Unless we learn to cope with it from the bottom up, our prosperity will be a spill-level built on sand.

Weekly Livestock Review

TORONTO (CP) — Trading was slow at the opening with prices steady to barely steady on all classes of steers, heifers and fed yearlings at the Ontario public stockyards this week. Dry-fed sold to better advantage than the medium quality grass cattle. Demand for replacement cattle remained dull as about steady prices.

Cattle receipts were estimated at about 7,600 head, about 800 head more than last week and 1,200 head more than the same week in 1963. Western cattle receipts totalled 225 head, which was down 200 head from last week. Western stock cattle receipts were about the same as last week at 55 head. Included in the receipts were 36 cattle from Quebec. There were no shipments to Eastern Canadian slaughterers nor exports off the market to the United States.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — Investors were cautious on the stock market amid light trading today.

With the uncertainty in North Viet Nam investors appeared loathe to make any new commitments and as a result industrials took a minor loss. Algoma Steel dipped 1 to 72½. Banks were weak with Royal and Imperial Commerce down ¼ each to 79 and 67.

CPR and Massey Ferguson were bright spots, gaining ⅜ each to 18 and 27¾.

In senior base metals Noranda climbed ⅛ to 48¼.

Speculative mining issues moved quietly. Raglan gained 11 cents to $2.20 while its largest shareholder Canadian Dyno was up nine cents to $1.90. Timmins-area issues were shunned. Windfall gained two cents to 67 cents, but other issues were about unchanged.

On index, industrials were down .50 to 157.37, golds 67 to 132.60 western oils .09 to 96.17 and the Exchange index .02 to 147.32. Base Metals were ahead .46 to 64.94. Volume at 11 a.m. was 815,000 shares compared with 709,000 shares traded at this same time Thursday.

Late selling on light volume sent industrials lower Thursday in sympathy with the slumping New York market.

After spending most of the session on the upside many key stocks had their gains erased near the close. Interprovincial Pipe Line dipped 1¼ to 88½ while Moore Corp. and Imperial Bank of Commerce were off 1 each to 55 and 67½, respectively. CPR was hit with a ⅝ loss to 44⅝, Massey-Ferguson by ⅜ to 27¼, Algoma Steel ⅝ to 73¼, Dominion Stores ⅝ to 25, Walker Gooderham ⅜ to 36 and Toronto-Dominion Bank ¼ to 68¾.

After being ahead as much as 2, Distillers Seagram closed with a 1⅜ gain at 62⅜. Union Gas was up ⅜ to 24½ and Royal Bank ¼ to 79½.

Speculative mining situations were quiet for most of the day. However, they too were hit by late selling. Raglan dipped 3¢ cents to $2.81 and traded in a $2.80 to $3.20 range. Its largest shareholder, Canadian Dyno, was down 10 cents at $1.90.

Requiem for Tragic Bunglers

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP) — A delayed requiem is being sung for those "good Germans" who took on the suicidal task of trying to kill Adolf Hitler.

The most spectacular assassination attempt on Hitler, led by Count Claus Stauffenberg, is commemorated in a new book, The July Plot, by Roger Manvell and Heinrich Fraenkel, who earlier wrote biographies of less admirable subjects, Goebbels and Goering.

Their volume came out a few weeks after publication of German Against Hitler by Terence Prittie and these two books have resulted in new discussion about long-unsung anti-Nazi heroes.

In many cases, people are examining dispassionately for the first time events over which the Allies and the Germans were willing to let silence rest for 20 years. The story of these desperate ventures has a strange never-never air as a far-distant history.

"What a profoundly tragic record is of bungling and indecision, steadfast but finally brave, steadfast but finally ineffective men," says the weekly New Statesmen.

MOTIVES GOOD

The authors are agreed on the worthy motives of Col. Stauffenberg, who was chief of staff of the German home army when he planted a bomb beneath Hitler's bunker table in East Prussia July 20, 1944.

R. H. S. Crossman notes in a review in The Observer that Stauffenberg's attempt was made just a month after the Allies seized Normandy's beachheads.

"As he knew, this was too late to achieve his real objective — the restoration of his country's good name and the deliverance from unconditional surrender.

"Yet if the coup had been successful, it would not only have made the whole western campaign unnecessary but altered the world balance of power by ending the war before Eastern Europe had been overrun."

When Hitler survived the blast, Stauffenberg was shot in the night of July 20 and an estimated 5,000 persons died in the ensuing purge.

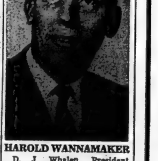
Prittie, reviewing The July Plot in The Guardian of Manchester, writes:

"It is a book which ought to be read because it is high time that people in this country knew what risks with their consciences, as well as with their lives, were taken by the men and women who stepped deliberately into the path of the Nazi juggernaut, during all and perfectly realizing that the odds were on their being mown down."

Long a British newspaper correspondent in West Germany, Prittie himself receives praise from Crossman, who says that Germans Against Hitler contains the first attempt in English to describe and assess all the various forms of German resistance, and protest under the Third Reich."

BREAK SILENCE

The reason for the long official silence on these matters is discussed in a Daily Telegraph review by Constantine FitzGibbon, whose book The Shirt of Nessus about the conspiracy was published in 1956.



For one thing it was widely felt in the German world to be given no chance of sheltering behind a few anti-Nazi intellectuals. The German war guilt was collective. Anyway, countless opportunists tried to pass themselves off as ardent anti-Hitler men in the early post-war days.

"For the armies of occupation the 'German resistance' became a sour joke," writes FitzGibbon.

Later the Germans themselves as they battled back to economic and political position in the Western alliance—played down not only the Nazi past but the exploits of the anti-Nazis.

"For the last two years this has been changing," says FitzGibbon.

"The trials of Nazi criminals have begun again, and the vast Auschwitz trial is only the most spectacular. But more important in this change of attitude

Parliamentary Notebook

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — You don't have to believe in the power of prayer to put your case before the House of Commons of Canada.

In fact, Speaker Alan MacNaughton ruled Thursday, to say that you "pray" the Commons and, the Parliament of Canada will do something is merely a courteous way of asking.

The Commons itself does it several times a week. It "prays" that the Governor-General will "cause" certain government documents to be made public.

As an expert in the fine points of legislative and parliamentary language described it, to "pray" that the Commons or the Governor-General will do something is akin to "beseech."

The question rose some time ago when H. W. Herridge (NDP —Kootenay West) presented a petition signed by residents of the Arrow Lakes region concerning the Columbia River power development. His petition was ruled out of order because it didn't include the proper form of prayer, as required by the rules of the Commons.

GOT LETTERS

Subsequently Mr. Macnaughton and Mr. Herridge began receiving letters from members of various sects and groups who either do not pray to God as a religious act, or who do not believe in praying to God or man.

Mr. Macnaughton ruled that under presently accepted parliamentary usage, prayer has no particular religious significance but is rather a matter of custom of usage and is used, in fact, as a form of courtesy."

Petitioning Parliament is a rarely-used procedure to seek redress or a change in the law in Canada. Composing authorities say not more than half a dozen such petitions have been presented in the last year, except as the basis for private bills to grant divorces or incorporate new companies.

But it is based on the individual's right to petition the sovereign, a right ante dating Magna Carta. In 1669 the British Parliament passed a resolution clearly restating the right:

"It is the inherent right of every commoner in England to prepare and present petitions to the House of Commons in case of grievance, and the House of Commons to receive the same."

CAN REJECT IT

But in the same breath, the House made clear it reserves the right to receive or reject a petition merely because of the form in which it is drawn up.

"It is the undoubted right and privilege of the Commons," the House declared in 1669, "to judge and determine, touching the nature and matter of such petitions, how far they are fit and unfit to be received."

When in 1701 the gentry of Kent presented a petition complaining about the Commons' disputes with the House of Lords, the petitioners were locked up in a cell for five hours and the Commons threw out the petition as "scandalous, insolent and seditious, tending to destroy the constitution of Parliament and to subvert the established government of these realms."

Believe 'Sister' Mary Christ Reincarnated

By ALFONSO MAURI

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters)—Some 100,000 people in Argentina believe that at the turn of the century Christ was reincarnated in the person of a humble woman — known as Sister Mary.

Today, 36 years after her death, her tomb is the most visited of all those in Buenos Aires' Chacarita cemetery. Every day, summer and winter, it is covered with flowers. On certain days, crowds block the approach streets.

Every Saturday her followers stand by the tomb and take turns addressing the audience. Thousands of offerings ranging from models of bronze limbs and stone hearts to silver crutches—presented by people in thanksgiving for "miraculous" cures—adorn her tomb a weird appearance.

When she died in 1928 at the age of 62, a host of thousands walked in tears to the cemetery. For months, her tomb was covered with flowers.

Now her fame, although less spectacular, is probably more solidly established. Her followers registered their faith and their church, and had it listed among the religious associations in the country. They built chapels and community halls, and produced a doctrine.

Sister Mary came from Spain as a child. Her name was Maria Selome Lanao. She was married twice but left no children. When she was 40, under the influence of "voices" from Sierra, she decided to become an instrument of Christ on earth.

She preached throughout the country and her home was visited by a stream of pilgrims anxious for relief of their spiritual and physical pains.

"Get right and believe," she would say to her children. "I want you to be united in an embrace with God," was her theme.

Sister Mary's home has been turned into a sanctuary by one of her disciples, Sister Leonidas, to whom she left the home. A drawing room has become the sanctuary and is visited by who flock around Sister Mary's bedroom, her heiress and keep the place parlous and smelling of heirlooms, including a huge doll on the bed where she died.

But like most other religious movements, the cult of Sister Mary developed its own schisms.

Consuelo Quinteros, Cueto's widow, and Sister Leonidas each claims to possess the whole truth about Sister Mary's mission.

Her followers claim to be Christians. But it is doubtful whether they would be accepted by orthodox church would accept Mary's tenet that "Sister Mary is Christ reincarnated because the Word (Christ) returns to this world and chooses a different body every time, and this time he chose that of a humble peasant girl, twice married, who had educated herself with sacrifice and preached the Christian message throughout the province of Buenos Aires."

Canada

by-item tariff bargaining was narrow; they should next be instead a 50-per-cent cut across the board.

Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa said they couldn't make such linear cuts because of their economies, GATT agreed. The result is that the heavily industrialized countries alone will strive for the linear cuts, with others negotiating item selectively for "a balance of advantages."

One major problem was solved in May. That of "disparities," or the basic unfairness of making equal cuts in unequal tariffs.

The solution in brief: Any one of the industrialized nations now can claim a disparity and thus make a cut less than 50 per cent, if on the same commodity its existing tariff rate is half or less that of another country, and if there is a spread between the tariffs of 10 percentage points or more.

CAN WITHHOLD CUTS

One vital provision is that any country can withhold from the linear cuts its tariffs on certain commodities, on grounds of overriding national interest—which must be proved to the satisfaction of the other negotiators.

There are the exceptions due to be tabled on Nov. 16 by the countries making linear cuts.

Against a backdrop of high farm protectionism in Europe, the American market says in effect that it is the amount of price support for farm commodities that should be negotiated. One aim is a world price for each commodity, just as there now is a world price for wheat.

The Canadian view, which parallels that of the U.S., is that this would mean freezing farm supports at the present levels; it would be a move to regulate world trade in farm produce, instead of freeing trade—the object of the Kennedy round.

Ann Landers

Some Men Seem to Go for The Domineering Battleaxe

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — What type of a woman do men fall for? You are the expert so please tell me.

I have always been under the impression that men want to be boss. They go for women who make them feel important, cater to them and give them their way. Yet a big horsey broad in this office came to work wearing a diamond the size of an apricot — evidence that she has snagged a guy any of us would have given a front tooth for.

This girl is bossy, domineering and loud. She never lets her fiance finish a sentence. She corrects his English in front of everybody and has to supply just the right word when he stops for one.

When he bought her a Valentine's day gift she returned it to the store and got something else with the money.

To put it in a nutshell this beast broke all the rules, but she got the guy. Will you tell me, please, Ann Landers — what goes anyway? — BYSTANDER.

DEAR BY — There are as many different types of men as there are varieties of sea shells. No two are alike. Some men love a domineering battle-axe and others go for the clinging vine. You gotta know the territory, Honey.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My problem is a bunch of square cousins. They live in a different city and we are all the same age, which is 14. I get their clothes when they are through with them.

I hate their clothes because they are so babyish. My mother thinks they are just darling. When I tell her how I feel she calls me selfish and says I am lucky to have so many things to wear.

When I am invited in sweater and ruffles and bows my friends howl. Another box of junk came yesterday and these dresses are the worst ones yet.

Do you feel I should be forced to wear clothes I hate? I need some advice and I need it now. — RAGS.

DEAR RAGS — No 14-year-old should be forced to wear clothes she hates.

If you can simplify some of the dresses by removing the frills and do-dads, it may be worth the try, but unless you are pleased with a dress you should not be pressured into wearing it. Explain because it is free.

Far better to have fewer clothes — in which you feel comfortable.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I was particularly interested in the letter from the woman who wrote to say she was unhappy because her invitations to play cards were on the decline. She felt perhaps the reason might be that she was a consistent winner.

Having been a fairly good bridge player myself for over 30 years I would like to give this woman something to think about. Some card players love to be invited, but they never want to bundle game at their house. Over the years, I have dropped several excellent card-players because they were not interested in returning the courtesy.

You may think I am cold-blooded but I feel that hospitality and friendship should be a two-way street. A woman who is too lazy or too cheap to clean up her house and prepare a little snack for her friends should not be entertained indefinitely.

There. Now I can go back to minding my own business instead of yours. — COMMITTEE OF ONE AGAINST OAR DRAGGERS.

DEAR COMMITTEE — Many thanks for minding my business. Your letter was a good one and I agree with you, not only insofar as card players are concerned but all types of guest.

Too many starry-eyed lovers do not know the difference. Do you? Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Before You Marry — Is It Love Or Sex?" enclosing with your request 25c in coin and a long, stamped, addressed, stamped envelope.

An outstanding athlete in the swimming races was David McIndiles of Toronto, champion of Central Toronto YMCA swimming team. MR. MELTZER ON REAL ESTATE

"What's Your Problem?"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

Virtually everyone these days is familiar with such measures of economic change as the Consumer Price Index or the Dow Jones Stock Averages. There are, in fact, indexes of one sort or another covering changes in price or value of many commodities in which industry or the public are concerned. Yet real estate — which represents almost two-thirds of all wealth — has no such gauge or measure, as Mr. F. F. R. Discovered.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Are real estate men really ignorant, am I talking to the wrong people — or am I being given the runaround?

All I want to know is the increase in values of real estate in my community since I bought my house 10 years ago.

I have asked realtors, bankers, mortgage men and even real estate appraisers — but there is a lot of personal opinion — and no two answers are the same. Just for the heck of it, I asked my milkman the same question. His answer fell neatly between that of a banker and a realtor.

Can you tell me where I can get accurate information? — F. P. R.

ANSWER: As astounding as it may seem, there is no accurate index of real estate market value trends. Many scholars have worked on the problem but the unique character of each parcel of real estate introduces such complexities that it has not been possible to develop an accurate index.

The best we have today is the opinion of informed observers and participants in the real estate market. This you have been getting, and I can suggest no better method.

Professionals in real estate are even more concerned about the lack of accurate information than you are. I have worked for ten years toward developing just such an index of land and land value trends. I hope to be able to release my findings in the near future.

* * *

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Not only is it hard for people over 40 to get jobs, it is difficult to get loans. I am 54 and a bookkeeper in a firm where I have worked for nearly 25 years. My home is already paid for. In order to give our only daughter the really fine wedding she deserves, I went to my bank to refinance my mortgage and borrow $2,000.

The young fellow who handled it said they were very reluctant to make loans to "older folks." I guess 54 is pretty ancient to a 25-year-old.

When I see the over-borrowing and even the breaking up of homes of today's restless young people, however, I can't believe they are better risks than a settled person like myself — despite my "old age." Maybe you can explain it. — R. T. C.

ANSWER: That young fellow has a lot to learn — especially about the question of mortgage risks.

People in your age category have a very low mortgage delinquency rate. You can point out to that youngster that highest delinquency rates occur where the head of the household is under 30 — the highest rates being in the 30 to 39 year age group.

* * *

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I'm not getting what I bargained for, and have refused to make settlement. I found a nice piece of rolling ground overlooking a quiet river and agreed to buy it for a summer home.

The realtor and owner told me it was the last piece of a big farm that was being sold off and contained roughly 62 acres.

Since no actual survey was then available, the agreement of sale stated the property contained 62 acres "more or less." I and a surveyor made and there are only 48.6 acres in the property. It looks as if I am the victim of a fraud. Don't you think I am right in refusing to go to settlement? — H. L. R.

ANSWER: Disputes like this are common. I doubt very much however, if you are the victim of a fraud. The owner probably had either an inaccurate estimate of the original area of the farm, or inaccurate estimates of the pieces he previously sold off.

Based upon my own experience as a mediator in such disputes, I would judge the difference in acreage to be beyond that considered reasonable without more or less" in area. A price adjustment is a logical way of resolving this problem.

* * *

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I am in trouble because I was too good to my wife.

I got married last year after staying a bachelor until 60. I lack of acquaintance with women and was fairly well off (probably because I had stayed a bachelor) and decided to go all out for my little bride.

We bought a $20,000 house and I gave her a full allowance, and we could use the rest for fixing it up the way we wanted. We have put many thousands of dollars in furniture, antiques, paintings and draperies — not to mention a diamond ring and a mink coat so she wouldn't look out of place in such luxury. We also kept making improvements like this until I had a financial mess on my business. Now I am in urgent need of cash, but don't want my wife to know.

Can you suggest a real estate broker who can discreetly arrange for me to get a larger mortgage? — "Desperate"

ANSWER: I'm afraid you need a pawnbroker — not a real estate broker. Your low equity will not permit a higher mortgage on your home. All of the improvements you made come under the heading of personal rather than real property. A mortgage leader will give no consideration to personal property as "improvements" for mortgage purposes.

Mrs. William Creighton of Kingston as matron of honor was gowned in a blue taffeta sleeveless dress featuring a bell-shape skirt, with accent-dress of white organza. She wore a pillbox hat of blue taffeta with white pleated organza and carried a muff of silk organza over taffeta adorned with blue tinted mums. The bridesmaids, Mrs. Frances Vancliff, sister of the bride and Miss Carolyn Brenton of Corbyville were similarly attired to the matron of honor, but in deep pink. Each carried a bouquet of pink tinted mums.

Mr. Bernard Becket of Harold was groomsman while Mr. Allan Vancliff, brother-in-law of the bride and Mr. Jack O'Neill of Kingston, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, were the ushers.

A reception was held in 4th line community hall which was appropriately decorated for the occasion with baskets of sweet peas, pink carnations mingled with lily-of-the-valley and stephanotis and pink and white streamers. The bride's table was centred with a five-layer circular wedding cake topped with a dome surrounding a vase of pink roses. The bridal bouquets completed the colorful nuptial setting.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing a dusty rose lace dress, beige accessories and a corsage of white carnations. Assisting was the bridegroom's mother dressed in a rose colored nylon over taffeta dress in paisley pattern, beige accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

For the wedding trip to the Eastern Provinces and the United States the bride chose a pink lace sleeveless sheath with matching lace jacket, white accessories and a corsage of pink Sweetheart roses encircled with white feathered carnations.

Guests were present from Belleville, Toronto, Kingston, Bowmanville, Stirling, Ottawa, Hastings, Frankford, Port Hope, Springbrook and Corbyville.

Previous to the marriage the bride was honored by fellow teachers at Bowmanville, with the hostesses, Miss Carolyn Brenton and Miss Ruth Gibson at the home of Mrs. Don Anderson when she received a silver entree dish; at the home of Mrs. F. Elgie, Belleville, at a miscellaneous shower with Mrs. William Creighton and Miss Carolyn Brenton as hostesses; at a community shower of miscellaneous items honoring the couple which was arranged by Mrs. H. Knight, Mrs. J. Bushnell and Miss Shirley Chisholm; at a presentation by the staff of Lord Elgin School, Bowmanville, when the bride received a silver mint dish. The bridegroom was presented with a floor lamp by the staff of Watson and Wiegand, Architects, where he is employed.

Mr. and Mrs. McCurdy will reside at 288 William Street, Belleville.

Philippe Tournaye for REMBRANDT

PRINTED PATTERN

SIZES 10-18

The new, closer fit is evident in the shaping of M253—curve-seamed to define the waist slightly but definitely. This quietly beautiful dress by Philippe Tournaye has the merest suggestion of sleeves—a slight extension that's so much more flattering than sleevelessness. The neckline is unique and charming, curved on the bias to stand away. Fabric frog (make them or buy them) point up the pretty details, and add drama if you choose a contrast color. For example, emerald green frogs on turquoise linen, toast on beige, red on pink, black on white. Basically, this is a very simple dress to sew, and ideal for day or evening, luncheon or dinner parties.

Readers' Friday Column

by Mary Moore

QUESTION:

Would you possibly have the Cheese cake recipe from the graham wafer box? It had about 1 lb. cottage cheese, ½ lb. creamed cottage cheese, 4 eggs, 1 cup sugar and a topping of cream. I am not sure of the measurements, but I made it once and it was delicious. It was economical for me too, as I live in the country and my dairy products come cheap. Thank you . . . Mrs. John M.

ANSWER:

The recipe for the Cheese-cake on the honey graham wafer box you refer to follows:

FRIDAY

Dinner Menu

Grilled Haddock Fillets with Herbs; Pan-Fried New Potatoes; Creamed Green Beans; Sliced Tomatoes with Cress; Hot Black Currant Roll with Thin Pouring Cream; Coffee.

CHEESECAKE:

1½ cups honey graham wafers, finely rolled, 1-3 cup melted butter, ¼ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 lb. creamed cottage cheese, 1 lb. plain (not creamed) cottage cheese, 4 eggs, 1 cup fruit sugar, 1 cup sour cream, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind.

Combine honey graham wafer crumbs, finely rolled, butter, sugar and cinnamon. Pat into bottom of 13 x 9" pan. Sieve cottage cheeses into large mixing bowl. Add sour cream, sugar and eggs, one at a time, beating until light and creamy. Fold in lemon juice and rind. Pour mixture over crumbs and bake at 300 deg. Fahr. for 60 minutes.

Toppings: Combine ¼ pint sour cream, 2 tablespoons icing sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla and 1 tablespoon cornstarch. Spread over warm cake and bake an additional 10 minutes.

QUESTION:

Would you be kind enough to print your recipe for Pickled Watermelon Rind? The bought kind is so expensive and often have rinds leftover. . . Sara L.

ANSWER:

PICKLED WATERMELON RIND:

6 lbs. prepared watermelon rind (see note below), 10 cups granulated sugar, 5 cups white vinegar, 5 cups water, 2 thinly sliced lemons, 3 sticks cinnamon, broken, 1 tablespoon whole cloves, 1 tablespoon mustard seeds.

Save sufficient rind from a large watermelon to yield 6 lbs. To prepare the rind, cut into 1" wide strips, peel and cut strips diagonally into diamonds, using white part only. Place in large porcelain or glass bowls or enamel preserving kettle. Cover with brine made in proportions of 1 cup of water to 2 tablespoon pickling salt — non-iodized. Cover and let stand overnight. The following day, drain and rinse the rind. Measure into a kettle the sugar, vinegar, water and lemons. Tie the spices in a cheesecloth bag and add to the sugar mixture. Bring to the boil; boil, stirring occasionally, for 10 minutes. Meanwhile, cover drained and rinsed watermelon rind with boiling water. Cover and boil gently for 10 minutes. Drain thoroughly and pack into hot sterilized sealers. Fill jars with syrup, putting 1 or 2 lemon slices in each jar. Seal at once and label. Yield: 12 pints: Note: Green coloring may be added if desired.

Successful Living

Modern Mental Hospitals Cope Early With Illness

DEAR DORIS — I have vivid memories of one who doubles for "Jack" but this one is not in mental hospital and should be. I did some bookkeeping for him but soon found out he wanted someone who'd save his business by selling herself and giving him the money.

Yet in the end he bravely wanted me to join the church he belonged to. Either he was just rambling or completely split-second childhood or gone completely. I really was lucky to have a policeman's wife for a friend and with I'd taken action a lot sooner.

Tell that one in hospital (Jack) that he's lucky if shock treatments will help as this guy had been "sick" half his life from his own admission. Or better yet, send him this letter from one who knows what he will be like in some years' time if he doesn't get his spirit mended.—EMBARRASSED.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR EMBARRASSED — Perhaps "Jack" will read this and take your advice. Through modern treatment methods our mental hospitals are now discharging about two-thirds of their patients as cured, or sufficiently improved to resume normal living.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — Do you have any idea when marble furniture was made and if it would be of value as an antique. Also the four marble that were made without handles?

Do enjoy your column and the sound advice you give. Just hope it is followed. — CURIOUS.

DEAR CURIOUS — Marble topped tables were made around 1750, during the reign of Louis XV. Same period saw the fashioning of cups without handles. But there were cups with handles as far back as 50 B.C.

Before I write for not, some people do take my advice — and write me a second letter to say so!

* * *

DEAR DORIS — I'm 41. My boy friend accused me of going around with other boys. It is not true. I know I should get around a bit more as I've heard you say in other letters, but it would have meant losing him.

I've been a fool till I'm blue in the face, but it's like talking to a brick wall. It's got to the stage where he hardly ever speaks to me any more. I don't want to lose him!

(1) Should I ignore him for awhile?
(2) Should I give in?
(3) Should I go up to him and let off steam?

TIRED OF TALKING.

DEAR TIRED —
(1) Yes. This will complete the silence.
(2) No.
(3) Why?

* * *

Confidential to DESPERATE — For my "Chart for Curves," write in again, this time enclosing your proper name and address on a stamped envelope, and ten cents.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — My nine-year-old son tried to run away twice, first time because I was getting after him to do his homework and another time when he was told to stand in the corner because he'd hurt one of his younger brothers.

I told him when he threatened to run away again, that he'd get a good spanking, so then he started saying he'd climb a tree and jump, or close his eyes and not talk anymore and so on. (He is a great talker, impossible to keep quiet most of the time). This last bout was brought on when I told him he'd have to wash his own socks if he got them so dirty every day.

He has been a very good boy since then he was younger and he had temper tantrums till he was about four (falling down, screaming, kicking). Still tries screaming but I fine him ten cents, so he's learned about over that as he cares a lot about money. — PERPLEXED.

* * *

DEAR PERPLEXED — Hah! So the tantrums yielded when you hit him where it really hurt — in the pocketbook.

While he must have limits, spankings rarely accomplish best results. If they cow the victim, he may seethe inwardly while submitting. Far better is the positive approach: encouragement to be a helpful little brother, and regular assurance that you care about him. Punishment that fits the crime.

When he threatens to run away, he must not feel this brings you to heel. Hand him his suitcase.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — Lenore, my girl friend, is the same age as I, 17. But she ignores me very often. I am not pretty or popular and haven't too many boy friends as she has. When we go to eateries, she is the one who is asked to dance, and I sit and watch. She only says "hi" to me once in a while.

When I am at her house and her boy friend calls up she talks to them and later tells me that "he is coming to get her in 20 minutes."

This makes me feel terrible and lonely because she just brushes me off. I spend most of my evenings watching television or playing cards. The kids in my room are two years younger than I am.

Should I tell her that I am angry when she ignores me?

I have never had a date or naturally a boy friend. How can I meet men and other girls if I can't go out at night and when I just sit there? I am getting so that I read the death column every night instead of the weddings. — A COLD FISH.

* * *

DEAR COLD FISH — Warm up to your classmates. Girls don't grow up at the same rate and Lenore is operating on a different wave length. Your day will come.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — I am 60 years old, in average good health, a widow. Have had 20 years' experience as a practical nurse. Now I have $2,400 to invest in the best possible way and I would appreciate your advice. — MONEY BAGS.

* * *

DEAR MONEY BAGS — Smart gal! Don't part with a penny until you've surveyed the field. Well-known trust companies right across Canada invite people like you to consult them at no cost at all.

You'll be given a choice of investments, with information about the advantages of each one. The decision is still left in your hands.

Women's Institutes

MELROSE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The Melrose W.I. held the July meeting at the home of Mrs. C. Hagerman with 27 members and several visitors in attendance.

After welcoming all, the president, Mrs. G. Stratton presided over the business session. Correspondence consisted of letters of thanks for swimming lessons and one from the adopted Korean child. The Trent Valley Area convention will be held on September 14 and 15 at Club Canara. It was decided to enter a display of plants at the Belleville Fair and sponsor Simcoe-Soo for another child; also to continue with 4-H Club work this fall; the Training School for Leaders will be held May 17 and 18 in Stirling. Mrs. K. McMeechan gave a detailed financial report on the recent swimming lessons which were so successful with 64 children participating.

At this stage Mrs. R. Fox, convener of home economics, took charge of the program and Mrs. A. English presented an interesting resume of the conference in Ottawa on "The Family" which was held in early summer. She stressed the importance of the family in early years and that a complete family relationship is required. Junior citizenship is a particular problem which should be prevented rather than corrected. She outlined several good suggestions in training a child properly. An atmosphere of love and affection in the home can do wonders for character development. Teach them to honest and set a good example with the Golden Rule predominating. Also stressed the need for discipline and respect for elders.

Mrs. Fox followed with a reading which contained helpful and means and hints for country women in particular. Mr. J. Sherman read a poem and Mrs. J. Haight outlined "Shortcuts for the Freezer," which was most helpful at this canning season.

GUEST SPEAKER

Guest speaker was Miss Boldrick who gave a most practical talk on "Dry Cleaning," which originated in 1864. She told of the many steps in involved from the time the soiled garment is called for until it is returned to the owner in spotless condition. Mention was made of the various new materials on the market and how they were treated. The soiled spots are identified and treated accordingly. Some being 200 types of ink alone. Dresses are measured before they are cleaned and are restored to that same size. Ladies were advised to inform the agent the nature of the stain on soiled garments and thus assist him in applying the correct procedure to remove same.

A question period after her discourse proved most interesting.

Mrs. C. Wrese thanked Miss Boldrick and presented her with a small token of appreciation.

A "Floral Contest" closed a most enjoyable evening after which refreshments were served.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

WHAT'S YOUR E. Q.?

Practically everyone takes a more active part in games and activities during the holidays. Win, or lose, are you a good sport about it? For instance, if you lose, do you:

1. Congratulate the "winners?"
2. Resist sulking about being the underdog?
3. Cheerfully pay off any wagers you have made?
4. Refrain from making sour-grape remarks about your lack of luck?
5. Praise the winner's skill in a sportsmanlike way?

If you are the winner, do you:

1. Resist gloating about your triumph?
2. Compliment the losers on the good game they put up?
3. Resist bragging about the techniques you used to win, to avoid becoming a bore about it?

Total Yourself Up! Play a return match to give them a chance to even the score?

Professor of Fine Art Believes Paintings Copies

TORONTO (CP)—Old Masters —or fakes? That is the dispute between a Calgary broker and a Toronto art historian concerning 200 paintings stored in a disused Calgary night club.

Keith Crafen believes the collection may include works by El Greco, Van Dyck, Rubens and Hogarth.

"I'm no art expert, but I felt that perhaps a dozen in the collection might be genuine Old Masters."

G. S. Vickers, professor of fine art at the University of Toronto, believes that those he has seen are copies.

Mr. Grafen is in Toronto with eight of the paintings, seeking authentication. He is acting for the owner, Clifford Harris, a former Calgary bar owner who collected them in the hope of starting an art gallery in the Prairie city.

CALLS THEM COPIES

Prof. Vickers studied the eight, then pronounced:

"I'd say they were all 18th century copies. They're the sort of copies that you can rummage out of any country in England by the hundred. They're all relatively amateur . . . journeyman copies. I once saw a whole collection of copies like this in Massachusetts."

He said the English aristocracy often had copies made of Old Masters they had seen while touring Europe.

To this, Mr. Grafen said:

"This was the type of comment I was expecting to get. I think art experts are always ultra-conservative."

However, Prof. Vickers was less positive on one of the pictures, a portrait of poet Robert Burns.

"It may be an original portrait by a competent painter, perhaps around 1830. But it's certainly not by Gainsborough."

He has advised Mr. Grafen to send photographs of the paintings to the National Gallery.

"If anything catches their interest they'll probably send someone to take a look."

Clifford Harris says he obtained several of the pictures from a girl friend, whose family comes from Coventry, England.

Another, which he says Archie Keys, former head of Calgary's Allied Art Centre, thought might be a genuine El Greco, was obtained in exchange for some Seven porcelain vases.

Some Notes of Scepticism On Recent U. S. Actions

By DOUG MARSHALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Rumblings of war in Southeast Asia during the last few days coincided with requiems in Britain for the "war to end wars" ignited by a similarly far-off event 50 years ago.

In London both the government and the majority of the press were quick to support the United States in its decision to attack North Vietnamese naval bases.

Only the Guardian of Manchester and the left-wing New Statesman treat the U.S. version of the torpedo - boat engagements against American destroyers in the Gulf of Tonkin with any degree of scepticism.

Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas - Home has indicated he thinks the U.S. action entirely justified and the Times of London comments editorially, echoing President Johnson, the retaliation was "limited and fitting."

Moreover the U.S. decision to wait and see, without leaning any ultimatums together with the act of bringing the matter before the United Nations security council, has earned general British approval.

INCREASED TRUST

Several newspapers comment Britain has come to put more trust in U.S. foreign policy decisions since the Cuban crisis of 1962.

The idea the U.S. has gained the right to call the shots prevails generally in Europe despite recent doubts sown by statements of the Republican presidential candidate, Senator Barry Goldwater.

At the same time Western Europe cannot help remembering that this warm summer of 1964 marks the 50th and 25th anniversaries of world wars.

Underneath the official support and popular approval of the U.S. position lurk fears of:

"Can Viet Nam be another Sarajevo?" is a question that crosses many Britons' minds as the read the latest headlines. "Would disengagement be another Munich?"

If, in the long run, the Viet Nam crisis boils into a Korean-type war, or even worse, Britain would likely throw its weight behind the U.S. forces now gathering in the South China Sea. Malaysia could be next in the list if South Viet Nam fell to the Communists.

BALLOON LAUNCHED

Hal C. Banks Loses Another Court Battle

MONTREAL (CP) — Hal C. Banks, deposed president of the Seafarers' International Union (Ind.) Thursday lost another court battle.

The Quebec Court of Appeal ruled that an injunction taken out two years ago against the SIU was justified.

The injunction was obtained by Upper Lakes Shipping Limited which said that unloading of a ship at Trois-Rivieres was being interrupted by violence.

Banks and other SIU officers had termed the situation "peaceful picketing."

Meanwhile, there was no word of the whereabouts of Banks, missing since a bailiff tried to serve an arrest warrant on him at his suburban Pointe Claire home three weeks ago.

The warrant stemmed from the same picketing incident on which the Appeals Court ruled today. Banks was found guilty last September of contempt of court after SIU members continued picketing, in spite of the injunction.

Doubt Communist China Will Take Any More Steps To Broaden War in Asia

HONG KONG (AP)—Competent sources are inclined to doubt that Communist China will take any steps in the Tonkin Gulf crisis that would lead inevitably to broadened war in Asia.

U.S. air strikes against Communist North Vietnamese installations were only 50 miles south of China's border. Peking has been saying it would intervene in Viet Nam if it judged that the United States had carried the war to North Viet Nam.

The situation therefore carries the danger of general Asian war, but Communist China has little to gain from such a conflict at this stage. Its leaders would be more likely to feel time is with them in Southeast Asia.

In addition, Peking is known to be short of gasoline and to lack a sufficient industrial base for its war machine should it be involved in prolonged military conflict.

Intelligence sources say there is no evidence of any massive military buildup on the Indo-China border to indicate readiness for Chinese movement into North Viet Nam.

USE 'VOLUNTEERS'?

Peking could try intervening in Laos style and in Korea, with "volunteers," or it could try using the crisis as a pretext to beat up some guerrilla war in Laos, a jungle conflict suitable for Chinese capabilities.

But the chances are even that such intervention would lead to a rapid escalation of the struggle in Viet Nam and precipitate the major war that Peking according to many experts here, does not want.

These experts, believe Peking will restrict its reaction, at least for the time being, to words rather than deeds.

It will probably denounce the U.S. attacks on North Viet Nam, threaten retaliation and demand another Geneva conference to work out a negotiated settlement for the Viet Nam war.

Some experts on Communist affairs believe such a conference could have been one of Peking's main objectives if it did, as they believe, incite the North Vietnamese to attack U.S. destroyers.

If that was Peking's objective, it went halfway toward achieving it when the United Nations security council was called into urgent session at the request of the United States.

If the UN, Peking and Hanoi can be kept for the time being from further their cause with calls for internationalization of South Viet Nam and a negotiated settlement of the Viet Nam war, presumably through a new conference.

Peking can expect an extra dividend from the United Nations. The Soviet Union would have to fall in line behind its Asian Communist allies or stand condemned before the Communist world as a trailer to the Communist cause.

Either way, Peking would expect to gain.

SITTING ON TOP OF THE WORLD

...with a business of his own!

We'd like for you to meet the Executive Officer of a thriving business . . . the boy who delivers your daily newspaper.

As the owner and operator of his newspaper route, this Junior Independent Merchant must solve problems and shoulder responsibilities, just like all other businessmen.

He buys his product, your newspaper, at wholesale and then retails it to his customers. He must make daily deliveries, do his own accounting, billing, and even struggle with a collection problem here and there.

He is discovering, through actual experience, the rewards for promptness, dependability, self-reliance and initiative.

One of the rewards is his profit, the difference between the wholesale and retail prices of the paper. His route means money for a savings account for college, a new bicycle, a week in camp, many things.

But he is earning even greater rewards. As he learns about sales and salesmanship, he is equipping himself for the future. From boys who learned the principles of business as newspaperboys have come presidents, governors, mayors, industrialists and professional men . . . those who determine the quality of our civilization in their generation.

If you have a son that you think might be interested in a newspaper route, why not write or phone us.

$20,000 Paid On Town Debt Council Told

DESERONTO—Taking advantage of the summer lull and a short agenda the Town Council met for its only session for the month of August on Tuesday night.

Although Council was faced with a vacant seat due to the resignation of Reeve Alford no indication was given by Council as to when the vacancy would be filled.

Mr. Alford recently sold his property to the east of Deseronto and moved to Toronto. His absence from Council is keenly felt.

Councillor Marks presented the financial report for the past month in place of the former Reeve.

He noted that there had been a payment of $20,000 to the bank as partial reduction of the $90,000 owed by the municipality.

The town now has a bank balance of $16,942.18 in its account.

The large payment on the town's debt was mainly possible because of the first receipt of taxes since the levy was set.

Speaking to the tax situation under new business Councillor Percy Brooks complained that the "mill rate was ridiculously high, while assessments were just the opposite."

He expressed a hope that the assessment would be reviewed since in its present state it was a "deterrent to anyone wishing to purchase property in Deseronto."

Mayor Lott indicated in answer that nothing could be done until next year's assessments and that would have to be taken to insure that the town's county rate did not increase because of re-assessment in Deseronto.

"I feel that this is the first step that should be taken," said Mayor Lott. "I will give you some information on this by the next meeting, if you wish," he added.

"I'd like to see somebody find out," said Councillor Brooks. "I have asked about this two or three times and have had no satisfaction yet."

Napanee Pageant Much Enjoyed

DESERONTO — It is not an easy thing to crowd a hundred years of progress into one week of activity.

The Napanee-Lennox and Addington Centennial Association has done just that in their spectacular "Retrospective".

Under the sub-heading "From Quinte's Sail to Adding-ton Trail" the Association, in co-operation with the Rogers Company, has been offering a seventeen episode presentation of the first hundred years of young Canada.

And not without some difficulty.

To begin with, over 250 actors and actresses were necessary in order to meet the challenge of covering so large an historical perspective.

That problem was solved by the tremendous response of residents of Lennox and Addington County.

Then there was the chore of building the setting at the grandstand in the Napanee Fair Grounds.

Five thousand running feet of fibre board and lumber solved that.

Add to that the combined operations of properties, costuming and make-up, scenario and tilting and sound system.

Like using live stock and rolling stock on stage for a stance.

Somehow, under Division Chairman, Ron McPherson, the show not only gets under way, but comes off with better than average pace and entertainment.

The early wilderness and frontier scenes range from trading with the natives to a genuine insight into the religious faith of the day.

There is a range of excitement when in Episode Ten the Planners set the scene for the First Asphalt Road, still marked by the milestones from Napanee to Kingston.

And a pleasant sense of identity and accomplishment with the closing 'O Canada' and fireworks.

CURE-ALL

The Roman historian Pliny said mistletoe was a cure for sterility and a remedy for poisoning.

Complains Of Noise Near His Office

DESERONTO — "I trust we will not have to take the law into our own hands," said Mr. Rehdell of the Quinte Distributing Company in his letter to the Deseronto town council.

Mr. Rendell, who owns and operates his business out of his apartment building on the corner of main and Prince Streets, was complaining of the noise and lack of order on and in the vicinity of his corner.

He stated that it was time for the second installation on taxes and that he would not pay until the anti-noise and other pertinent by-laws were invoked.

"This is not a crank letter," he ended. "You better believe it. We mean it."

Councillor Sharpe pointed out that he had received verbal complaints of the noise from motorcycles and Hollywood mufflers.

Mayor Lott said that he had inquired of the police constable concerning the letter's complaints. The constable indicated that there were no complaints registered and that he had not noticed any excess noise.

"I move that the letter be turned over to the Fire and Police Committee," said Councillor Sharpe.

"Make it to the chairman of the Police Committee and I'll second it," said Councillor Howard.

Councillor Howard is chairman of the Fire Committee.

No Progress Made on Buying Right-of-Way

DESERONTO — The question of Deseronto's Centennial celebrations rose again in Council Tuesday night but received scant attention.

Councillor Sharpe asked what progress had been made in ascertaining the deed owned by Mr. Fred Carter of Napanee that the town wished to purchase.

He was referring to a strip of land along the Bayshore Road west of the Toronto separating the waterfront and roadside property recently purchased from Mrs. Verdun Vesley of this town.

The land in question was originally railroad property right-of-way sold privately some years ago when the town's trunk sewer way serving Deseronto was abandoned.

Ownership of this land prevents the Council from having direct access to the waterfront property from the Bayshore road.

The Council's hope that this area will eventually be a Centennial Park and quality for grants from the federal and Provincial governments.

"Are we prepared to make an offer for the right-of-way?" asked Councillor Sharpe.

"I am not prepared to submit an offer at present," countered Mayor Gerald Lott.

"Personally," he said, "I don't know as yet how much land is involved."

Mayor Lott recently has on the books a resolution to take the necessary steps to consolidate all holdings. The resolution was made at the July meeting of Council.

NEW EMPLOYEE

Under new business on Tuesday night the town council was authorized to hire a new employee to work on the roads and streets of Deseronto.

Councillor Percy Brooks, chairman of the streets committee, pointed out that applications had been ...ived.

Only two were deemed satisfactory and after an interview it was decided by the committee to recommend the hiring of Mr. Harvey Wagar.

The job calls for a man having a chauffeur's licence and considerable mechanical ability.

Council approved the recommendation and instructed Mr. Wagar be contacted and invited to begin work on the seventeenth of this month.

Sunday School Lesson

Learning to Worship

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

There is no greater privilege that Americans enjoy than freedom of worship. This privilege so many Americans take for granted is discouraged in communist countries. For example, the tallest building in Europe is the new building of the University of Moscow. Not tall by American standards, its central tower rises seven stories above the ground with two great wings about 20 stories in height reaching out to fill the entire block on which the building stands. The building houses some 25,000 students, every one of whom is studying some branch of science. Other subjects are taught in an old building nearer the centre of Moscow.

The only thing in Europe taller than this building is the Eiffel Tower. But the guide will not mention the Eiffel Tower when speaking of this building. The guide will mention a bell tower that stands in a park which is area known as the Kremlin beside what was once a cathedral and now a museum. The guide will point out that before this University building was built, the bell tower was the highest thing in Russia. But no longer. Now that building is closed completely to science, is the tallest, as if to say, religion doesn't belong in a country where Science and Education, spelled with capital letters, are important.

But one cannot dismiss religion so easily. An American diplomat was flying in a Russian plane. Being a gentleman, he asked the Russian stewardess about her religious faith. The girl replied that she had none; she was an atheist. The plane ran into very rough weather, so much so, the passengers feared for their lives. When the stewardess came by Capling prayed during the terrifying moments in the air. The stewardess asked, "Why did you pray?" The surprised American asked, "If you are an atheist, to whom are you going to pray?" The girl was flustered, but she replied, "I don't know, but I prayed."

There is a dimension in life that is not satisfied apart from faith in God and worship is the art of maintaining communication with the divine Spirit. Not just for rescue in times of emergency, but for guiding and strengthening for daily living. They who wait for the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings as eagles, they shall run and not be weary, they shall walk and not faint" (Isaiah 40:31).

LEADERSHIP IN WORSHIP

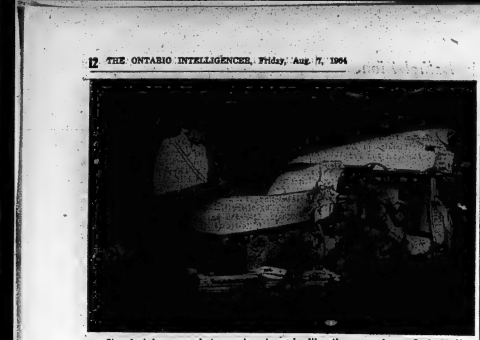
Moses knew this. God had led his people by miracles across the Red Sea. But unless reminded of this providence, they would soon forget. Without worship they could soon begin to think of God in the past tense as they thought of what he had done for them. Worship must help them to think of him as ever-present Reality. So Moses began to assemble the things that would remind them of God's presence; a sanctuary, an ark of the covenant, a mercy seat, cherubims, a table of shewbread, seven - branched candlesticks, curtains, an altar. All these would assist the people to express their outreach toward God, and remind them of His outreach toward them.

In addition to the place and furnishings for worship, Moses established a priesthood, choosing his own brother Aaron as the first high priest. In a time of unusual insight, a breastplate is made containing a semi-precious stone for each of the tribes of Israel for the high-priest to wear over his heart to symbolize the fact that he should "bear the judgement of the people of Israel upon his heart before the Lord continually." (Exodus 28:30 RSV)

With great care, thought and attention were given to the observance of the Sabbath, of feast days, and of the sacrifices, many of which symbolized the need for atonement. Thus, elaborate preparations were made to keep the people from forgetting the spiritual side of life, and to prevent them from worshipping false gods.

Not only did the people gather together in the sanctuary to worship, they worshipped in their homes. As they faced the tabernacle, symbolic of God's presence by the midst, "the people would rise up and worship, every man at his tent door." (Exodus 33:10 RSV) The home needs the influence of the church, but the church cannot succeed without the cooperation of the home. Both must work together to produce a better type of man.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for August 9, is "God's People Learn To Worship," Exodus 25 through 40.



Of course, all of this could not happen automatically. It required willing stewardship on the part of the people. The emphasis on the part of Moses was that of religious response. "Speak to the people of Israel, that they take for me an offering from every man whose heart makes him give it. You shall receive an offering for me." (Exodus 25:2 RSV) The result was that "all the congregation of the people of Israel, whose heart moved them to bring anything for the work which the Lord had commanded by Moses to be done, brought it as their freewill offering to the Lord." (Exodus 35:29 RSV) Worship reaches its peak when it calls forth a voluntary response, even to sharing one's means in response to what God has given to us.

It only takes seconds to create a tragedy like the one above. Jack Hutton wonders about youthful drivers who don't seem to care.

Teen-Age Canada
Youthful Drivers Break Every Rule of the Book

Last weekend while I drove home from the cottage, I watched with fascination while death almost struck in front of my eyes at least a dozen times.

The cause in each case, youthful drivers who jockeyed their metal cars as if they carried a magic charm that would protect them no matter what.

I realize a lot of friends will stop speeding to me for the next week or so because of what I'm saying. But I was fascinated by the handful of young drivers who broke every rule in the book.

I'm talking about the loutish, dishevelled, loose-lipped maniacs who appear on the highways during busy weekends, jumping in and out of traffic as if their lives depended on getting one car length ahead.

You've seen them.

Their cars look like castoffs from the same junk yard — aging eight-cylinder (six-cylinder would never do) models bearing the scars of previous bumps, scrapes or crashes.

I never worry about their motors because they are obviously tuned to the point that my car seems to be standing still when they jump. But what about the brakes? The horn? The radio always works — but how strong is the steering mechanism?

I was cruising along one stretch of two-lane highway, sighing in a stream of homebound traffic that was averaging 60 miles-per-hour, when I noticed the little black car in my rear-vision mirror.

You couldn't miss seeing him. The driver wore a straw beach hat slanted over his forehead and was hunched over the steering wheel, a cigarette dangling from his lips. A girl, pretty but scared, sat close beside him.

His tactics never varied. He waited until he saw a stretch of daylight in the opposite lane — even 20 feet — and tramped on the accelerator, wrapping his car into his lane in the nick of time.

In between his mad dashes, the driver poised his car like a humming bee inches behind the bumper of the next car ahead of him. If our line had suddenly had to stop, there's no doubt what would have happened to him.

You think I'm talking about the driver? I only wish I were. But I saw the same pattern repeated over and over again, always by drivers who seemed to have learned to drive in the same school and whose cars were from the same unknown junkyard.

What are the answers? You're saying, I'm sure, that the vast majority of young drivers are better drivers than the average adult. Better reflexes, better vision and all that.

I won't argue that. All I'm saying is that a minority of young drivers — possibly only one or two out of the 100 — apparently feel self-esteem only behind the wheel of a car.

My hunch is that these drivers don't shine anywhere else. They probably flubbed school. They don't like their jobs. They don't like their folks who don't like them either. It must be good to know they can compete somewhere.

They apparently don't realize that turning a weekend highway into a speedway may mean their deaths. What bothers me is that they usually take a few of us along too.

There's my beef, written while I'm still mad at the cats I saw. Let me know whether you agree. I feel I'm being too harsh on these misinformed fellows.

SUMMER TRAVEL

While we're on the subject of beefs, here's a letter from 16-year-old Martin Thompson of Halifax, N.S., who recently drove through Quebec with his parents.

"You've emphasized in your columns, Jack, that more of us should get to know more about the rest of our country. I've never seen Quebec and was looking forward to understanding something of that province this summer.

"The perfect opportunity seemed to be a trip my folks were making to visit relatives in Montreal. I reviewed all my French after school finished and even bought several conversational French records.

"The first day in Quebec I tried ordering a meal for all of us in a little roadside restaurant. The waiter, about my own age, listened to my halting attempts and said: 'Speak English, please. I haven't time to listen to you practise our language.'

"Not only was it embarrassing to hear that in front of my own family, but I was hurt. How can you try understanding the other fellow when you hit attitudes like that?"

He was probably busy, Martin. If he wasn't, he was simply being unfriendly. And I hope one incident like that didn't stop you!

MEETING A DEMAND—This yarder, worth $40,000, is partly meeting the demand by owners of plywood mills to hold down costs and increase production. Cargate Industries Limited has made more than 20 since the company took over an iron works. Yarders are the nearest thing to a product line made by the company. The difficulty in creating a product line lies in the demand for specially designed machinery to fill every contract.

Plywood Market Is up for Grabs

By DENNIS ORCHARD

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP)—Plywood mills in Canada are in breakneck competition to hold down costs, increase production and get their product to a hungry market.

They are seeking to improve every step in their operations. It means developing better loading, barking and sawing of logs, better peeling, drying, gluing, patching, grading, sanding and bundling of plywood.

A man who can answer these demands with revolutionary equipment and tailor the equipment to the existing plant, is Norm Springate. And he's supplying mills from Quesnel, B.C. to Lewiston, Idaho; from Roseburg, Ore., to Mattawa, Ont.

Although he now makes equipment for other kinds of log processing, Mr. Springate, 55, made his mark in the 1800s with a system that improved the process of peeling rough logs to produce veneer, the thin sheets that are the stuff of plywood. This lathe conversion system allowed much more of the log to be used and also set a new log in position for peeling in four or five seconds, improving production speed.

It was one patent he took with him in 1959 when he quit as mechanical superintendent of Canadian Forest Products Ltd. after 20 years and entered partnership with old friend Charlie Carncross.

SOLID IDEAS

Mr. Carncross brought the skills of a double-degree graduate in engineering and economics. Mr. Springate, whose New Westminster education went only as far as a senior matriculation, contributed experience in plant layout and flow systems as well as a knowledge of electronics from 1943-46 radar work in the Canadian Navy.

Neither brought any money, but they didn't need money at that stage. Ideas were their product.

Their purpose was to make plywood operations more efficient. It meant contracting first in the northwestern U.S., later in B.C.—for development, layout and installation of equipment.

Trips to the bank started in 1962 when their Cargate Industries Ltd. bought out the Westminster Iron Works here for $300,000 and started to build machine.

Now tied in with a dozen other companies, including four wholly owned, Cargate Westminster Industries Ltd. designs equipment for affiliates to make, makes equipment that affiliates have designed, supplies parts and does repairs. It develops from scratch entire plant systems, produces them in its shops and supervises installation.

ALL CUSTOM BUILT

"We talk dreamily of a product line," says Freda Springate, who has worked just as many 80-hour weeks in the last five years as her husband. But no product line or even modified "assembly line" will ever be possible in a business where every contract requires specially designed machinery.

Cargate now employs 100 persons in Vancouver and maintains a subsidiary sales company in Portland, Ore. It has seven draftsmen, an electrical engineer, and at least one man working full time on electronic and hydraulic control systems.

Sales average about $180,000 a month, with most jobs in the $10,000-$20,000 range. Some jobs reach $300,000 and last year, at Western Plywood Ltd. mill in Vancouver, Cargate installed $800,000 worth of equipment.

The bank still holds "everything but the dog and kids" as collateral but the company expects to get out of the woods in three years, says Mr. Springate.

In or out of the woods ingenuity will always be the company byword.

USED OLD PARTS

At Fort Macleod, Alta., Cargate set up a plywood mill in an old airport hangar. Installing a system that employed a converted dryer built from rusty parts discovered in Mississippi.

This year the shop completed a $150,000 contract for steel bins to load earth fill at the Peace River dam project in northeastern B.C.

Logging yarders, each worth $40,000, are the nearest thing to a product line in the plant. Workers have made more than 20 since the company took over the iron works.

The giant Weyerhaeuser Co. asked for a $30,000 lathe conversion at its plywood mill at Matlawa, near North Bay, Ont., and reports that the investment will be redeemed in about 15 months.

More important, the company expects to be able to extend its forest holdings and open up new areas now that it can make plywood from smaller logs.

Perhaps the most incredible saving through Cargate equipment is reported by Western Plywood Ltd., whose Cariboo plant in Quesnel is producing 20 per cent more plywood since its lathe conversion.

Springate is his own best salesman. He has never admitted to himself or, a client that a given job cannot be accomplished.

"It's got me into trouble," he says. "But when you get started you don't make money. You make your reputation."

Where Territorial Waters End Is Question Raised By Recent U. S. Actions

WASHINGTON (CP)—United States naval action against North Viet Nam in the crescent-shaped gulf of Tonkin recalls the often-vexed question of where territorial waters end and the high seas begin.

On the basis of U.S. government reports, the two actions occurred 30 miles and 65 miles from the nearest mainland—normally far enough out to be rated as international waters or "the high seas."

There is no evidence here the gulf can not be regarded as the high seas under international law.

Authorities here agree in a tangled field, historic claims have substantial weight in establishing where and when a country can successfully argue that certain waters beyond accepted distances are its preserve.

The U.S. state department says it has no record of any claim by North Viet Nam to the Gulf of Tonkin, where American naval units have been patrolling regularly.

The U.S. says it thus acted, in firing back at North Vietnamese patrol torpedo boats and in launching an air strike a their bases, in line with article 51 of the United Nations Charter.

The article provides "nothing in the present charter shall impair the inherent right of individual or collective self - defence" against an attack on a UN member until the security council has taken action.

By tradition the territorial water limits offshore have been three nautical miles and this is the distance the U.S. government recognizes internationally, state department officials say.

In fact, however, the U.S. tacitly takes account of the 3-mile limit asserted unilaterally by Soviet Russia, a number of other countries and now Canada.

The Bay of Fundy between New Brunswick and Nova Scotia is an example of a larger body of water held to be a territorial property. Thus not long ago Russian trawlers quickly heeded a Canadian government request to move out of the Bay of Fundy, claimed on historic grounds by Canada.

The Gulf of Tonkin is a big ger pocket of water—part of the South China Sea and about 300 miles long on a north-south axis and 150-175 miles wide west to east. But it is bordered on three sides by Communist-held land.

North Viet Nam lies to the west of the gulf and part of the North Red China occupies the rest of the north coast plus the Luichow Peninsula and the sizable island of Hainan which together jut southward more than 200 miles to form the gulf's east coast.

The outlet to the China Sea is about 190 miles wide and lies to the southeast, roughly along the 17th parallel dividing North and South Viet Nam. Small islands dot the coasts of North Viet Nam and China.

The U.S. consistently has referred to the gulf as international water.

Under international law as practised generally, any attack on the high seas is aggression ot the kind represented by Germany's sinking of the liner Lusitania. That precipitated U.S. entry into the First World War.

Standardizing territorial limits was set back in 1960 by the failure at Geneva of a law of the seas conference. The conference failed by one vote to agree on a compromise formula for a six-mile territorial limit plus another six miles to preserve national fishing claims. No further public effort has been made on the question.

Authorities here also note in connection with the issue that the so-called headland-to-headland principle is another complicating factor.

Canada will employ this formula to some extent in laying down base horizontal waters patterns. By using coastline projections and islands, claims can be asserted on waters well outside the 12-mile zone.

Indonesia is cited as an example making extreme use of this although her claims have been ignored so far. Using islands, she has claimed territorial waters up to 1,000 miles away.

Trim Grade 13 Subjects by Ten Per Cent

TORONTO (CP)—An education department spokesman said Thursday that 17 subjects in the Grade 13 curriculum for 1964-65 have been trimmed by 10 per cent to give students more time to study a subject in depth.

M. B. Parnall, assistant superintendent of curriculum for the department, said the changes will bring a saving of three weeks in the school year. This time also will be used by the student to prepare himself more for a university education. He said full details of the Grade 13 curriculum will be revealed next week.

The Grade 13 content of subjects will remain as before, he said. "The only change is the excision of 10 per cent."

Mr. Parnall also said a new optional course, man in society, will be taught to Grades 11 and 12 next term in six schools. Other new courses planned for Grades 11 and 12 are world politics, biology, geology, home economics, and three additions to the English course—modern literature, theatre arts and speech arts.

Hardwicke Dies at 71

NEW YORK (AP)—Sir Cedric Hardwicke, British-born actor who gained distinction on both sides of the Atlantic during 53 years on stage and screen, died Thursday He was 71.

Noted for his dignity on many a stage, Hardwicke once confided that "by nature and training I really am a clown, and started out to be a clown."

The late King George V knighted Hardwicke in 1934 in recognition of the skills he displayed in a great variety of roles—from a gravedigger in Shakespeare's Hamlet, to a riverboat captain in Edna Ferber's Show Boat.

Hardwicke was admitted to hospital about three weeks ago, suffering from emphysema, a lung ailment, and a related heart condition. He collapsed and died in his bedroom early Thursday, inflicting a small cut on his scalp. As a result, the medical examiner's office performed an autopsy.

Funeral services will be held Monday noon at the Universal Funeral Chapel in New York.

Playground Carnival Makes Penny King for One Night

The penny was king for a few hours in Belleville last night.

At least it was for several thousand kiddies who swarmed the East Hill playgrounds for the annual penny carnival sponsored by the city playgrounds.

The kiddies found that the lowly penny would buy a chance on a cake draw; allow them to play bingo or toss horseshoes; have their weight guessed and even take a peek at the fat lady.

Contest winners found themselves eligible for a wide range of prizes, although they had to stand in line to get them and even then the prizes ran out before the evening was finished.

A crowd estimated at 3,000 attended the event.

CHOOSE MISS CARNIVAL

Winner of the Miss Penny Carnival honor was winsome Jacqueline Beaucage, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Beaucage, 23 Fourth Street, representing the Bayview Heights playground.

Runners up were Kimberlee Christopher, 130 Humewood Dr., representing Churchill Heights playground and Julie Britton, 8 Southview Ave., representing the Sir Winston Churchill school playground.

Twenty-two young beauties, representing as many playgrounds, competed for the Miss Penny Carnival honor. Judges were L. A. Kells and William VanTassell.

Last night's penny carnival was the highlight of playground week being observed at city playgrounds this week.

Special events such as choosing respective playground queens, bedding of mother's teas and other events are being held.

Today there is an inter-playground sports meet.

Alderman Donald Jose, chairman of the city parks and recreation commission officially opened the penny carnival, while Norman Carter, assistant to the recreational director, acted as master of ceremonies for the Carnival Queen judging.

Time Limit On Flag Debate Not Settled

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons broke out Thursday in a series of bitterly - worded recriminations about the breakdown of negotiations among party leaders aimed at a time limit on the flag debate.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette, over shouts from the Progressive Conservatives of "demagogue," accused Opposition Leader Diefenbaker of making mockery of parliament look like a bunch of school children and of playing for public attention.

Mr. Diefenbaker retorted by suggesting that the Creditiste leader is running interference for the Liberal government. He declared that the Conservatives won't be put in a strait jacket on the flag debate.

Prime Minister Pearson, reporting that talks among the party leaders Wednesday night failed to reach agreement on a time limit, did not give any reason. At a press conference after the talks he had blamed the Conservatives.

Gilles Gregoire (Creditiste — Lapointe) asked who among the five party leaders present refused to accept a time limit. Mr. Pearson replied that no useful purpose could be served in going into details of the abortive conference.

New Democratic Leader Douglas who had originally proposed a party leaders conference to work out a time limit said he had suggested a week but the leaders could have agreed on a longer one if they wanted to. His understanding of the talks was that the Conservatives refused to accept any time limit. They weren't just objecting to the length of the limit.

Train Hits Car, Two Killed

BAVERTON Ont. (CP) — Leslie Pelford, 16, of Shuttleville and Robert Miller, 18, of Toronto, were killed Thursday night when their car was struck by a train near this community, 40 miles north of Oshawa.

Police said pieces of the car were scattered for a mile along the track.

Shuttleville is 20 miles northeast of Toronto.

Court Limits Pickets at Newspapers

TORONTO (CP) — Publishers of Toronto's three daily newspapers obtained a temporary injunction Thursday limiting their striking printers to three pickets at each entrance to the newspapers.

The injunction, issued by the Ontario Supreme Court, also prohibits the International Typographical Union (CLC) from calling the dispute a lockout.

The printers, who have been off their jobs since July 9, are prohibited from distributing, publishing or displaying any placard, tabloid, picket, handbill or any other document claiming they are locked out.

The Globe and Mail, a morning paper, and The Star and The Telegram, evening papers, have continued to publish since the walkout, using supervisory and non-union personnel to do composing room work.

Thursday's injuction is effective until Monday at 2 p.m. when lawyers for the publishers will seek to extend it. It was obtained without representations being heard from the union.

PICKETS SLO NTRUCKS

About 200 pickets had gathered outside three back entrances to The Telegram Thursday, slowing the movement of trucks leaving to deliver papers.

About 30 pickets were on hand as trucks began pulling in and out of the loading area at The Globe and Mail Thursday night. Notice of the injunction was served on the pickets by representatives of The Globe and Mail but they continued their slow shuffle at the back of the plant.

At 10 p.m. the pickets removed signs and began dispersing in line with the court order.

Talks aimed at settling the strike have broken down and no resumption of negotiations is in sight.

Order Inquest In Drownings at Mayville Beach

AMHERSTBURG, Ont. (CP) An inquest was ordered Thursday and a provincial police investigation is underway into the deaths Sunday of Monday of Beverly and Philip Sanford of Windsor at nearby Mayville Beach in the Detroit River.

Beverly, 17, drowned while trying to rescue her brother Philip, 10, who was dragged under by the undertow about 25 feet from shore. Philip's body was found Thursday near the spot where his sister's body was washed ashore Wednesday.

Coroner Dr. E. C. Harris of Amherstburg ordered the inquest and an investigation into the beach conditions. Police are currently conducting an investigation into the deaths. No date has been set for the inquest.

Police said the Windsor children were the fifth and sixth to drown while swimming in the area since the channel was dredged in 1959.

Soviet Union Is Suffering Acute Embarrassment From U. S. Strikes in N. Viet Nam

MOSCOW (CP) — The Soviet Union watched uncomfortably from the sidelines Thursday for the second straight day as the situation in Southeast Asia remained tense.

Diplomatic observers believe the Soviet Union is suffering acute embarrassment as a result of United States air strikes against Communist North Viet Nam.

This is reflected in the cautious tone of Soviet press reaction to the toughened U.S. stand.

Only a restrained murmur of protest was raised. Western observers got the impression the Russians were trying to soft-pedal the latest developments in the explosive Indochina theatre. The keynote Soviet statement remained the one put out by Tass news agency Wednesday night accused the U.S. of committing an openly hostile act by patrolling the North Viet Nam coast.

It warned of the possibility of large - scale military conflict with all its dangerous consequences and said the responsibility for these would lie with the U.S.

STATEMENT MILD

The statement was regarded as unusually mild in tone. Observers said it bespeaks a wide gap now separating the Chinese camp, including North Viet Nam, from the Soviet camp within the Communist fold. The two groups have been carrying on a bitter ideological dispute.

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia Thursday described as absurd the U.S. claim that its air strike on North Viet Nam was a defensive measure. Izvestia writer Vikenti Mateyev accused the U.S. of heeding South Vietnamese calls for a widening of tension of the Viet Nam war.

However, there remains every indication that the Russians listened to avoid getting directly involved in the crisis.

Western diplomats speculated that North Vietnamese torpedo boat attacks on U.S. warships were deliberately planned to test both American resolve and Soviet policy in Southeast Asia. If the U.S. struck back—which it did—and Russia failed to support its Communist brethren, then Russia stood to lose prestige in the world Communist movement.

KHRUSHCHEV ABSENT

Meanwhile, Premier Khrushchev continued his four-day-old tour of agricultural areas. His continued absence from the Soviet capital could be taken as concrete evidence that Russian leaders are trying to play down the Viet Nam crisis.

Soviet foreign ministry experts were said to be examining the possibility that China may be seeking to embroil both Russia and the United States.

Diplo, ntic sources said Russian, officials appeared genuinely surprised by the suddenness of the Vietnamese confrontation and there seemed to be no doubt that the Soviet government was seriously embarrassed.

The general consensus in moscow diplomatic circles is that Russia has lost almost all influence in Southeast Asia, and the North Vietnamese Communists now take their orders from Peking.

This view appears to be supported by the Soviet government's lack of on-the-spot information, diplomats said.

Justice Will Be Granted Absence Leave

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Favreau has received a request from Mr. Justice Leo Landreville of the Ontario Supreme Court for a leave of absence pending disposal of charges against him.

Mr. Favreau said Thursday he intends to recommend that the federal cabinet grant Mr. Justice Landreville leave. He did not indicate for how long.

Mr. Justice Landreville 54, was remanded to Sept. 21 in Sudbury Tuesday on three charges. Two charges relate to accepting stock in Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company Limited to procure municipal council approval for gas distribution and the third says he conspired with Ralph K. Farris, NONG president, to do so.

Mr. Justice Landreville was appointed to the Supreme Court bench in 1956.

Maple Leaf Stadium Scene Of Festival

TORONTO (CP)—A Supreme Court ruling Thursday forced the Mariposa Folk Festival incorporated to move its annual festival to Maple Leaf Stadium here from a proposed site in Medonte Township, 12 miles west of Orillia.

Justice E. L. Haines ruled in favor of an injunction by the township, restraining the Mariposa corporation from holding the festival within township boundaries.

The festival is scheduled to begin tonight and continue through Sunday. More than 2,500 are expected to attend the opening night with a total of 5,000 expected for the three days.

Randy Farris, president of the festival, said in an interview following Thursday's ruling that he had obtained permission to use the stadium from Harry Hunter, president of the Maple Leaf baseball club which rents the stadium from the Toronto Harbor Commission.

In accepting the township's application for the injunction, Mr. Justice Haines dismissed a motion by the Mariposa company to overrule a township bylaw. The Mariposa firm said the bylaw was discriminatory and prohibitive.

In their application the township said Mariposa officials hadn't complied with the bylaw, which requires them to post a $200,000 public liability bond along with other bonds to cover police and other costs. The township also said the company had failed to pay $500 for a licence, required by bylaw.

Yanks Slip Slump; Chisox Beaten

Dusty Bat Act Pays Off For Yogi

By JIM BECKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The biggest two weeks of the year for the American League start today and New York Yankees got ready for them by hauling their bats in the rack.

That should be bad news for Baltimore Orioles and Chicago White Sox.

The last time the Yankees did that they won five straight.

And the time they rolled out the final of a three-game set in Kansas City 5-3 by using the dusty bat that was dreamed up by manager Yogi Berra as a slump-killer.

The victory put the Yankees four percentage points ahead of the Orioles, with the big series coming up between the two clubs at Yankee Stadium tonight.

SLIP BACK

The third-place White Sox dropped its game back when they dropped a 4-2 decision to Detroit Tigers. Minnesota Twins edged Boston Red Sox on a fly ball that was lost in the sun in the only other game.

The Orioles were idle, along with Washington Senators, Los Angeles Angels and Cleveland Indians.

The Yankees snapped out of their slump in Kansas City by using Yogi's recipe for more hitting—no batting practice, it was the second time this year Berra had ordered his team to skip batting drill, and the second time they responded.

The same old magic response would come in handy in the next two weeks, being billed as the pennant weeks. The Yankees meet the second-place Orioles for four games at home, then the White Sox come in for four.

Then the Yanks go to Baltimore for three and Chicago for four. That will wind up the season's business for the Yankees with the competitors. They will not see either team again.

The Yanks split 5-5 against the Orioles and 10-0 against the White Sox going into the big fortnight, but they are not certain at this stage if their ace Whitey Ford, can be counted on for regular work. He has an ailing hip.

That made the continued rehabilitation of pitching ace Ralph Terry good news for the Yanks. Terry got the victory, his third in a row, against the Athletics, although he needed help when the home run ball started to catch up to his stuff again.

Nellie Mathews homered in the fifth and Rocky Colavito hit his 27th, a two-run shot, in the eighth against Terry.

MARIS HOMERS

Roger Maris got the Yanks off in front with a homer in the fifth and Tommy Tresh hit a two-run triple in the seventh. Elston Howard's wrong field homer in the eighth proved to be the winning run.

Mickey Mantle pitched seven innings and got the victory for the Yanks over the White Sox. Al Kaline started the Tigers' fifth inning with a double and Bill Roman's solo homer in the seventh for the Tigers. An error helped the Tigers to their first two runs in the sixth.

Harmon Killebrew's 39th homer of the season, a two-run shot in the third, opened the Twins' 5-4 lead that held up until the seventh, when the Tigers tied it up. Bob Tillman's sacrifice fly got the tying run home. In the Minnesota half of the inning, Rich Rollins hit a fly to right field that Lee Thomas lost in the sun. It dropped for a triple and drove home Zoilo Versalles with the winning run.

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARTER, Sports Editor

With the major league racer tighter than an 1874 dowager's corset, baseball buffs who back their favorites with the lettuce of the realm are developing the twitches.

Those who follow the fortunes of Colonel Yogi Berra's Yankee Cavalry are bitten with a nail-biting plague. Downcast Dodger fans are crouched behind their schuyers of nails in the Brooklyn pubs and bistros. Their coast supporters are quiet and hoping for a stretch run that will surge them back into flag contention.

At the present rate of pace the leaders in both circuits will be banana-bunched when they turn the pole to head into the gallop for the wire.

The Yankees, Orioles and White Sox have been playing winning ball in the American League since the all-star intermission, but the Los Angeles Angels, heretofore the poor folks of Chavez Ravine, have played better than anybody.

In fact had Bill Rigney somehow managed to get cramped up a little earlier there might have been a coast-to-coast world series—between Los Angeles and Philadelphia.

On May 1st when the National League was still wet behind the ears, the Philadelphia Phillies boasted a modest one-game lead over the San Francisco Giants. It was interesting and exciting, especially to Phillie fans to see this young squad showing their spikes to the strong contenders from the west.

But it proved no spring gambol for the lambs from Pennsylvania's biggest city. By the time the club turned the August corner the Phils had a five-game lead on the Giants which was enough to send Phillies' fans scurrying in all directions readying for the turmoil of a world series.

There are those who will dispute this observation, but as a buff who is inclined towards the Dodgers, I imagine a lot of fellow "Bums" have wearied of waiting for the Flatbush Faithful expatriates to get interested in baseball and for the Giants to display their alleged muscle.

So you cannot blame Dodgers' addicts if they remain loyal to the east and switch affection to the Phillies. And they could have something to cheer about for unless somebody like Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, or Milwaukee gets Canadian and wins about 15 straight, said Philadelphia may find itself suddenly blasted into the weichtcess of a world series.

On the other side of the baseball fence who would have thought when the training camp Arabs quietly folded their tents and fled into the northern nights, that it would be the Los Angeles Angels and not the Dodgers who would keep sunny California baseball fans infermated?

The Angels have won seven straight from Cleveland, six straight from Minnesota and three of their last four starts from the Chicago White Sox. A check of the schedule reveals they have eight dates with Baltimore seven with the Yankees and three with the White Sox which is very much welcomed by the Chisox Senor Lopez.

For the Angels their halos blistered with confidence, have been raiding the lairs of the top three, Yankees, Orioles and White Sox with astounding success. True, they've eleven games off the pace but they're having a heluva lot of fun and playing baseball in the bargain.

And so, the baseball mobs, accustomed to the familiar clusters at the top of the major loops, and impatient for the breakaway by one or two, to them what happens and amusing themselves with individual antics until the majors reach the stretch checkpoints. Sometimes the stretch is long, sometimes short, but there's plenty of evidence that this one, in each major league, will be a dilly.

Aussies Hold Reunion

MONTREAL (CP)—The five members of the Australian Davis Cup team, whose travels have taken them some 12,000 miles from home, are holding a reunion at the Canadian open tennis championships.

Their meeting place, as in the case in most tournaments, is near the tail-end of the draw for the men's singles event. All five were reunited in the usual spot Thursday with just one non Australian crashing the party.

Only Whitney Reed of Alameda, Calif., has survived the Aussie blitz and he is expected to receive his walking papers today when he meets Fred Stolle in the quarter-finals. The other contest matches Aussies Roy Emerson and John Newcombe.

The fourth and fifth members of the Australian Davis Cup team, Davidson and Tony Roche, reached the semi-finals Thursday while Emerson gave a terse cake-walking through the third round.

ROCHON OUSTED

Emerson ousted Andy Lloyd of Shreveport, La., 6-4, 6-3, 6-2, and Stolle breezed past Ed Rochon, Newcombe knocked out Canada's last hope, Vancouver's Reider Getz, in straight sets, 7-5, 6-3, 6-3.

Juniors Defeat Lombanks 3-1

By ROBERT SNEFIELLA

Led by the hitting of Stu Muirhead and the pitching of Bobby Ethier, the Elks Juniors drew first blood in the B. and D. Softball loop's best of seven finals, with a 3-1 victory over Tweed Lombanks. The game was played before a capacity crowd at the C.N.R.A. last night.

Neither the time nor the place for the second game has been decided upon.

The Juniors scored once in the first frame and again in the third, to take an early 2-0 lead. Tweed came back in the fourth with their lone run to make it close all the way to the wire. The victors added the final run of the game in the seventh.

Ethier was touched for only four hits in going the route. He struck out nine and did not walk a man.

Rich Mercon was tagged for seven hits in the seven innings he worked on the mound. Blaine Hanley relieved him in the last of the seventh frame and struck out the last four batters to face him.

Wins two out in the fifth inning, Muirhead hit a double into centre field. Mike Chatland obliged him and singled him home.

Ethier struck out the side in the third frame.

Bob Moore got to first on a Tweed error in the third. Muir head then hit a tremendous triple to score him, but was left stranded when Chatland popped up to end the inning.

In the fourth D. LeSage reached second on a single, and a throwing error by the Juniors. A line single by Garry Gorr scored him, but Ethier got himself out of further trouble by forcing the next batters to ground out. Tweed managed only a scratch single in the next five innings.

Morton relieved nine men in a row before running into difficulties in the seventh. Soule led off with a one bigger. The Tweed first baseman dropped the ball, and as he scrambled for it he ran into Soule who was turning first, so Morton was allowed to go to second. Bob Boyle hit a sacrifice fly, advancing him to third.

An out later Stu Malloy lined a single to score Soule. Bob Ethier also smashed a single to advance Malloy to third. Morton was taken out and Healey sent in to put out the fire. He struck out the last man to face him in the seventh and whiffed the side in the eighth.

Muirhead, with his double and triple and Ethier with two singles, headed the Junior attack. Soule Madoy, and Chatland accounted for the other Junior safeties.

Don LeSage collected two hits for the losers, while Gorr and B. Sherrett each had the others.

Dave Lewis, Gerry Hill and Bill Hill shared mound duties for Shannonville. They struck out three, walked one and allowed eleven hits.

Foxboro took a 2-0 lead in the second inning on five hits and a sacrifice only to have Shannonville score once in the third and then take the lead in the fourth scoring three runs on three successive walks, a single by Gerry Hill and an error.

Riders Open Against Argos Tonight

—Cats, Als Tomorrow

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

One of the more intriguing questions being asked as the Eastern Foot b a l l Conference launches regular-season play is whether Russ Jackson, Ottawa Rough Riders' quarterback, is really that good.

It won't be answered in a single game but there should at least be a hint as Rough Riders open in Toronto against the revitalized Argonauts tonight.

Jackson was chosen as all-star quarterback in the East last season although his club finished second to Hamilton Tiger-Cats, who went on to win the Grey Cup.

He also became the first native Canadian to be chosen Canada's top football player.

Some sceptics say it was just a flash in the pan. But one man who disagrees is Nobby Wirkowski, Argos' coach and a pretty good quarterback himself a few years ago.

"I just think Jackson arrived last year and will go on from there. He looks just as good to me."

COULD BE BEST

If Wirkowski is right, Riders may be tickled for first place, although Tiger-Cats who open at home Saturday night against Montreal Alouettes, would appear to be just about as strong as they were last year.

Both Big Four openers will be televised, with tonight's Toronto-Ottawa game on the CTV network and Saturday's Hamilton-Montreal encounter on the CBC.

However, a couple of injuries may have a bearing on the season opener at Toronto. Gene Vaughan, the talented guard, is out with a hairline fracture of the leg and won't play until Ottawa meets Hamilton Aug. 14, and Ernie White, the speedy ball, is on the 30-day injury list.

Argos, with Jackie Parker as starting quarterback and Karl Stevens as backup, have since the departure of Sandy Stevens, figure to be stronger than last season when they finished last in the four - team league.

ALS HAVE INJURIES

Injuries may also have an effect on Montreal's opening performances. Flanker Heco Poliziana will be out for two months with torn knee ligaments and coach Jim Trimble has had to recall centre Ross Buckle.

Quarterback is also Trimble's problem spot. He's going with rookies George Bork, a passing wizard from Northern Illinois and Peter Cole, a smoothie at running a ground attack.

Streets, with Bernie Faloney as first-string quarterback and Frank Cosentino ready to take over, are solid offensively, especially since the incomparable Hal Patterson decided to play another season at end. But they miss the hard running of Jim Pace and the work at centre of Ron Ray, who has retired.

At ever, Hamilton will be the team to watch in Canadian, particularly with Angelo Mosca getting his citizenship Thursday

In the Bantam City League playdowns last night Barriaces defeated Jaycees by a 7-6 score.

R. Wark pitched a three-hitter for the winners. His catcher was B. Windsor. John Holgate, D. Atkinson and P. Goodfellow gave up four hits in the losing cause.

For Barriaces Windsor and Ling each had a safety.

Holgate, D. MacKay and A. Lupperstette hit one baggers for Jaycees.

From all indications the series will be a hard fought one. The second of the best-of-three finals will be held in Parkdale on Aug. 13th at 8.15 p.m.

RETAINS LEAD

CHICOUTIMI, Que. (CP)—Andre Dhaene of Belgium retained his 58-second lead over Poland's Antoni Palka for the third straight day Thursday after the 13th lap of Le Tour du St. Laurent bicycle race. Both Dhaene and Palka were among the wave of 50 riders that finished three seconds behind Kurt Schatelbauer of Austria, Eddy Beugels of Holland and Herbertwilde of Germany, who placed first, second and third.

Stoneham Denies Reports

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Horace Stoneham, owner of San Francisco Giants, denied Thursday reports that he plans to fire Alvin Dark as manager.

Stoneham denied "all reports that a managerial change is contemplated."

At the same time, he said he feels that Dark's reply to a New York newspaper story quoting the manager as downgrading the ability and intelligence of Negro and Latin American players "has been very generally accepted."

Stoneham called the story "exaggerated and distorted."

"It is evident that all our players support Alvin strongly. His response pleases me greatly, and I believe that in that spirit they can go on to win the pennant."

Meet Larks Tomorrow

Tough Tigers Confident But Not Cocky

HAMILTON (CP)—A familiar ailment plagues Hamilton Tiger-Cats as they open their defence of the Grey Cup they won last November—a hole in their offensive backfield.

It's the same weakness that limited the Ticats to a mediocre 3-4 record in the first half of the 1963 season. Then they acquired Jim Pace from New York Giants and Art Baker from Buffalo Bills and they haven't lost a league game since.

Baker is back this season, along with a vastly improved Willie Bethea. But Pace, whom coach Ralph Sazio was counting on as Baker's partner in a two-fullback formation, spent only a week in training camp before returning home for surgery on an injured foot. He isn't expected back.

The hole could be filled by a late cut from Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League. Tom Boris took Pace's spot in the lineup in an exhibition game against Edmonton and fitted well in coach Sazio's system.

FAZLNEY STILL AROUND

Hamilton's assets includes the incomparable Bernie Faloney pitching to Hal Patterson, Dave Vih,.Tommy Grant and Garney Henley, the most formidable array of receivers in the East bolstered by rookie Stan Crisson from Queen's University to spell the 31-year-old Patterson at offensive end.

Their solid defensive back-field — Henley, Don Sutherin, Joe Zuger, Steve Hmiel and Ralph Goldstone—has been bolstered by newcomer Charlie Calhoun, who also supplements Zuger as a punter.

Rookie Ed Versprille is expected to join linebackers Bobby Kuntz and Garney Kaven with John Cimba, the only new Canadian, in reserve.

Bobby Jack Oliver, acquired from Montreal Alouettes in w trade for Bob Minihan, adds even more ferocity to the fearsome defensive line of all-stars Angelo Mosca and John Barrow, Gene Ceppetelli, and Pete Neumann. Neumann's partner at defensive end has not yet been chosen.

CURETON RETIRES

On the offensive line, all-star guard Hardiman Cureton has been shifted to tackle to fill in for Bob Whitlow, who has retired. But Ellison Kelly, another all-star, will be back along with Ken Kilrea, Brooks Naggenl, Joe Pikula and Chet Miksza from last year's champions.

Behind the 32-year-old Faloney there is still the agile Frank Cosentino, second only to Russ Jackson of Ottawa among home - bred quarterbacks, with Zuger also capable of shifting from the defensive squad.

The Tiger-Cats are a popular choice to repeat their first-place finish. But Sazio declines to join the optimistic chorus.

"People say we are going to win easily. It just doe-n't make sense. We only ended up two points ahead of Ottawa last season," he c a u t i o n s, tactfully omitting mention of Hamilton's 45-0 annihilation of the Riders that sent the Ticats into the Canadian final.

INVESTS OVERSEAS

For the years 1947 to 1962, Australia's total overseas investments amounted to more than $3,500,000,000.

CNE Test Swim Woman Is Lone Finisher

TORONTO (CP)—Mary Lou Whitwill, 22, of Ottawa, outlasted four male swimmers to become the only finisher in the 10-mile qualifying test for the 25-mile Canadian National Exhibition - sponsored marathon swim across Lake Ontario Aug. 20-21.

Her time of five hours 18 minutes was outside the five-hour qualifying mark, but organizers decided to allow her to join the 22 accepted entries for the swim.

The four men who didn't finish the swim from Port Credit to the CNE waterfront were Bill Sparenberg, 30, of Chatham, Bruce Hope, 38, of Toronto, E. G. Pattison, 26, of Ottawa and Bob Branch 30, of Oshawa.

The trial was arranged to decide which of the lesser-known competitors should be given a shot at the $7,000 first-place prize. Prize money for the swim totals $17,300.

This year's marathon marks the revival of cross-lake swims and is the first since 1957 when a mass assault was staged, but no one reached the Toronto shoreline.

Marilyn Bell of Toronto was the first to conquer the lake in 1954. Four others have made it. They were Brenda Fisher of England, John Jeremey of Toronto, 37-year-old Bill Sadlo of New York, and Jim Woods of Orlando, Fla. Woods was the last to make it, in 1957. He also holds the record—18 hours 33 minutes.

DEADLOCK REMAINS

MONTREAL (CP) — Defending champions British Columbia and Ontario both undefeated so far, r e m a i n e d deadlocked Thursday in the fight for the Canadian cricket championship. On their performances, it seems certain they would be the teams facing each other in Saturday's deciding match. B.C. defeated Alberta 91 for two wickets to Alberta's all out for 90 Thursday while Ontario downed Quebec 130-108. In the other match, Saskatchewan and Manitoba played to a draw.

Leaf Tosser Four-Hits Homers Vees

If Toronto Maple Leafs could pitch John Anderson every day they might be better off than fifth place in the International League.

The Toronto righthander tossed a five-hit shutout against Richmond Thursday night and belted a three-run homer as the Leafs socked the Virginians 9-0. Anderson fanned four and didn't issue a walk in downing the sixth-place Vees.

Syracuse Chiefs held on to top spot in the loop with a 2-0 victory over the last-place Atlanta Crackers, Jacksonville Suns stayed in second with a 6-3 margin over Rochester Red Wings and Columbus Jets, in seventh place, downed third-place Buffalo Bisons 4-2 in other contests.

Bill Faul scattered four hits for the Syracuse shutout. John Sullivan's homer in the fifth provided all the margin he needed.

Jerry Walker started for the Suns, working with a patched-up lineup that saw catcher Bob Lipski playing right field in a series of shifts to fill in for injured centre fielder Johnny Lewis, but was pulled in the sixth after Gino Cimoli belted a solo homer for Rochester.

GOLF TEAM NAMED

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer were picked Thursday to represent the United States in the 1964 Canada Cup matches at Maui, Hawaii, Dec. 3-6. Nicklaus and Palmer won the team title and Nicklaus the individual crown in the 1963 matches at Paris. Two professionals from each of the 24 countries making up the international Golf Association will compete in the tournament.

Dominion Rifle Shoot

Woman Sparks Team Win

CONNAUGHT RANGES, Ont. (CP)—The British and Canadian rifle teams have engaged in some close duels in recent years, but the Canadian won the latest one in convincing fashion—led by a woman.

Mrs. Jean McKeever, a 34-year-old widow from Calgary, scored 49 of a possible 50 points Thursday in each of the three rounds fired from 500, 500 and 600 yards at the army's rifle range near Ottawa, for a 147 total, tops in the Canada Cup match.

Mrs. McKeever, who works as a bookkeeper to support her family of four children, has been making a habit of showing up her male rivals at the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association matches.

Wednesday she won the Alexander of Tunis match, one of the toughest in the week-long competitions, by firing nine straight bullseyes from 300 yards to win a shoot-off with four men, including an Olympic gold medallist and a winner of the Queen's Medal at the Commonwealth championships at Bisley, England.

Lt. Cmdr. Alan Reid of Ottawa scored 145 points Thursday, second highest total for the crack Canadian team which racked up 1,145 of a possible 1,200 points—one of the highest totals in the history of the Canada Cup match—to beat the British by a convincing 27 points. The Australians were third in the three-team match with a 1,117 total, one point behind the British.

A Canadian cadet team compiled Canada's sweep over the British by winning the Governor General's Veheal Faraday match. The cadets had a much tougher time than the senior team, winning by only one point in the five-round match fired from 300, 500 and 600 yards. The Canadians scored 736 of a possible 800 points.

Beats Phillies 2-1

7-11 Combo Proves A Natural For Farrell

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

What comes after 10? Eleven.

Even for Dick Farrell.

Farrell, however, had to add things up a dozen times before it worked out that way Thursday night, ending a seven-week famine by winning his first game since June 16 as Houston Colts defeated National League leading Philadelphia Phillies 2-1.

"I couldn't help wondering if it would ever come," said Farrell, who was the first pitcher in the majors to win 10 games this season and threatened to be the last to win 11. In between his 10th and 11th victories were 11 tries and six losses.

Farrell, who had a brilliant 10-1 record June 16, said he didn't think he was pressing at any time and hadn't thought about a 20-victory season.

"When I got 10, I just thought of 11," he said. "I'm thinking now of 12.

"But I hope it's not as long coming as 11 was."

A 30-year-old righthander who started his major league career with the Phillies and moved on to Los Angeles before winding up at Houston in the expansion draft, Farrell had been primarily a reliever until the Colts began to look him as a starter.

WAS A 20-GAME LOSER

He's never been close to the 20-win mark but he's been inside the 20-loss circle. In his first full year as a starter, Farrell was 10-20 in 1962, then turned around last year and came through with a 16-13 record.

Farrell has an 11-7 record now that the famine's ended and has an outside chance to win 20.

Farrell's victory trimmed the Phillies' edge to 1½ games over second place San Francisco Giants, who were not scheduled.

Third-place Cincinnati Reds walloped Milwaukee Braves 9-3 with a 15-hit attack and closed to within four games of the top. Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-1 and St. Louis Cardinals defeated Chicago Cubs 5-3.

Farrell allowed only four hits before he was relieved in the ninth after Wes Covington doubled. Gus Triandos' single produced a run and brought in Jim Owens, who finally nailed Farrell's 11th by getting Tony Taylor to hit into a game-ending doubleplay.

The Colts scored their runs in the fourth against Chris Short, 10-6, on a triple by Al Spangler, Nellie Fox' double, a single by Walt Bond and Bob Aspromonte's sacrifice fly.

Deron Johnson and Frank Robinson produced most of the fireworks for the Reds, each collecting a triple, double and single. Vada Pinson chipped in with a homer and triggered a four-run uprising against reliever Warren Spahn in the seventh with a bunt single.

Hank Aaron was the Braves' attack, hitting a three-run homer.

Bill Mazeroski drove in three runs with a double and a single for the Pirates while Bob Friend, 10-11, kept nine Dodger hits well scattered. Consecutive triples by Manny Mota and Donn Clendenon in the fifth produced the other Pittsburgh run.

Tommy Davis stroked three singles for the Dodgers, extending his hitting streak to 13 games and lifted his average to .291.

Bill White doubled home two runs and Dick Groat drove in a pair with two singles for the Cardinals. Bob Gibson went 8 2-3 innings but came out in the ninth. The Cubs scored one run and loaded the bases but Barney Schultz struck out Ernie Banks to end it.

The victory, squaring Gibson's record at 9-9, was his first since July 19.

CANADIENS SET DATE

MONTREAL (CP) — General manager Sam Pollock of Montreal Canadiens announced Thursday that the National Hockey League club will open its fall training camp at Forum Sept. 15. Pollock also announced that Cleveland Barons of the American League and Ghams Knights of the Central Professional League will hold their training camps here at the same time.

She Liked Horses' Names, Wins $14,878

DETROIT (AP)—A mother of two, attending the races for the first time and admitted free since it was ladies day, was one of the three $14,878.90 winners of the twin doubles at Detroit Race Course Thursday.

Mrs. Jacquelyn Beattie, 23-year-old waitress, went to the races with her aunt, Mrs. Anna Bailey. Each hit the TD. The third winner did not put in an appearance.

Mrs Beattie, wife of a factory worker and mother of two children, said she picked the winning horses in the 3-3-2-6 combo "because I liked their names best."

They were Jaunty Lass, $10.20, Ima Mistake, $26.20, Dink's Boy, $10.60, and Passpartout, $13.

The winner of Wednesday's $37,340.20 TD waited until Thursday to collect. His identity was not disclosed. The pot, topping the previous Michigan record of $11,303.90, was accumulated on I Regret, $53.40, Bo Bo Girl, $16.80, Speedin West, $4.20, and Indian Nation, $18.

BEETLE MUSIC

HADDENHAM, England (CP) — For weeks the century-old organ at the parish church in this Buckinghamshire town had been playing out of tune. Now the reason has been discovered—dead beetles were blocking some of the pipes.

The Tracks

FORT ERIE (CP) — Jim Fitzsimmons, a quiet Irishman from Calgary, won two more races at Fort Erie Thursday, boosting his leading rider total to 18 for the meeting.

Fitzsimmons had an easy time of it while riding Cibolette to victory in the featured sixth race, but in the seventh it took all of his experience to bring Illustrator home on top.

Cibolette, owned by J. Louis Levesque, shot to the lead in the seven-horse field and led throughout the one-mile grass feature.

Odd-on choice of the 9,507 fans, Cibolette returned $3, $2.40 and $2.50.

Illustrator, a recent invader from Maryland, had to come on the outside of horses to grab Chief Geronimo and Ramunteho at the wire. Illustrator, owned by Ed Seedhouse of Toronto, paid $10.90.

Apprentice Noel Turcotte also rode two winners—the third and fifth races.

'Bottomless' Soccer Star Acquitted

SYDNEY (Reuters) — An Australian football player, John Lane, 24, who kept playing after he lost his shorts, was charged in court Thursday with offensive behavior.

A police constable said he saw the accused waving his shorts over his head and said he considered the played behaved offensively by continuing to play without them on.

Lane testified his shorts were badly torn in a tackle.

The player said that at a crucial moment the ball came toward him and he let his shorts drop. They tripped him and he stopped and waved them at his coach in the sideline indicating he wanted a new pair.

He told the court the accepted thing in Australian rules football was that a player did not stop for anything.

He pleaded not guilty and the magistrate dismissed the charge and ordered Lane to pay £1.

The judge said the loss of shorts could be regarded as one of the game's hazards.

Tosses 49 Horseshoe Ringers

GREENVILLE, Ohio (AP)—Top qualifying scorer Carl Steinfeldt of Rochester, N.Y., narrowly missed the second perfect game ever recorded in the annual world horseshoes pitching championships Thursday night, tossing 49 ringers in 50 tries.

The sensational performance helped Steinfeldt to one of his triumphs as he and four others racked up 6-0 records on opening day of the 36-man round robin for the 1964 crown.

Ray Martin of Philo, Ill., Glen Henton of Makoqueta, Iowa, Elmer Hohl of Wellesley, Ont., and Paul Laitray of St Louis also sported 6-0 records going into the second day of championship play.

Bird Banding Is Opposed By Society

By ALAN WALKER

LONDON (CP) — A terrified kingfisher, snagged by the band on his leg, hangs upside down from a thorn tree and faces a lingering death.

This is one of many incidents condemned by a new organization against banding of birds, widely practised in Britain by amateur and professional naturalists.

Groups militantly guarding the rights of animals are old stuff here. The League Against Cruel Sports, the hunt saboteurs association and the anti-vivisection and animal defence society are widely known and widely sneered at.

"There are a lot of crank outfits," Josephine Parker, the new bird group's honorary secretary, said in an interview. "but we're not."

Nancy Price, 84 - year - old former actress and nature writer, started the campaign against bird banding in her privately printed magazine Pedlar's Pack, a journal devoted to animals and particularly to birds. In a speech Jan 17, Miss Price spoke of birds as "creatures way above all forms of life."

Pedlar's Pack has about 2,000 subscribers, about 30 of whom are in Canada. These people make up nearly all the supporters of the anti - banding group.

NEUROTIC BIRDS

A leaflet distributed with Pedlar's Pack is titled Freedom Fettered. It tells ghastly tales of unnamed banders who reputedly snatch up nestlings, clamp heavy metal rings on their quivering legs and finally release them, after which, says Miss Price, the birds may become neurotic and probably will meet early death.

She argues that clumsy naturalists may injure birds physically or mentally during banding; that small legs inevitably grow, making the bands pinch and possibly causing gangrene; that bands may catch on branches, causing the birds to starve to death; and that some bands are as heavy to a bird as a three-pound leg iron would be to a man, giving the bird great problems in flying straight.

Naturalists deny banding is harmful and say it is valuable in discovering birds' feeding habits, life spans and migration routes.

Miss Price insists that banding, besides causing harm, is useless because "recovery rates for . . . small birds can be as low as two per Thousand."

In her long lifetime Miss Price has criticized shooting birds for sport; unlimited use of insecticides which spoil birds' food; force - feeding of geese to enlarge their livers—producing the food delicacy pate de fois gras; and even mass breeding of chickens for food.

One group is definitely not impressed by Miss Price's writings and her Order of the British Empire. It is the British Trust for Ornithology, which organizes and controls nearly all bird banding in Britain. Its research officer, Robert Spencer, 41, said in an interview that Miss Price's organization is working with "a number of fundamental misconceptions."

DENIES CLAIMS

As to the ring weight, spencer said Miss Price's figures are wrong. "The bands weigh .005 grams, not .005 ounces as she says.

"And on top of that, the physiological makeup of a human is much different than that of a bird. Birds can carry heavier weights in proportion to their size than a man can, and birds are used to sudden changes in weight. An eight-ounce bird often eats a cater pillar for dinner that weighs one ounce."

Band size? Spencer said it was unlikely that a bird could be snagged no matter what the size of the band, and added: "The legs of young birds are not necessarily much smaller than those of the adult bird. As a matter of fact, youth - birds' legs are often a bit fatter than they will be when they grow up."

And recovery rates are "quite sufficient" for banding to serve its purpose.

The BTO trains its banders carefully and practically all of the 375,000 bandings in Britain last year were done under BTO auspices. Some of the disparity between the BTO position and Miss Price's may lie in the fact that private banding is legal but Spencer said banders who are both independent and careless are few and far between.

"We have recommended legislation against these few people," Spencer said, "and Miss Price recommends the same legislation.

"I wish she had picked on the right people."

TRUDY

"I've been meaning to call you sooner, Mother—but I couldn't seem to find the time to do it."

BAD BOY

LET'S TALK SENSE ABOUT SERVICE

CONTRARY TO WHAT YOU MAY HAVE HEARD, THE BAD BOY HAS, AND WILL ALWAYS MAINTAIN EXPERT FACTORY SERVICE ON APPLIANCES.

WHAT IS FACTORY SERVICE?

Factory Service means that your appliances are serviced by technicians who are experts in their respective fields whether it be refrigeration, laundry equipment, ranges, televisions, stereos, etc.

These servicemen are trained by the manufacturers after their merits have been thoroughly investigated. They must pass rigid qualifications to meet the high standards set by brand name manufacturers before they are authorized to be a factory service centre in our community. Then they must stock an ample supply of parts and replacement products for all conceivable repair jobs. Customer satisfaction is a hard and fast rule and any dealer risks losing his recognized franchise if he cannot live up to these standards.

It is the policy of the Bad Boy NOT to have one man servicing all phases of appliances and electronic repair and who is generally known as a "Jack-of-All-Trades . . . ". Instead Bad Boy retains the services of manufacturer's personally selected authorized service technicians. This way, you the customer is assured of having a man who is familiar with the appliance or TV set and can readily solve and eliminate your repair problems.

Listed Below are a Few Brand Name Appliances We Sell And The Authorized Factory Depots in Our Area Who Service Them.

Erhard House Draws Fire

BONN (AP)—In his new official residence West German Chancellor Ludwig Erhard is going to live like a bee on a honeycomb, or maybe like a mole in a hole. On the other hand,- he will have big glass-walled reception rooms and a broad terrace overlooking the Rhine.

It all depends on your point of view.

The chancellor's $500,000 bungalow has been a target of political snipers for the last six months. Now a few reporters have been allowed to look it over for the first time. The political shooting has grown even hotter, but anyone with a real gun will be wasting his time: the chancellor's private rooms have no windows.

"He doesn't want anyone to see him in his pyjamas," one official explained.

It's a flat-roofed, one storey house of glass and yellow brick set among tall trees on the lawn of the Palais Schaumburg, the chancellor's office. With luck, Erhard will be able to move in by October.

SMALL SWIMMING POOL

The house consists of two squares that touch each other at one corner, like a V.

The smaller, yellow brick square is 66 feet on each side. It contains an even smaller square — eight rather boxy rooms for the chancellor and his wife Loelsie, built around a little swimming pool.

The swimming pool measures only 10 feet by 20 feet. One newspaper suggested that Erhard, known in Germany as Der Dicke (the Fat One) might flood the place every time he took a dip.

The roof is open over the pool, giving the only natural light in that part of the house.

"Erhard will be living like a mole!" read the top headline in Hildesheimg, West Germany's most widely-read paper.

"A honeycomb," commented Der Mittag at Duesseldorf. "Ludwig Erhard is the father of the economic miracle. As chancellor he deserves another kind of house. A better one."

COST OF HOME

Before reporters were allowed a look, the attacks had been levelled at the cost of the work. Erhard's "economic miracle" is based on holding the line against high prices, rising wages and mounting government expenditure. Was it holding the line, the papers asked, to spend all that money on a new official residence?

Erhard countered indignantly that his private rooms would occupy no more space than is normal under the public housing laws.

This is true of the strictly private quarters, but the other part of the house—the larger, glass-walled square—is considerably bigger. It measures 80 feet on each side. This will be as big and open looking as the private rooms are small and fortress-like.

This part of the house is officially designated as being for his public duties.

H. S. in Fort Lauderdale Now Newest in Education

By G. K. HODENFIELD

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP)—Nova High School is one of a kind, a unique demonstration model of the newest to be found in American public education today.

Start with the 11-month, 220-day school year, from Sept. 1 to July 30. In four years at Nova a student gets the equivalent of six years in a traditional school.

And the longer school day, from 9 a.m. to 3:45 p.m., with optional periods that can stretch it from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., and the longer class period. 70 minutes instead of the usual 50 or 55.

Add this rigorous academic program: Every student every year, is required to take English, mathematics, social science, physical science, a foreign language, physical education, and an elective from one of the many technical science courses available.

Add a non-graded program where each student proceeds at his own best pace. No one ever fails, no one ever has to repeat a full year's work. The limit is placed on how fast and how far the brightest students can go.

NO HOMEWORK

And throw out some things: The gymnasium designed mainly for athletics; the traditional school library, the big kitchen and cafeteria, students eating their lunches or eat at school snack bars which are expected to make $6,000 profit this year) and a big gymnasium. We put them all into one basic product—education.

"Our costs per pupil for operations are within a couple of dollars of other country high schools."

Attendance at Nova is voluntary but there are nearly 1,000 applicants for the 350 places open in Grade 7 this fall. Nova opened its doors last September to 1,465 students in Grades 7 through 12. The 12th grade will be added this year and the 13th in 1965.

"You couldn't get me back in a regular high school after this," says Inmarie Bocchino, a 15-year-old 10th-grader. "I'm a poor student in math and I have a radio station, a weather station, movable wall facilities, the latest and newest need in all three subjects."

War Still Being Refought On Some Hollywood Lots

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — All around the Hollywood studios television actors are playing their scenes for laughs. But on the back lots of NBC and Universal-Revue, the war still is being refought.

Combat, NBC's U.S. Army drama, soon will start its third season battling from the Normandy beachheads to the Rhine, a more leisurely trip than the real fighting men made some 20 years back. At Revue, a portion of the Battle of the Bulge is being recreated on the banks of a small artificial lake.

The show is called Operation Grief based on a real episode of the war when specially-trained, English-speaking German saboteurs were dressed in American uniforms and sent behind the Allied lines to make serious mischief. It will be one program of NBC's returning suspense Theatre anthology series Thursday nights.

Robert Goulet, the handsome young Canadian baritone who is making his TV acting debut in the episode, said: "I've wanted to do one of these things for a long time, just for a change. Of course, I'll always sing, but a change of pace is good. We've been looking for a property with dramatic possibilities for some time, and when this came along I grabbed the chance."

Goulet will be in his usual smooth - shaven, suave singing personality often during the season, guest starring on assorted musical and variety shows, including those of Andy Williams and Ed Sullivan.

There's also that CBS Goulet special, taped last February, which will be seen in late November as the network's deal with CBS to develop a series format aimed at the 1965-66 season for him.

Filming of Stage Plays Not Good Idea Says Director

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The filming of stage plays, such as the upcoming Hamlet with Richard Burton, is not such a good idea, says British actor-director John Gielgud.

Others think so. Warner Brothers has recorded the Boston performance on tape, just as it was played at the Lunt-Fontanne Theatre in New York, and will show it four times September 23 and 24 in theatres throughout North America. Now there is talk that Laurence Olivier's Othello on the London stage will last the same treatment.

Even though he directed Burton in Hamlet, Gielgud says: "I think it's a bad thing to film stage plays as is, except for a historical record. The two techniques are entirely different and one shouldn't be mixed with the other."

The actor admits that he has recently realized the difference. A film is his own work is concerned. The result is an upturn of his film career.

"I was always trying too hard in films," says Gielgud, who has appeared in scores of plays and only 18 films. "Stage people are inclined to attempt too much in films, and that was my error. Film technique is something quite different. It is more of a simplification.

"I like performing in his second Hollywood film. The first was Julius Caesar. He is directing a British actor contemplating suicide in Tony Richardson's satire of Hollywood, The Loved One. One of the reasons Gielgud, 60, is delighted with the role: It allows him to wear modern dress.

"FOR THOSE WHO THINK YOUNG"

It's youth's turn to star in "For Those Who Think Young" showing today and Saturday at the Belle Theatre, through United Artists release. In Technicolor and Technicope, the teen-themed, tune-filled comedy presents a starring cast made up of America's newest, liveliest, dramatic and musical talent.

James Darren stars as a millionaire college playboy who chases campus queen Pamela Tiffin until she catches him! Co-starring are Paul Lynde, Tina Louise, Bob Denver, Robert Middleton, Nancy Sinatra, Claudia Martin, Ellen McRae and comedian Woody Woodbury.

Though the accent is on youth, the film was made for full family enjoyment with the emphasis on all-around entertainment. Not only does it introduce new talent, but it also has the newest ingredients of popular interest. One of these is surfing and the film has plenty of it as the girls frolic on the beach in the newest swim suits and the boys follow the girls with the oddest thoughts.

Hugh Benson produced the motion, which was directed by Leslie Martinson at a fast pace for those two-a-day thing young. On the same program is a musical featurette, "Lonely Boy" starring Canada's Paul Anka.

Two complete shows tonight at 7:00 and 9:10 p.m. Saturday the shows are continuous from 1:00 p.m.

Where Your First Mistake May Be Your Last

By ALLEN SACKMANN

MOULD BAY, N.W.T. (CP)—There's a special kind of respect afforded pilots and airplanes in the frozen northland where the aircraft is a major instrument of survival.

Such pilots as Bert Burry have earned it with their ability to land a plane on rough, postage - stamp - size landing strips, their capacity for working long, tedious hours and their record of few mistakes.

"Up here, your first mistake could easily be your last," says Mr. Burry, owner of McMurray Air Services Ltd. and chief of the flyers attached to the federal government's Polar Continental Shelf Project, the scientific operation to explore and map the Arctic archipelago.

In six years of flying on the project, McMurray planes have logged more than 40,000 miles with the best of the craft, a single - engine Otter that went through the ice in 1961. No one was injured.

Bert Burry says 90 per cent of flying accidents result from pilot error and this is one of the reasons McMurray plays it close in the north.

SOMETIMES SAY NO

"Sometimes we hate to say no to the scientists but they are responsible on us and their lives are our responsibility," says George Burry, Bert's 34-year-old son who is in charge of the operation in the Arctic this year. "If there is any doubt, we usually say no."

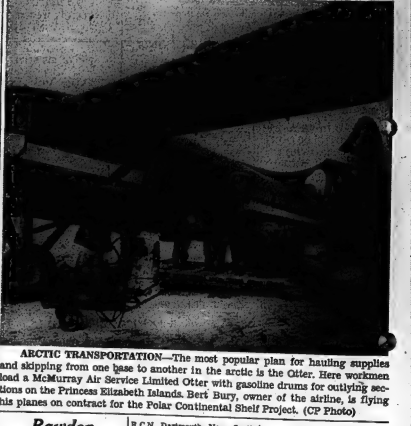
Betting ice—cause of the lost McMurray craft—is just one of the hazards faced by pilots. Fog, blizzards and white-outs (the blend of ground and sky seem to merge into a single white mass) can make flying difficult.

"We all sweat occasionally," says Bert, who now flies only when it is absolutely necessary, "especially when ice starts to form on the aircraft."

George Burry, who has been flying in the Arctic for five seasons, describes the experience as "pure boredom and moments of anxiety."

Few other places in the world can match the Arctic for sheer emptiness — rock and snow — which makes each trip boring but also makes it difficult for pilots to pick out landmarks.

Serving field camps fanning out from Mould Bay, 1,800 miles north of Edmonton, is a challenge. There are no radio aids and often the pilot must judge from the air the depth of snow banks that will support a plane's landing skis.



Before landing, the newcomer to the north is always warned: "This is going to be rough."

"You have to be both conservative and bold, more the former," George says of the northern flying. The McMurray crew, which includes a pregnant brother, James, has become more self-conscious and we won't stick our noses out like we used to."

Tomorrow: The cook is an early riser.

TOWED HOME

HALIFAX (CP)—The 44-foot longliner Sheryl Ann is being towed towards her home port of Yarmouth, N.S., by the Russian tug Slavji after she ran into trouble off the Nova Scotia coast early night. Sheryl Ann, carrying six unidentified men, had radioed that her engine had failed and she was taking on water in heavy seas.

ARCTIC TRANSPORTATION—The most popular plan for hauling supplies and skipping from one base to another in the arctic is the Otter. Here workmen load a McMurray Air Service Limited Otter with gasoline drums for outlying sections on the Princess Elizabeth Island. Little Chance Of Viet Nam War Spreading

No Chance of Meeting Between Two Factions

WASHINGTON (AP) — High U.S. authorities said today chances for a major expansion of the Vietnamese war appeared to be lessening.

They reported that there has been no sign, so far, of mass troop movements in Communist China or North Viet Nam. And they said there has been no evidence that Communist seafarces or planes are hunting targets.

President Johnson, meanwhile, had near-unanimous support from Congress to employ a flexible military response if necessary to meet any new Communist threat in Southeast Asia.

By votes of 414 to 0 and 88 to 2, respectively, the House of Representatives and Senate approved Friday a joint resolution that "approves and supports Johnson's determination "to take all necessary measures to repel any armed attack against the forces of the United States and to prevent further aggression."

UNDER MARTIAL LAW

South Viet Nam, focal point in the anti-Communist struggle, remained under virtual martial law, imposed Friday by Premier Nguyen Khanh.

Redeployment of beefed - up U.S. strength in the South Pacific continued. A squadron of supersonic jet fighters, newly arrived from the United States, dropped briefly in Hawaii, then headed for Southeast Asia.

At the United Nations, the Security Council invited both North and South Viet Nam to take part in debate on the situation.

While optimistic that the situation would continue to ease, U.S. officials did not rule out the possibility that it might take the Communists a while to digest their forces if they planned a major move.

The feeling was that the North Vietnamese were taken by surprise when U.S. planes bombed four torpedo boats and an oil refinery Wednesday as retaliation for Communist attacks on two U.S. destroyers.

The resolution passed by Congress had been requested by Johnson to show bipartisan support for his Viet Nam stance. Johnson hailed the action as a demonstration to all the world of the unity of all Americans."

And he followed up by appointing Henry Cabot Lodge, former U.S. ambassador to South Viet Nam, to rally allied capitals to acquaint leaders with the U.S. position and purposes in Southeast Asia.

UNITED NATIONS (AP)— Diplomats expressed doubt today that either North or South Viet Nam will accept invitations to take part in the UN Security Council's debate on the latest Southeast Asian crisis.

Delegates felt that both states would take the alternative choice contained in Friday's council invitations and send in memorandums giving their positions.

Two theories were advanced to support this reasoning.

1. The Red Chinese would discourage North Viet Nam's coming to the United Nations to associate with their ideological rivals, the Soviet Communists.

2. Both China and North Viet Nam might fear that broadening the UN debate would underscore their efforts to set up a new international conference on neutralizing Viet Nam.

Informed sources said Friday night that none of the 11 council members, including Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union, knew whether Communist North Viet Nam wanted to join the debate. They said South Viet Nam would confirm in only if North Viet Nam did.

The council sent out the invitations Friday as it continued debate on the North Vietnamese torpedo attacks on U.S. warships in Tonkin gulf and the U.S. counterblow.

BOTH COUNTRIES INVITED

The proposal to invite North Viet Nam was submitted by the Viet Union. The United States countered by insisting that South Viet Nam be asked also.

During Friday's council session, Communist Czechoslovakia lashed out at the U.S. retaliatory air strike against North Vietnamese installations.

Czech delegate Jiri Hajek accused the United States of "naked and brutal aggression" and "colonialism and big-stick" policies. He expressed his government's solidarity with North Viet Nam's "firm attitude."

Hajek suggested that the U.S. and had killed "Vietnamese fishermen and their wives and children." He said it did not square with U.S. delegate Adlai E. Stevenson's statement to the council on another issue four months ago that the United States disapproved of "retaliatory raids . . . by whomever and whenever."

Stevenson replied that the raids were "a relevant response to wild words" to destroy weapons and support facilities that had been used against U.S. vessels and show that armed aggression, whether in the Gulf of Tonkin or anywhere else, will not be tolerated and will not go unanswered."

Stevenson asked Czechoslovakia to influence North Viet Nam to "cease its provocations."

This Morning Planes Again Roar Over Coastal Area But This Time Guns Silent

Turks Deny Earlier Shooting But Warn They May Soon Bomb

NICOSIA (AP)—Turkish Air Force jets roared over Cyprus today in a second show of support for the embattled Turkish-Cypriot minority in Turkish Cypriot spokesman announced.

None of the planes apparently opened their guns as they swooped over the island's northeastern coast, scene of bitter fighting between Greek and Turkish-Cypriots for the past three days. However, a Turkish-Cypriot spokesman said the aircraft had been ordered to "intervene when necessary."

The Cyprus dispute veered into another crisis stage Friday after Turkish jet fighters swept over Polis, a small port in northwest Cyprus.

The Greek - Cypriot government said the jets had strafed the village, hitting an Italian cargo ship in the harbor. It said would bring a charge of aggression against Turkey before the UN Security Council and ordered the 20,000 man Greek-Cypriot national guard on a standby alert.

DENIES SHOOTING

Turkey had emphatically denied that its planes had done any shooting Friday. But it promised they would be back today on a reconnaissance. If U.S. peacemaking efforts don't show any results, the Turkish government statement warned, Turkey might bomb the island as it did the Turkish - Cypriot cause.

Greece rallied behind the Greek Cypriots, placing all the Greek armed forces on alert. In Athens, Greek military leaders went into an emergency conference to consider the military implications of the new crisis in Cyprus.

Greek Defence Minister Peter Garoufalias warned that the "unjustified aerial attack" had created "a highly dangerous situation which might lead to war."

CALL MEETING

The U.S. State Department in Cyprus described the situation as "very serious." U.S. Ambassador Taylor Belcher joined the UN commander, Kodenderra Subayya Thimayya of India, in an urgent call on President Archbishop Dr Fazil Kuchuk, leader of the Turkish Cypriot community and a strong vice-president in the Cypriot government.

The Greek-Cypriots said four U.S. - made Sabre jets had strafed Polis harbor, hitting an Italian freighter which had just taken on a load of ore. Italian freighter's St. George radioed this message to the British-owned ore mines after the incident Friday, a spokesman said.

"Safe at 1930 (7:30 p.m. after being machine gunned. Crew safe."

The Italian embassy in Nicosia said the ship had been hit. It had no case of jitters was evident in Nicosia today when the roar of jets was heard over the capital. But a British spokesman said the planes apparently were RAF jets.

Gunfire continued in the rugged mountains and along the coast north of Nicosia and Turkish - Cypriots evacuated their women and children from villages in the area. About 200 Turkish-Cypriots took refuge at an encampment of Swedish UN troops.

Since the fighting began in the rugged Pitsilia region Wednesday night, 12 Greek- and two Turkish-Cypriots have been killed and 15 Greek and 10 Turkish-Cypriots wounded, according to unofficial estimates.

WHERE ACTION IS REPORTED IN CYPRUS—The Cyprus government reported last night that four Turkish jets had strafed the northwestern coastal town of Polis, a village of about 1,000 persons. (AP Wirephoto Map)

Flag Battle Coming

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons disposed largely of federal-provincial tax - sharing measure Friday and cleared the decks for the resumption of the explosive flag battle early next week.

Second reading, approval in principle, was given to the fiscal bill, which enacts complex arrangements worked out in federal-provincial talks over the last nine months.

The arrangements will give the provinces an extra four-per cent slice of personal income taxes over the next two years. Equalization payments to poorer provinces will go up and the annual $8,000,000 "Confederation grant" to Newfoundland will be extended indefinitely.

The legislation is expected to be passed Monday or Tuesday, clearing the way for a long, intense debate on the government's resolution for a maple leaf flag.

Most Conservative MPs are pledged to fight the new flag and press for a national referendum or the withdrawal of the resolution.

With this in mind, M. T. McCutcheon (PC — Lambton-Kent) suggested Friday that the Commons revert to its normal hours, shorter than at present by 5½ hours a week.

Press Criticism Often Justified, Teachers Feel

OTTAWA (CP)—Public criticism of the press often is unjustified and based on misunderstanding, members of a group of Canadian high school teachers said in interviews here Friday.

The 38 teachers, who are attending a 13-day workshop designed to show them how to use the daily newspaper as a teaching aid, agreed that contact with newspaper men speaking at the Carleton University workshop had given them greater confidence in Canadian newspapers.

But several stressed that students should be taught to read newspapers critically and to distinguish between editorial comment and objective reporting.

James Lovekin of Scarborough, Ont., head of the history department at Scarboro's Cedarbrae Secondary School, said during a break in workshop activities that "people get as good as a press as they deserve, and I think we're getting a better one than we deserve."

Mr. Lovekin added that workshop participants had been surprised at the high level of professional independence and responsibility" exhibited by individual newspaper men who spoke to them.

"We're also impressed by the fact that the press is the last medium left to communicate between people working in technical fields and the general public."

He said newspaper reporters, specializing in such fields as medicine, science and education were "doing a wonderful job in popular education."

A Winnipeg English teacher, Henri Enns of General Wolfe Junior High School, said he was convinced by workshop discussions that much broader use of newspapers should be made by schools.

"I came here with the idea that newspapers could be used as aids in teaching such subjects as current affairs. But now I think that the newspaper could well become a separate subject in secondary schools."

Mrs. Phyllis Flewwelling of Edmonton, a Grade 9 social studies teacher and school librarian at McCauley Junior High School, said the workshop had inspired her to plan a "crash program" of newspaper education for her students this fall.

"I want to make a complete study of the newspaper at the beginning of the term, taking perhaps two weeks to introduce my students to the various sections of newspapers.

"I plan to point out, for example, the difference between the editorial section, the international news pages, provincial pages, and so on—and show students how to use the paper for their studies."

The workshop, which is under the direction of Carleton University's dean of students Harrell A. Wendt, is sponsored by the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association.

Its program of discussions and talks by prominent newspaper men and educationists continues until Aug. 14.

Living Costs At Record

OTTAWA (CP)—Living costs in Canada rose to a record high in June mainly as a result of a sharp increase in food prices, the bureau of statistics said Friday.

The consumer price index, based on 1949 prices equalling 100, increased by nine-tenths of a point to 136.2 at July 1 from 135.3 a month earlier.

This means that the index has risen two points since Jan. 1 when it stood at 134.2. It also is up by 3.7 points from the July 1, 1963, index of 132.5.

While living costs moved ahead in June, industrial wages and salaries also were on the increase.

The index of average industrial wages and salaries at June 1—latest date available —was 202.0, compared with 201.0 a month earlier and 194.4 a year earlier.

The wage index also is based on 1949 levels equalling 100. It is computed on the total wages paid by firms employing more than 18 persons in a wide range of industries.

HOUSING ALSO UP

Besides the food index, increases also were recorded at July 1 for the housing and recreation and reading indexes. The transportation index declined slightly and other indexes were unchanged.

The food index advanced 2.0 points to a record 135.4 at July 1 from 132.5 a month earlier due to higher prices for most

Factions May Patch Up Crisis

VIENTIANE (AP) — Hope rose in the tense Laotian capital today that rival rightist military factions may patch up a feud which could topple the shaky power structure.

Informants say a key man in the situation is General Siho Lamphoutacpol, who commands all civilian and military police in the Vientiane area. Siho, they say, is not willing at present to join either faction and is concentrating on maintaining security of Vientiane, the administrative capital. Should he decide, the whole power situation could become serious.

All that is known for sure is that the army was put on alert last Tuesday night, considerable military movement was noted and the capital was tense through the night.

The only official explanation was made Thursday when five

Strangers in a Foreign Land

Touring Scots And Mariposa Folk Singers Stranded In Toronto

'Nobody Seems to Care About Us'

TORONTO (CP)—Two groups of Scottish tourists are stranded in Canada until at least Sunday night because there are no scheduled flights to take them back to Scotland.

A group of 112 tourists arrived at Toronto International Airport Friday night, expecting to board a charter flight for their homeland after visiting relatives and friends here.

But there was no plane at the airport and no one to meet them.

David Benyon, leader of another 112 - member group of tourists that was to leave tonight, said Friday his group also would be stranded.

He said he had learned that the group had booked charter flights, had been cancelled and the airline was unable to operate.

He said the earliest the two groups will be able to leave Canada is Sunday night when there is a possibility that six Air Canada or British Overseas Airways Corporation charter flight will be available.

Last week another group of Scottish tourists was stranded in Toronto for a short time when a United States Airways charter plane was not allowed to land because it did not comply with Department of Transport regulations governing international carriers.

Norman MacLean of Glasgow, one of Friday's stranded travellers, said that 90 per cent of the group had to be back at work in Scotland Monday.

"We've been treated badly. No one seems to care about us."

Suffers Stroke

ROME (Reuters) President Antonio Segni of Italy, 73, who suffered a cerebral stroke while watching an Italian soccer match Friday afternoon, today showed "a certain improvement," his personal physician said.

Segni, a former university professor, was twice prime minister and three times foreign minister in Christian Democratic Party cabinets.

Rat Cellar Was Never Like This

TORONTO (CP) — An enthusiastic crowd of 1,000 sat through a brief cloudburst Friday night at the end of folk singing entertainers from three countries opened the fourth annual Mariposa Folk Festival at a waterfront baseball stadium here.

The festival, held for the last three years at Orillia and originally scheduled this year for a farm near Orillia, was switched to Toronto 24 hours before Friday's opening of the three-day program.

The transfer from the Medonte Township farm came after Mr. Justice E. L. Haines of the Ontario Supreme Court upheld a township bylaw restraining Mariposa Folk Festival incorporated from holding a affair within township boundaries.

The Medonte council opposed the festival because of incidents of rowdyism and drinking which marred the event in Orillia, 95 miles north of Toronto, last year.

Friday's show at Maple Leaf Stadium was quiet. It ends Sunday.

Among the opening night headliners were a Liverpool, England, duet, Bridie O'Donnell and Jacqueline McDonald.

Out-of-town people attending were expected to stay in tents and trailers at the Medonte farm site Friday. Two folknics, one from Vancouver and another from Chatham, told town officials they were broke and spent Thursday night as guests of the police.

Police Halt Escape From Quebec Prison

QUEBEC (CP)—Some 90 provincial and municipal police halted an apparent escape attempt in the Quebec Prison on the Plains of Abraham Friday night.

Aime Petitgrew, assistant governor of the jail, said a group of prisoners set fire to a wooden shed near an exit to dl trict gazette.

The fire was put out by prison staff, however, and policemen summoned to the jail shortly after 6 p.m. used nightsticks to persuade the prisoners to return to their cells.

The 175 prisoners who were in the jail courtyard at the time of the incident constitute a majority of the 230 men held at the institution. Its official capacity is 180.

A third girl in the same bedroom was not harmed by a killer who strangled one girl to death and bludgeoned the other, apparently with a rock he had carried into the room.

Dead were Cindy, 8, and Debby, 12, the daughters of Judge and Mrs. Robert McAuliffe of Maywood, Ill.

The girls' father heard the children screaming, raced to the room and found a man lying on the floor. He said the man apparently feigned drunkenness.

Kennedy Kids Close Up Shop As Business Proves Too Good

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP)—Business was too good for the sidewalk stands run by nieces and nephews of the late president John F. Kennedy.

They closed up shop Friday, after customers and tourists in this seaside community snarled traffic near the Kennedy compound.

The children, operating from orange crate counters, offered postcards, medallions and souvenirs to raise funds for the Kennedy Memorial Library to be built in Boston.

They raised nearly $50 in two days from flabbergasted tourists who became willing buyers when they learned the identities of the storekeepers.

But after the word got around, Hyannis Port's narrow streets were jammed and police had to be called to direct traffic.

And the enterprising Kennedy kids decided, reluctantly they were too successful and went out of business.

CAMPBELLFORD

Bridge Master Reports Heavy Canal Traffic

CAMPBELLFORD — Mr. Joseph Lalonde, Bridge Master at Campbellford reports to Council there are now 20 boats pass through Campbellford and the bridge had been lifted 600 times.

It is quite a common sight to see four or five or occasionally 7 yachts cruising the canal at one time. This year they appear to be larger, more fully equipped, with adequate accommodation for living completely on the boats. A great many have at least one canine sailor, some have two or a cat or two.

To cruise the Trent system in a yacht seems to have become a summer status symbol, induced to some degree by heavy highway motor traffic.

With no traffic regulations except in the proximity of a lock where speed is limited it is rather interesting to watch the movements of the boats, some move with a quiet slow progress as though enjoying to the full the changing scene of banks and trees and marsh. Some hustle along quite rapidly as though holiday time and summer are now about to end for the season. But whether fast or slow watching from a cottage or steering a cruiser, the broad waters of the Trent provide enjoyment for many people

Council Will Continue To Purchase Fill

TRENTON — At a special meeting of the public works' committee and the finance committee of town council Friday morning, it was decided to continue with the purchase of fill from the road widening project, east of the town, to provide landfill for the proposed new waterfront park, south of the community gardens. The fill is being supplied at 30 cents a cubic yard, and council means to buy up to 35,000 cubic yards.

At Thursday night's meeting of council, Councillor Edward Todd questioned council's right to buy fill when requests for such services as town sewers often have to be turned down for lack of funds.

However, Councillor Joseph Gould told council it would never again have the opportunity to buy fill at such a low price, and echoed Mayor James MacDonald's expressed sentiments that the park was "something for all people."

Council will also go ahead with plans to install sanitary sewer from the vicinity of the Legion Hall on Quinte Street, to Wharf Street, and Victoria to McGill Street and so on up to Flim Street. The installation is to cost around $100,000. Grants, water works' subsidies and services to be effected by not completing other projects this year, will take up most of the cost, but there may be a deficit of a third of a mill on the work.

Council also plans to pave parts of Campbell Street, Lorne and Victoria Ave., McColl Street, Henry Streets and Shuter Street and extend Ontario Street, Trenton east to the community gardens' area.

No Action Taken by Town Council

TRENTON — A section of Wharf Street North, zoned residential, was the subject of prolonged discussion at town council meeting Thursday night.

Mr. Devere Masters, a store owner in the area, has asked to have the area re - zoned commercial. Mr. Masters told council when he bought the property, he was told by the former owner it would be all right to conduct a business on the premises. Recently when he applied the area was zoned residential, he asked for the re - zoning. The Planning Board has recommended that the residential zoning be retained, for a number of reasons. One is that West Street at this point is very narrow. With around 200 cars passing out of factories further north from the point in question every day, traffic could very well become congested at this point if the motorists chose to stop at Mr. Masters' place of business. Two businesses are located across the road from the Masters' store.

Mr. Masters argued that a used furniture business was being operated in the area under the very same circumstances he himself was operating.

Council, in the final analysis, decided to do nothing at all about re - zoning, because of the planning board's recommendation, and Councillor Rose Burtt suggested that the operation of the used furniture store be investigated.

10 Nursing Home Patients Safely Taken From Building

TRENTON — Ten elderly patients escaped without injury from a fire last night in the Panda's Villa Nursing Home on Dundas Street East in Trenton.

Constable Sidney Vickers of the Trenton police was passing the nursing home about 11:15 when he noticed smoke pouring from the building. He then proceeded directly to the Trenton firehall and turned in the alarm. The entire Trenton force was sent to the scene and after three hours extinguished the blaze.

The patients in the home were removed from the densely smoke-filled interior by Rushnell Ambulance men. They moved the patients next door to a motel and guests, already in bed were asked to get up and give their beds to the patients. During the early hours of the morning the ten were removed from the motel and taken to the Trenton Memorial Hospital where they are all reported in good condition.

The fire is reported to have started in a third floor attic. There was slight damage to the second floor and the first level escaped damage entirely. The big problem for the firemen was the dense smoke. Two men were overcome with the smoke, including Captain Gerald Lewis.

An official estimate of damage is unavailable but it is not thought to be too extensive. The hope has been expressed that the ten patients can be moved back into the home by Monday.

Plant Operator Is Praised In Report

TRENTON—The Ontario Water Resources Commission, over the signatures of the general manager, D. S. Caverly and B. C. Palmer, director, division of plant operations, has issued a report on the 1963 operations of the sewage treatment plant at Trenton.

The plant, located on the waterfront in east Trenton, was built in 1959 at a cost of $709,044 by the OWRC. Trenton will pay back the cost over a number of years.

Operating costs last year were $12,000 and $10,000 of the town's debt to the OWRC was retired. Total operating cost was $55,103 or roughly $3 per capita.

The plant is designed to serve 12,000 and when extended, to the recommendations of the OWRC, 15,000.

Plant operator, James Stewart, hired in 1960, was commended by the OWRC officials as "enthusiastic and interested in his work."

Youth Charged With Theft Of Stamps

TRENTON — An 18-year-old Trenton youth, Douglas Prudhomme of Gotha Street, has been arrested and charged with the theft of stamps, worth $1,200 from an RCAF officer.

S/L Harry Sinston, 10 Coleman Dr., Middleton Pk., reported his loss to Trenton police earlier this week. Stamps worth $400 were recovered from a Toronto stamp dealer's store, on Thursday.

Prudhomme will appear in court at Trenton on Tuesday next.

WORK IS STARTED

Road work, preliminary to paving operations was started on Dundas St. E. Friday, by the Triangle Paving Company, after the contractor, Joseph Reyner of Toronto, was served with an ultimatum by town council, through consulting engineer Jack Tomlinson, Thursday.

The actual paving is expected to take about a week.

Town Bylaws Being Reviewed By Solicitor

TRENTON — Town Solicitor Roderick Campbell, clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry and president, Herman Miedema, have been engaged in reorganizing and examining the existing bylaws of Trenton. Mr. Larry reported to council Thursday night that a complete inventory had been taken of the by-laws, and that they had been catalogued and filed under proper headings. A card system, under these headings, has been established.

It has been recommended that by-laws to do with auctioneering operation of pool rooms, hawkers and peddlers and transient traders, operations of junk shops, salvage yards, trailer and second hand shops, milk distribution, operation of public halls, signs and canopies, operation of slot machines, operation of taverns, and operation of dry cleaning establishments, be reviewed, and re-enacted. In the opinion of the town solicitor, by-laws to do with the operation of slot machines comes under the Criminal Code. The by-law to do with the operation of pawn shops has very little, if any, application in Trenton, and should be reviewed, and brought up to date.

By-laws to do with bicycle licensing, operation of bakeries, hairdressing, plumbing, operation of restaurants, operation of taxi businesses, traffic and parking, are either up to date or come under the jurisdiction of some other body than council.

Council has been asked to review the suggested by-laws and rule on re-enactment.

group backs the new flag, suggested that the House switch to round-the-clock sittings instead, presumably to wear the Conservative down.

Government House Leader Guy Favreau replied that the government will consider "any suggestion to enable the House to dispose of its business compatible with freedom of discussion."

Some Liberal sources said they might introduce a motion for 24-hour sittings if public opinion built up in their favor after two or three weeks of implacable Conservative opposition.

The last time this rare device was used occurred in 1913 when the Liberals bitterly opposed a Conservative naval bill.

The Commons sat from 3 p.m. Monday, March 10, to 11:32 p.m. Saturday, March 15, without interruption except for a one-hour supper break each day. The following April the government introduced the celebrated closure rule and cut off further debate.

Mindful of the 1956 pipeline furor when closure was last applied, the government is understood to have decided against using the closure rule this time.

DID NOT REPLY

Mr. Favreau did not reply Friday, however, when Opposition Leader Diefenbaker asked if closure was being considered.

"What! No answer!" the Conservative leader said. "That's not encouraging. So that's the plan, is it?"

Most of Friday's fiscal debate dealt with various definitions of separatism.

Auguste Choquette (L—Lotbinière) said the Creditistes show separatist tendencies and represent only a small minority of Quebec opinion.

Tom Barnett (NDP—Comox-Alberni) said the country's leading separatist is none other than Premier Bennett of British Columbia.

Gilles Gregoire (Creditiste—Lapointe) differed. He said that dubious honor belonged to Mr. Choquette.

Gordon Aiken (PC — Parry Sound-Muskoka) said the federal Liberals are leading Canada "de facto" separation into two socialist states, one French-speaking, the other English-speaking.

Soviet Union's Wheat Crop Average Yield

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Soviet Union's wheat crop appears to have rebounded to average yields after the 1963 drought disaster, the United States agriculture department says.

The report is looked on as won't need to repeat massive wheat purchases from Canada and elsewhere.

In a quarterly appraisal of the world wheat situation, the department forecasts a record crop and consequent stiffening in competition for commercial sales.

Total U.S. exports for the year beginning July 1 may run around 675,000,000 bushels compared with the record 860,000,000 bushels in 1963-64. The amount exported commercially — as opposed to disposal through special foreign aid programs — may decline to perhaps 130,000,000 bushels from the record 346,000,000 of last year.

DEMAND TO EASE

The report says better crop prospects generally, except in Canada which had a record yield last year of 723,000,000 bushels, will pare commercial demand.

The report has a cheerful word to Canadian market prospects in reporting that weather conditions have been less good in eastern Europe, where Canada holds long-term wheat sales agreements with several Communist countries. But it warns that larger acreages in Hungary and Romania may offset lower yields.

The department forecasts a record Northern Hemisphere wheat crop, largely due to the U.S.S.R. and western Europe. North American output would rise, despite an anticipated acreage decline, because of bigger wheat yields in the U.S. and Mexico according to present indications.

A Lift for Living

The Desire to Better One's Self Is Not Enough

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

Do you remember your childhood birthday celebrations, especially the spankings you received from parents, brothers, sisters or neighbor children? When on were nine, for example, you were given nine smart whacks on the proper location. But the person administering the paddling did not stop with nine resounding blows. An extra stroke was given with the announcement "One to be good on" and still another, "One to grow on."

There is a whimsical wisp of wisdom in that ending of the traditional birthday spanking. We all need something "to grow on."

Growth toward maturity is a characteristic of all living things from seeds planted in the fields to fish eggs laid and hatched in lakes, streams, and oceans; from nestling birds hatched in a fern-graced bower of the forest to children playing in nurseries and city parks. Growth is the least common denominator of all living creatures born into the world; growth is the development of the hidden potentialities, the secret qualities that we bring into the world when we arrive here.

WITHER AND DIE

But everything that grows must have something "to grow on." If a farmer wishes to grow corn he must determine what the corn will grow on, what fields offer the best type of soil, where the soil will be most uniform, well-drained, nutritious, and best suited to bring out the full potential of the seed. It is not enough to want to grow corn. Corn must have something to grow on.

So it is with growth of mind and spirit. The letter to the Ephesians advises early Christians, "We are to grow up in every way unto Him who is the head, even Christ." But what are we to grow on?

We grow on fellowship. We wither and die through detachment from other people and we thrive on the good we find in those to whom we belong. One of our primary joys is found in accepting and being accepted, approving and being approved, appreciating and being appreciated, forgiving and being forgiven in the company of those we respect and love.

The best things in life come through sharing. Art is shared beauty. Education is shared truth. The church and its services of worship, hospitals and their missions of mercy, charitable institutions and their help for the needy represent shared goodness. There would be no painting, sculpture, music, no schools, churches, hospitals, no charity, without a craving for and a fulfillment of fellowship. By eating, playing, working, and worshipping together we partake of the powers we find in members of our family, our neighborhood, and the larger circles of society. Through great books, great art, great music we keep company with the best minds of all time, and these souls that touch ours leave some grace, some good, some inspiration and aspiration as nutriment for our spirits.

SPLENDID FELLOWSHIP

When we are engaged in splendid fellowships, the company we keep keeps us. We grow on the fellowships we form.

We grow on our necessities. Necessity is an ugly word, signifying the restraints we shun, the unavoidable we wish to avoid, and the inevitables we seek to evade. But necessity is deceptive. It hides the nature of life's inevitables. Necessity is like some weirdly disguised character at a masquerade party. Its guise is frighteningly like that of some demon from the nether regions. But when masks are removed we see necessity is no devil at all but one of our best friends.

Hardly any baby bird learns to fly simply because it has a yearning to do so. Fledgling birds remain in their nests and beg their parents to feed them as long as the adults will yield to the hunger cries of their young. But soon comes the moment when the parent bird senses that the nestlings are mature enough to fly and she pushes them from the nest. The fledglings first learn to fly from fool—some 400,000 pilgrims will sheer necessity, and only after that can they fly because they desire to fly. They fly because they must before they fly because they wish.

God must sometimes confront us with necessities before we can become what we should be. We pray for patience, but God never sends us ready-made patience in gift-wrapped packages. Rather He allows us to get into situations where patience is the answer. A newspaper delivery boy accidentally throws the Daily News through a porch window; the wife is slow with dinner; an employee confuses the office bookkeeping; our fourteen-year-old son scribbles on the nursery wall with red and yellow crayons; the husband is irritatingly forgetful; Grandpa grumbles "about every little thing." Patience has no chance to grow when life is smooth and pleasant. Frustrations are what patience grows on. They make patience a necessity if we are to live decently and gracefully.

BETTER CHARACTER

It is dangerous to pray for better character unless we really mean business, for God will permit some necessity to come our way that will give character something to grow on. If we ask for courage, He will give us something on which to grow courage — some temptation, forward conformity to man's will, some fear that needs to be overthrown. If we plead for strength, some burdens will come our way. Strength will grow by lifting. Character will grow as the life's Coach for strength He gives the strenuous exercises by which we become stronger. Necessities are what we grow on.

God will ripen and mature the possibilities for good He has fashioned in all of us. So He sets us in a world of fellowships and of necessities, hopeful that we will draw from them the nourishment that will stimulate and sustain our growth toward Christ-likeness.

Pilgrimages Reappraised In India

By RUKMINI DEVI
Canadian Press Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP) — A difficult mountain road has set off a debate in India over the worth of religious pilgrimages.

Thousands of hymn-chanting men, women and children detrain every morning and evening at the tiny railhead at Rishikesh in north India to begin a 175-mile road journey to a mountain shrine—despite the government's warning that the road is in a bad condition and serious accidents are possible.

The goal of the pious Hindus is the sacred shrine of Badrinath, 11,000 feet up in the Himalayas. Annually the 900-year-old temple is believed to confer immortality on the human soul.

Avalanches and landslides have damaged the road at many points, making it risky in places.

Recently a packed pilgrim bus skidded and rolled down into a ravine 3,000 feet below. Twenty-eight of the 40 pilgrims were killed.

The government's appeal to incoming pilgrims to postpone their trip to Badrinath until the road is fully repaired has fallen largely on deaf ears.

Chanting "Badrinath-ki-Jai" (glory to Badrinath), some 2,500 pilgrims took the buses for the high shrine on the very day the radio and newspapers were announcing news of the accident.

CALLED DEATH ROAD

Many newspapers have called for an outright ban on pilgrimages to Badrinath until the road repairs are completed. The route is described in editorials as the "death road."

The National Herald of Lucknow, a paper founded by the late prime minister Nehru, says that the time has come to end the "humbug" of religious pilgrimages.

Columnists in the national newspapers say that pilgrimages at such human cost to remote mountain shrines are out of place in a modern India dedicated to industrial and scientific progress.

But the Mahant (chief priest) of the Badrinath temple says he expects the number of pilgrims to grow with the years.

In fact, the priest thinks that when the last stretch of 20 miles is also made passable for vehicles—it now is covered on foot—some 400,000 pilgrims will visit Badrinath every summer as against the present 75,000.

The declining tide immerses a part of Nehru's ashes in the holy Ganga River at Badrinath seems to have given new prestige to the ancient pilgrimage.

"It is a pity if a handful of officials or journalists think that they can halt this time-honored communion with the gods in the Himalayas," said the Badrinath priest.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

QUESTION: My brother is getting married to my best friend, and I'm going to be her maid of honor. I want to give her a shower, but I understand that relatives of either the bride or bridegroom are supposed to do so. Would it be considered out of line if I did anyway since we have such a deep and long - standing friendship? Your answer to this problem would be much appreciated. — M. E. L., Holyoke, Mass.

ANSWER: Even though the bride-to-be is your closest friend it wouldn't be advisable for you to give a shower — since the bridegroom is your brother. However, you still could give a luncheon in her honor or a party in honor of both. Either would be permissible, since no presents would be involved and it wouldn't seem as though you were seeking gifts for the couple (which might be the interpretation if, as a relative of the bridegroom, you were to give her a shower.

QUESTION: When calling on the phone to term an invitation is it rude to give the information to anyone who answers, instead of talking directly to the person you wish to invite? I left a message yesterday on an invitation with a friend's maid since she's out most of the time and is hard to reach. I told the maid I'd appreciate a reply as soon as possible. I hadn't heard from my friend within a few days, I called back to check on whether she and her husband could be expected at our party. She said she got my message, but was waiting for me to call her directly. She didn't think it was her place to call me back, since the invitation was relayed through someone else. What is proper in such an involved situation? — Mrs. S. K., Great Neck, N.Y.

ANSWER: Naturally it is polite to speak directly to the person you wish to invite. But, when it's virtually impossible to do so, it's permissible to relay an invitation through a responsible person who answers the phone. However, if there's to be any hair-splitting, you really should have called back to make sure she received the invitation and to get an answer. When one is hard to reach, it's actually more efficient to issue the invitation by note. Then there's no doubt about how the reply is to be made and who is supposed to do what.

QUESTION: The son of friends was married a month ago in another city. He's bringing his bride home for a visit and his parents are giving a large party so their friends can meet her. Many of us who have been invited are not sure whether we should bring gifts to the newlyweds. I've been delegated to ask you on everyone's behalf. None of us were invited to the wedding, so we have been impossible for us to attend anyway. But we did receive formal announcements. What is correct as regards the party and the subject of presents? — Mrs. F. A., Miami, Fla.

ANSWER: It's unnecessary to bring gifts to the party. If anyone wants to see the couple a wedding present, it should either be presented in private or sent to them at their own home. A gift should not be brought to the party, since it would possibly embarrass those who did not bring one. At any rate, a gift is purely optional even for those who received formal announcements of the wedding.

Women Indian Chiefs Will Be Asked to Help

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's women Indian chiefs will be asked to help in the federal government's $3,500,000 community development program for Indian reserves, says the head of the citizenship department's Indian affairs division.

Walter Rudnicki said in an interview that several women chiefs and a number of women councillors are among the leaders of Canada's 2,200 Indian reserves.

"We will definitely look for participation by such women in our program."

The three - year development program is still in the planning stages and will be the first of its kind in Canada.

Like similar programs in the United States and Mexico, it will attempt to take into consideration all aspects of community life. "It will help to make existing health, welfare and education programs more effective."

The cultural affairs section of the program is to be made up largely of Indians, with the "highest degree of Indian autonomy as its objective."

Six Indians are to be appointed to the headquarters staff of this section with others in regional positions. Encouragement will be given to artists, sculptors and dancers with hairiaries set up for higher education as well.

"The public image of the Indian is the tom-tom dancer at the fair, but this is like looking at the upper tenth of the iceberg. There is enormous potential which we hope to bring out among Indians."

Homemaker Clubs already organized for Indian women may be a source from which women will eventually be drawn into the communities' civic affairs.

Successful Living

Legislation Is Enforced Against Child Cruelty

DEAR DORIS — That unhappy girl "Going Crazy" (who hates the aunt she lives with) would be better off in a home.

I lost my mother and dad when I was 12 (40 years ago). My younger sister and brother were taken by an aunt who received money for their keep from the state. My little sister had rheumatic fever but not long after that aunty my aunt made her walk two blocks up a hill to deliver milk every day. She died soon after.

She was a wicked woman. She made my brother work too hard, then when he collapsed carried him outdoors and laid him on the grass to recover. My uncle forbade my aunt sometimes but she ruled. — ORPHAN.

DORIS CLARE

DEAR ORPHAN — The tale you tell is horrible. Today we enforce legislation against cruelty to children. If "Going Crazy" feels she is in the same boat with your sister, let's hope she reads this column and seeks the help of the child care agency in her own area. She can have their interest and kind support if she seeks it.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — A lot of stories have been spread about a classmate — shoplifting clothes, swearing and smoking (she is barely 13). We don't know whether to believe these stories, but feel that it is inclined to, because she has seen her take articles in the classroom.

Her attitude might arise from an unhappy home life, as her parents are divorced. She has the lowest marks in the class.

With a little encouragement we think she could be broken of these bad habits. Someone persuaded her to join the Girl Guides, and we hope this will do something for her.

Doris, do you think there is anything we can do to help her without getting on the bad side of her? Or should we leave well enough alone? — CONCERNED FRIENDS.

DEAR FRIENDS — You sound like budding social workers! Your part is to make her feel you believe in her by being friendly. The rest of the job belongs to adults — like the Girl Guide leader and similar fine influences.

(Doris knows Canadian resources and can guide you to the one you need. When writing, be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

WEDDING

Stapley–Davidson

A pretty summer wedding was solemnized in St. Paul's United Church, Stirling recently when Barbara Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Davidson, of Stirling, became the bride of Claire Kenneth Stapley, of Stirling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Stapley of Ancaster. Rev. W. G. Fletcher, of Stirling, officiated.

The altar was appointed with baskets of Shasta 'mums. White satin bows designated the guest pews.

Mrs. Harry Brown, church organist, presided at the console of the organ and accompanied the soloist, Miss Margaret Hommerson, of Stirling.

The bride given in marriage by her father wore a floor length gown of white nylon organza over peau-de-soie. The sleeveless gown featured a scoop neckline and fitted bodice coming down to a controlled full skirt. This was covered by a French chantilly lace jacket with traditional three-quarter length sleeveless. Flowing from the shoulders was a semi-chapelstrain of the same lace. Her crown of nylon organza had insets of chantilly lace with a bouffant tulle veil. She carried a corsage of miniature yellow roses on a white Bible.

The maid of honor, Miss Gail Langabeer, of Belleville, wore a street-length, pastel yellow, sheath-style gown of nylon organza with short sleeves and scoop neckline and an open over-skirt tied at the waist with self bow. Her headpiece of matching nylon organza bow, and she carried a corsage of gay of white and yellow Shasta 'mums.

Mr. William Horrill of Ancaster, was groomsman. Roger Davidson, brother of the bride and Edward Svoboda, Stirling, cousin of the bridegroom were ushers.

The reception, catered to by Laurel Rebekah Lodge, was held in the I.O.O.F. Hall, Stirling. The bride's table centred with a three-tier wedding cake, topped with a bell. Around the base was nylon tulle and pink rosebuds. Completing the setting were two silver candelabra holding six tapered white candles.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing a pastel blue frosted organza over taffeta, sheath-style dress with matching hat and white accessories. Her corsage was pink sweetheart roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who was attired in a blue lace sheath dress with matching length over jacket of the same material and white hat and accessories. Her corsage was a white gardenia.

For the wedding trip to the Seaway and Northern United States, the bride donned a yellow linen sheath dress with white accessories and wore a corsage of white baby 'mums.

Guests were present from Winchester, Alexandria, Brockville, Ottawa, Belleville, Trenton, Bellville, Toronto, Oshawa, Drumbo, Peterborough and Stirling.

Previous to her marriage, the bride was honored at a linen shower at the home of Mrs. Francis Fralick, Foxboro; and at a kitchen shower at the home of Mrs. Edwin Warren and Mrs. Lloyd Warren and Mrs. Patricia Merrill as co-hostesses. The office staff in the printing department of Outboard Marines, where the bride is employed, entertained at a dinner party where she was the recipient of a decorative clock and three-piece cookware set.

Mr. and Mrs. Stapley will reside at 700 Park St., in Peterborough.

MR. AND MRS. ALVIN THOMAS MIDDLEBROOK

Middlebrook – Allport

Bethel Chapel was the setting for the July wedding of Brenda May Allport, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Allport, of Marysville, to Alvin Thomas Middlebrook of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Middlebrook, of Gravenhurst. Mr. William E. Belch performed the ceremony.

Wedding music was played by Mrs. A. Brooks, who also accompanied the soloist, Miss N. Brooks.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of silk bengaline with round neckline, and lily-point sleeves. Lace appliques enhanced the empire waist line and the A-line skirt was fashioned into a chapel train from a bow at the waist. Her elbow-length veil fell from a cluster of chiffon rosettes, and she carried a white Bible crested with a white gardenia, stephanotis and ivy.

Miss Joyce Middlebrook of Gravenhurst, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. She wore a yellow chiffon dress with a lace jacket, long sleeves and round neckline. She carried a bouquet of white tinted carnations and daisies.

Little Miss Valerie Bird was flower girl, wearing a dress of mauve chiffon over taffeta. She carried a basket of mauve tinted carnations and daisies.

Readers' Saturday Column

by Mary Moore

LETTER: — My sister-in-law sent me the recipe for Rice Krispies and which you printed a while ago. I thought you might like to know that it has come all the way to the (P.E.) island and that our children like it too. Our two little boys are in a cottage diet and I always welcome new recipes. Well the Banana Bread is especially good. I have passed the recipe along to Miss Doris Anderson who is the supervisor of Home Economics with the Department of Education of P.E.I. She takes a great interest in children with cooking and said she will give the recipe to the other families she works with.

If you are interested in the cookie recipe I am including. It is simple to make, doesn't crumble and our boys and some other children I've given them to like them very much. It is a recipe I adapted from the Quick Oat Cookie recipe on the Quick Oats bag.—Mrs. Elizabeth D.

RICE FLOUR-CORN FLAKES

¾ cup rice flour, ½ teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon baking soda, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup soft shortening, ½ cup sugar, packed, ¼ cup granulated sugar, 1 egg, 1 tablespoon water, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1¾ cups crushed corn flakes (I put the corn flakes in a flat bottomed pan and crushed with potato masher, not too finely, about ¾" pieces, then measured).

Preheat oven to 350 deg. Fahr. Sift rice flour, baking powder, soda and salt into bowl. Add shortening, sugars, egg, water and vanilla. Beat until smooth. Fold in corn flakes. Drop by teaspoons and press with fingers into balls on ungreased baking sheet. Bake until light brown, about 10 or 12 minutes. After baking let the cookies set on the sheet for about 1 minute before removing to rack. The cookies flatten out as they are baked. They taste a little like to me but the children love them. — Mrs. D. 50.

ANSWER:—Thank you, Elizabeth. I am sure there will be dozens of mothers of cellac children who will bless you for this.

SATURDAY
(Guests)

Dinner Menu

Chilled Raspberry Juice Cocktail; Canadianized Quiche Lorraine (see week); Tossed Green Salad with Sauce; Caesar Salad; Blueberries and Cream; Angel Food Loaf (see Thursday); Tea.

NOTES:—1) I did not "press" with fingers into balls." I found this step unnecessary when spooning the dough onto ungreased cookie sheets. 2) I also found cookies only 2 minutes and removed them to cool rack at once, for I feared they might start over cooking, to the ungreased pan. 3) This amount makes 50 cookies and we do not think they are "flat." We think they are very good.

Going Places

Rothenburg, Germany, Truly The Original Fairy-Tale Town

By SHIRLEY and BOB LOANE

ROTHENBURG, Germany — If you're really looking for the place, where time has stopped and the standards of modern civilization count for nought, consider Rothenburg.

Of its two most revered sons, one was a shrewd burgomeister who lived as recently as 1408. The other, practically a contemporary, gained fame by chucking three gallons and a half litres of wine in 1631. He promptly died 20 years later.

There is nothing out of keeping in these fairy-tale-type heroes, because Rothenburg is the original fairy-tale town. A medieval walled city of letter-perfect authenticity, it was here Walt Disney filmed his movie about the Brothers Grimm. The city is so medieval that Rothenburgers never saw it: there wasn't a wide enough movie screen in town.

The town sits on a commanding height above the soft green valley of the Tauber River. Teutonic knights once feasted in these fields, and bloodthirsty conquerors steamed across them for centuries, trying in vain to scale the walls of this once rich and independent stronghold of the Holy Roman Empire.

MAJOR WAS SHREWDIE

Its free status had been assured as early as the 13th century by the revered Heinrich Toppler, a shrewdie if there ever was one. As mayor, he managed to finagle all sorts of favors from the burgraves and landgrafters of the time to keep their livings preying on prosperous towns.

How he did it no one knows, but his name means "dice-player" in old German. There hasn't been a schoolboy for six centuries who couldn't point out his majestic palace and summer home to tourists.

Among the marauders who swept through here over the centuries was one Tilly whose name is as the religious fervor of the Thirty Years War. Finally making it over the walls one autumn day in 1631, he sat down in a little inn and ordered all the stands just inside the city wall, and ordered the mayor and the town council promptly put to death. Rothenburgers, used to this sort of thing, refused with and begged him, all the while slyly plying him with wine, a beverage he had never previously passed his lips.

Finally Tilly got to feeling pretty good, and vowed that if anyone could drain at a single draught the 3¼-litre goblet from which he had been drinking, he would spare the town fathers.

An elderly councillor named Georg Nusch, who had already had a few that day, volunteered. He nearly drowned the gallon in one quaff, and then had a few more in celebration when this proved successful.

Nusch lived to be 90, but he really lives forever. On the hour 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. the mechanical figures in the town hall's clock re-enact his Falstafian feat, to the eternal amusement of a mechanical Tilly.

Naturally, any schoolboy can show you these fairy-tale houses, and the original goblet is in the town museum.

EACH HAS STORY

The town hall is just one of a seemingly endless series of carved, half-timbered, roofed, half-timbered, and sloping gabled houses, all designed by Hansel and Gretel, which line the streets of Rothenburg. Some are restored, but most have their original character and each has its story dripping with memories of plumed nobility, echoing with the clank of medieval armor, or savoring of the feudal market place.

There has, for example, been a firehouse in the town hall for nearly 600 years. Today it houses bright red engines, specially strapped to the outside of the walls are iron bands used as standard measures for coal, potato, fabric and wood. They are still standard, but hardly anything is allowed to become outdated in Rothenburg.

The town hall is a hodgepodge of baroque and Gothic styles, its earliest parts more than 700 years old. Surmounting it is a fire watchtower now manned around the clock by three stalwarts. It seems a long way to distant past the lone guard fell asleep while fire raged, and they didn't forget things like that around here.

Below, arches span the cobbled courtyard and barred windows still mark the ancient treasury room. Beneath a latticed doorway lies the municipal torture chamber, presumably out of date.?

Elsewhere in town, medieval torture and execution reached a peak — or depth — of sorts in what is fondly called the Murder Tower. Condemned criminals were taken to the top of it, dumped down the shaft, and if the fall should fail to do the job, there were spikes waiting at the bottom.

PLEASANTER CORNER

A much pleasanter corner of the city is the park known as Castle Garden. From here most of the city's walls and spires are visible. In the garden stood the city's first known castle, dating to the 11th century. Today only a practically modern 16th Century "Duke's Hall," once a royal dining room, still stands. But to it have been transferred recently discovered frescoes from the old castle, their 900-year-old colors brilliant and clear as new.

Odd corners of Rothenburg turn up odd treasures. Peek through a courtyard and see houses within houses, or wander down an alley and behold a lovely turret-like tower window protruding from the corner of a building. A passage may house a magnificent example of baroque woodcarving, or on a street such as the Lederergasse you may see how in the 14th Century Jews built the fronts of their houses flush with Christians, gabled them for instant social status.

But above all the tower gates and bastions, the fountains and squares, the cisterns and spiral staircases, we were fascinated by a wooden ladder.

It hung on the wall of a tunnel marking St. Jakob's church as the only one in Europe with a tunnel running through it. The ladder was snatched from some long-forgotten wall-scalers in the long-forgotten invasion of the city, and then hung quietly in the tunnel.

The conclusion is inescapable that down deep, Rothenburgers believe they may need it again some day.

Travels Long Way To Study At Art School

REGINA (CP) — Ballet is Janice Lahlr's passion. The young wife of a Lutheran minister proves it by travelling thrice 300 miles to study dancing at summer school.

Mrs. Lahlr says her present hometown, Williston, N.D., has had little exposure to ballet and Regina is the closest city that offers the right instruction.

So this summer she picked the dance and vows to brush up on her technique at the conservatory of music.

"With music you can always buy records, with art there is the printed page, but ballet is the hardest to learn by.

To her it's also more than a hobby: it has a philosophical significance.

"As human beings we struggle against the primitive and have always struggled to dance. Ballet has helped us get off the floor feet and become truly beautiful."

As a result of her enthusiasm, ballet is no longer without significance. Encouraged by a Regina, director of the summer school she is teaching the art there.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The Umpires' Association of this district, a gaggle of guys, who, as some players charge, are pastured diamond stars who strayed off the straight and narrow, doff the official blues tomorrow evening to wage softball combat with a selected coterie of Commercial League players.

This affair, I'm told, is no high jinks caper. The umpires, nursing private but silent feuds with some of the players, are going all-out to prove they can do what they talk about.

On the other side of the picture, exuberant players in the diveted spot of grabbing back without fear of a loss-out, are adamant in their intention to humble the arbiters before what they hope will be a capacity crowd.

I hear Al Kelleher has ordered all the umps to visit their respective barber shops to get clipped, shaved and manicured. Their uniforms will be immaculate. They will not, under threat of having their mouths taped, revert to type and call decisions when they are playing.

Any umpire who breaks the rule and is tossed out of the game will be escorted to the sidelines by four of his confreres, deprived of his union card and suspended from active-umpiring for a period of six months. If a T.T. his lemonade quota will be cut off.

All-in-all the Umps are not bad Joes. They have a job to do and in the greater majority of cases do it well. Ever since Pop Adam pinched that Eden apple, human beings have differed. Sometimes you wouldn't think so, but diamond-arbiters are human, too.

They are not, as one hothead player yelled after losing an argument (as if anybody ever won one with an umpire), "that guy is so crooked you have to count your fingers after he shakes hands with you."

I don't know whether tow trucks are permissible after an umps runner passes second base, but it seems like a good idea for guys like Jim Tedsworth, Kelleher and Shad Zinner, whose stockpiles of wind are liable to run out after they reach first.

I don't know who will go to the mound for the Umps at this writing but it will likely be "Koufax" Kelleher with "Yogi" Fisher doing the catching. And if they put Big "Bawdy" on first—that I have to see.

I don't know why other phases of life seems to have dislikes for umpires, but many strange stories have made their appearance.

A swarm of bees once encircled an umpire in a Kentucky ball game. It covered his head like a widow's weed until he made a frightened dash for an exit.

At a Michigan high school game a horse suddenly came out of nowhere, galloped to the first-base umpire and bit him on the shoulder.

They say the origin of the twist came from an Oklahoma baseball game when a huge bee suddenly droned on the scene and stung the plate umpire on the neck after a disputed decision sent the batter to the dugout.

Then there's the rat story of the large rodent which made its way to a Sacramento diamond. It began crossing and recrossing the playing field while players tossed balls and bats at it. Finally it came to rest just off second base. And a very portly jiked "What's the plate umpire doin' out at second."

Umpire Donald Atkinson of the Georgia-Florida League made a strange gesture one day. Instead of reaching in his bag and tossing a new ball to the pitcher, he scrounged, turned and dropped to his grandstand. Some wag had slipped a big fat toad-frog in the ballbag.

By the way, the Umpires - Commercial All Stars game is scheduled for the CNRA Park tomorrow night, starting 6.45. There will be twenty handsome prizes up for pewsters' grabs.

Birds' Barber Beats Yanks' Bouton

By JIM BECKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Steve Barber is not having one of his great years for Baltimore Orioles but he's doing plenty well enough for Jim Bouton.

Barber defeated Bouton for the third time this season Friday night as the Orioles drew first blood over New York Yankees in the American League's big Flag Fortnight.

The score was 2-0 for the Birds, and the victory put them in first place, a full game ahead of the Yankees. Chicago White Sox snapped a three game losing streak with a 2-0 victory over Boston Red Sox and remained 1½ games behind Baltimore, in third place.

In the next two weeks the Yankees play the Orioles and the White Sox seven more times each—and then the New Yorkers won't see either team again this year.

In other American League games, Cleveland Indians won a doubleheader from Minnesota Twins 10-4 and 8-2, Detroit Tigers beat Kansas City Athletics 5-2 and Washington Senators squeaked past Los Angeles Angels 4-3.

Barber needed relief help from veteran Harvey Haddix, but still earned his third straight over the Yankees and Bouton in the big game at Yankee Stadium.

SEVENTH FOR BARBER

It was Barber's seventh victory of the year against eight defeats. The 25-year-old lefthander won 20 games last year and had 11 complete games. This year he has only three, two of them were against Bouton.

Baltimore scored in the first inning when Jackie Brandt was hit by a Bouton pitch, went to second on Norm Siebern's pop fly single and came in on Brooks Robinson's line single to centre.

Phil Regan scattered eight hits for the Detroit victory Gates' Brown homered for the Tigers in the second inning and George Thomas and Bill Freehan hit back-to-back homers in the eighth.

The sweep for the Indians gave them eight victories in 10 games. Woodie Held and Joe Azcue hit two-run homers in the first inning for the Tribe and Azcue drove in three Cleveland runs with two singles in the nightcap.

The Senators had a close call in Los Angeles. Claude Osteen rolled into the ninth inning with a 4-0 lead but left hurriedly after a pair of walks and a wild pitch. Ron Kline yielded two runs on a single by Bob Rodgers and a third on a double play before getting the side out.

Villmer, Hady Win Main Bout

Pad Lads Well Beaten

Ray Villmer, the St. Louis Bum-saw went back to Toronto last night as happy as a spider with a fresh fly buddy.

Actually he didn't need the main bout award as it happened for didn't he and buddy-buddy Gentleman Jim Hady blast the bejabers out of his personal enemies Swede Daddy Siki and his palsy-walsy one Duke Noble.

It was sweet revenge for the popular guy from St. Louis. He had waited weeks for this one after being whopped and skullduggled by the beatnik from Broadway.

Villmer, infuriated at the result of last week's individual hassle with the Daddy after Big Bill Eakins hustled in, "literally" to aid the dusky-peacock, offered to take both on at the same time this week.

But to make matters even the powerful-bo sent Gentleman Jim Hady down to aid and abet Villmer — and the pair had a darkiown shutters' ball.

Villmer was disappointed after a fashion in a small way for he had hoped of settling a mat argument with Big Bill. But he missed this fun because Big Bill failed to show up and Duke Noble former Man Friday of Sweet Daddy arrived in his place.

The Duke, a pad lad beatnik buddy of Daddy who sports a silver-grey beard, combined with his pal to wreak havoc on the individual foeman from St. Loo and he got the same to Gentleman Jim and Referee Bunny Dunlop should they get in the way.

The end cange rather suddenly in the final stanza of the tempestuous bash.

Hady and Villmer had things pretty well their own way with the Duke and Siki getting the "works" from Hady and Villmer.

Siki didn't like the way things were going for his buddy so he popped into the ring and smote Villmer in the midriff when he thought the official optics were looking at the comely blonde in the third row ringside.

But he didn't reckon with the veteran Bunny Boy Dunlop vision-

Womens Open Golf

Hitchens, Masters Meet In Final

CALGARY (CP)—A final with an international flavor developed Friday in the 1964 Canadian Women's Open Golf championship but the winner will be a Canadian resident.

Gayle Hitchens of Vancouver, 1962 open champion, eliminated Marlene Stewart Streit of Toronto one up in one semi-final bracket and Marg Masters of Ottawa downed Gail Harvey of Toronto 2 and 1 in the other.

Miss Masters is a native of Australia who has won New Zealand, South African and Australian women's titles. She moved to Ottawa in April.

Miss Hitchens is a 36-hole final today.

Both survivors of the rugged semi-finals played outstanding golf in exceptional weather over the tight-fairway, par-74 Calgary Country Club course, and the game came from behind early deficits.

Miss Hitchens trailed Mrs. Streit by two holes but won the eighth and the ninth to make the turn even. She went one up on the 11th but the 12th hole Mrs Streit went ahead with a birdie on the 14th but Miss Hitchens played a 22-footer to pull even again on the 15th.

After the 16th was halved, Mrs. Streit had a makeable tap-in lie in trex at the rear of the 17th green. She picked up, conceding the hole and a half on the 18th finished it.

Miss Harvey led at the turn but then Miss Masters, 29, won the 12th and 13th holes to go one up. Then the 20-year-old University of Toronto graduate in physical education missed a four-footer on the 14th which eventually cost her the match.

The final today matched a close hitter, Miss Masters, against an expert at chipping and putting.

Latchford Tosses No-Hitter

Joyces Clobber Oshawa 15-1

By ROBERT SNEFJELLA

Belleville Joyces clobbered the Oshawa Merchants 15-1 to take a one to nothing lead in Senior baseball loop semi-final playoffs. The game ended abruptly when Oshawa forfeited the game after Joyces had scored 14 runs in the fifth.

Bill Latchford pitched no-hit ball through the five frames he worked, striking out eight batters and issuing four walks.

Jim McConkey, the Oshawa starter and Mike Joel, who relieved him in the disastrous fifth, were pounded for 5 hits. They walked four and whiffed seven between them.

Oshawa scored their lone run in the top of the first. Mike Joel who was walked with one out, advanced on Latchford's first pitch. He advanced to third on a ground ball, and stole home when Latchford threw a wild pitch.

Belleville tied it up in the third. Orest Vaughn singled. Latchford stepped up and rapped a easy bunting to advance Vaughn to second. The latter scored when the right fielder covered on a routine fly ball. Latchford was picked off at second to end the inning.

Latchford got into trouble in the difficulty in the fifth when he walked the first two batters to get him in scoring position in the next two. He walked the next batter loading the bases.

Oshawa's Jack Eastline blasted what looked like a sure extra-base hit but Garry Lewis, Joyces right fielder made a sensational one-hand stab to end the inning and preserve Latchford's no-hitter.

Garry Lewis struck out to start the fifth inning. Gord Vaughn walked and Latchford singled. Both advanced when the throw from the outfield went past the Oshawa third baseman.

Larry Soules singled to score Gord Vaughn. Bob Reid walked and Pete Weston drove Soules home with a single.

Mavety and Hunter both pounded singles to score Asselstine and Weston. Court Brailey walked to load the bases. That was all for McConkey. Oshawa, who had only nine players out for the game, were forced to go with third baseman Mike Joel.

Garry Lewis singled Joel's first pitch to score Mavety and Hunter. The score with one out was 8 to 1.

John McKibbon, who came to bat in place of Vaughn, rapped out a double to score Lewis and Reid. Latchford got to first on an error and reached second on the wild throw to first. McKibbon scored on Soules' hit and Latchford reached third. Pat Asselstine struck out for the second out. Pete Weston walked to load the bases. Then, as at Oshawa, Mavety boomed a grand slam home run over the right field fence. Oshawa decided it was no use going on and forfeited the game.

Mavety's grand slam and single paced the Joyce's attack with Larry Soules adding three singles. Latchford and Pete Weston had two singles. John McKibbon hit a double with Vaughn, Lewis and Hunter.

The teams:

Joyces—Fisher, Joel, Dowe, Cole, Grey, Jones, Wood, McConkey, Campbell.

Joyces — Soules, Asselstine, Weston, Mavety, Hunter, Brailey, Lewis, Vaughn, Latchford, McKibbon.

The score :

Oshawa	100	0 0—	1 0 3
Joyces	001	014—	15 13 0

Fuell Fires Argos Win Over Ottawa

Picks Off Passes

By PHIL DECHMAN

TORONTO (CP) — Jackie Parker and Ron Stewart may have shared the hero's mantle for Toronto Argonauts Friday night but it was Don Fuell who presented it to them.

Parker capped a dramatic late drive by Argonauts with a 12-yard touchdown pass to Hatcher in the last 12 seconds for a 23-21 victory over Ottawa Rough Riders in the opening game of the Eastern Football Conference season.

But Fuell, who played his usual hard-hitting game at defensive halfback, deserved a large share of the spotlight for a pair of important interceptions.

On the second play of the game, Fuell picked off a pass by Ottawa's Russ Jackson and rambled 20 yards for a touchdown.

Then, late in the game with Ottawa leading 21-16 and controlling the ball, he hauled down another Jackson aerial. The Argos turned that into a 70-yard march for the winning touchdown.

It was a fitting climax to a game filled with thrills and mistakes. It lifted Toronto into an unfamiliar position—first place.

But they'll probably have to share it tonight after Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Montreal Alouettes open their season in Hamilton. The game will be televised nationally by the CBC, starting at 8 p.m., with the Toronto-Hamilton area blacked out.

Toronto's touchdowns were scored by Fuell, Hatcher and quarterback Sherman Lewis. Jim Christopherson added three converts and the Argos actually gained more yardage—by another Jackson aerial. The Argos turned that into a 70-yard march for the winning touchdown.

Parker shook off goat's horns on Toronto's final surge. Shortly before, at 14:48 Rider's seemed to sew up the game when they recovered the ball after Parker dropped it while reaching back to pass. And he

Stamps Romp Over Eskimos, Saskys Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The 30 centuries of football Friday night Saskatchewan Roughriders scored more points than they put together in the first four games of the 1963 season.

The Riders' new offensive power demonstrated in a 37-30 victory over Winnipeg Blue Bombers, fell statistically short of Calgary Stampeders' 32-15 romp at the expense of Edmonton Eskimos. But it gave rival Western Conference coaches a considerable food for thought.

Impressive as they looked against the inexperienced Eskimos, the Stampeders already have taken a 14-6 beating from Saskatchewan in their home park. And Bob Shaw's perennial underdogs, alone in first place, have lost none of their talent for coming from behind.

They did it no fewer than three times against the Bombers, spotting them a 16-1 halftime lead and wiping it out with three third-quarter touchdowns tallied within seven more as the teams traded touchdowns furiously in the final quarter and pushing away with a clinching field goal by former Bomber Gerry James in the dying minutes.

It added up to 36 points in the half. Last year they managed 23 while compiling a 2-2 record in their first four games. The only time they topped 36 in a single night was in the memorable 36-12 thriller with which they ousted Calgary by a single point in the second game of the semi-finals last November.

Friday night's revirls left the Riders all alone in first place with a 2-0 record, two points ahead of Calgary. Third place belongs to Winnipeg and B.C. Lions who split a pair of games last Tuesday night. The Eskimos are still looking for their first point.

"I've been telling you guys they've got a back of a ball club," was Bomber coach Bud Riders. "Now maybe you'll believe me."

Grants club had been passed dizzy by Ron Lancaster, who completed a phenomenal 17 of 23 tries for 226 yards including three touchdown pitches to flanker Hugh Campbell, George Reed and Dick Cohee scored the other touchdowns. James had a pair of converts to go with his field goal and Martin Fahl booted a single.

TOSSED TWO TDS

Bomber quarterback Kenny Ploen threw scoring passes to Farrell Funston and Ernie Pitts as he completed 11 of 22 for 273 yards. Defensive back Ron Latourelle also scored a touchdown and George Fleming contributed two field goals, three converts and two singles.

Both ground attacks were ineffigible. The Bomber crind out 69 yards to Saskatchewan's 56.

The Stampeders trailed Edmonton 8-7 at the end of the first quarter but pulled away easily as they amassed an awesome total offence of 509 yards, 281 in the air and 228 on the ground, compared with Edmonton's 173 yards over-all.

Twenty of their 24 passes clicked with first-string quarterback Eagle Day compiling a personal record of 18 of 21. Lovell Coleman plunged for three touchdowns with Jim Dillard. Bruce Claridge, Bobby Taylor and Bill Baker getting the others. Larry Robinson converted them all and added a 45-yard field goal.

Fullback Jim Thomas scored both Edmonton touchdowns, intercepted a Bill Mitchell, who also kicked a single.

"We went into a big bear's den and we poked him with a stick," was the post-mortem of Neill Arm trong, the Eskimo rookie coach.

Thanks Mr Thomas

He Helps Phils Pad Lead Over Giants

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Frank Thomas is a slow-footed, 35-year-old Met castoff with a future as rosy as his new pinstripes.

The veteran of 11 seasons with the National League last-to-era finally may be shielded for a World Series payoff and the league-leading Philadelphia Phillies, who acquired Thomas on a Friday afternoon waiver deal from the New York Mets, may have bought themselves some pennant insurance.

Thomas' unlikely but his new club to a 9-4 victory over his old mates Friday night—only hours after the Amsterdam native had tract in exchange for three minor leaguers. He drove in two runners with a fifth-inning single then started a double play from first base as the Phils padded their NL lead to 2½ games over San Francisco Giants.

The big slugger played previously for Pittsburgh Pirates, Cincinnati Reds and Milwaukee Braves and has hit 228 career home runs. But he has never been with a pennant winner and was batting only .208 with four club in 12 of his 17 major and minor league seasons.

Thomas Delivers

Jim Maloney and Bill McCool checked the Giants 5-3, but only twice did they retire the side, striking distance of the tie era. Jesus Alou opened the fourth, Willie Mays walked and Orlando Cepeda singled to left. Thomas lofted a fly ball to center, scoring Alou with the tying run.

Thomas wasted little time in providing the go-ahead blow. He first two times up against New York lefty Al Jackson, doubling home the second of three Philadelphia runs in the first inning and singling in Richie Allen, who had tripled in the third.

The Mets fought back for a 4-4 tie in the fourth on Maloney's two-run single in the fourth and Joe Christopher's two-run homer in the fifth but the Phils added home run—four runs in the seventh to sew it up.

Relief Win

Maloney fanned 12 Giants in six innings before his arm tightened up. McCool finished up, striking out three but giving up two runs, including Jim Hart's 20th homer. Frank Robinson led the Reds' attack with a solo home run, a run-scoring double and a single. Orlando Cepeda singled, doubled and homered for the Giants.

Simmons stopped the Colts on five singles for his 33rd career shutout and 12th 1964 victory. Bill Hull drove home a two-run single by Lou Brock and three hits by Tim McCarver paced the Cardinal attack.

Hank Fischer failed to survive the opening inning for the second night in a row for Milwaukee as the Dodgers scored all their runs in the first. Two-run doubles by Ron Fairly and Nate Oliver were the big blows. Tommy John, first-inning starter, gle stretched his batting streak to 19 straight games.

Ron Santo went 5-for-9 in the Cubs' double victory over the Pirates. He clubbed his 21st home run, with a man on, in the opener, won by Larry Jackson, and had three hits and two RBI behind Ernie Broglio in the nightcap.

Texas Gal Is Top Jumper

LEUTKIRCH, West Germany (Reuters)—Lee Taylor 22, of Dallas, Tex., won the women's pentathlon title with 4,800 metres (6,200 feet) Friday in the world parachute championships here.

She scored 492 points, one more than Tatyana Vionova of Soviet Union.

The U.S. also took the women's team figure competition with 1,397.5 points. Canada finished fourth, Belgium sixth, followed by Poland, British and Australia.

The men's jump from 2,000 metres was to be completed today.

Toronto Athletes Take Nine

Track Trials Favorites Win

ST LAMBERT, Que. (CP)—Harry Jerome's sun glasses glinted over his nose three seconds after the 100 - metre race was over.

Casually, the big Negro from Vancouver picked them off his face and finished the race with his customary flourish of the hand Jerome easily won the 100-metre championship and went on to win the final, too.

That's the way it was Friday on the Canadian Track and Field Championships and Olympic trials.

Other heavy favorites like Jerome, co-holder of the world record for 100 metres, won their events without straining anything.

Jerome's time in the final was 10.6 seconds, six-tenths of a second off his world and Canadian open mark. He finished a couple of yards ahead of Dave Edwards of London, Ont.

RIDD IN BREEZE

Bruce Kidd, the arm - flapping speed merchant from Toronto East Track Club, won the 10,000-metre run in a breeze, lapped the field to finish in 30 minutes, 43.6 seconds, 20 seconds off the 1 minute slower and the Canadian mark.

Athletes from the Toronto club set the pace in the 14 finals in ten meet which ends today. Clubs Columbia came up with the other five winners.

Other Toronto area winners were broad jumper Sonny Ackerley, Abby Hoffman miler Dave Lepps; Don McCarten in the 400 metres; Ain Roosta in the shot put; and Nutball, distance miler broke the Canadian open record in the men's 110 - metre hurdles.

For B.C., Steve Spencer won in the high jump; John Valiant in the steeplechase; Irene Piotrowski in the women's 100 metres; and Crista Leipert in the javelin.

More than 250 athletes are competing for Canadian titles and to earn a berth on Canada's 33-man team for the Olympics at Tokyo this fall.

SET FEW RECORDS

Surprisingly, only two records were set on the springy, sun - conventional asphalt track at St. Lambert's new Seaway Park, finished barely in time for the championships. Seven years of traditional cinder track claim athletes can make faster times on the rubbery asphalt.

Nuttall broke the Canadian open record for the 110 metre hurdles in 14.1 and equaled again in the final. Both times were 14.4 seconds against the old mark of 14.5 seconds.

Akpata, 25-year-old Nigerian running for the Toronto Track Club, broke the Canadian open record in winning the men's high jump with a leap of 22 feet, 3½ inches. The old mark was 24 feet, 11 inches.

Akpata said the mark assured him a berth on the Olympic team—Nigeria's not Canada's. He said Nigerian officials told him he could make the team if he made a jump of at least 22 feet.

Akpata, who attends the Ontario Agriculture College at Guelph, also missed making 23 feet, 10 inches when his shoe broke on his last jump and he had to tape both haunches to nullify the effort.

TIED RECORD

Martha Salden tied the Canadian record of 11.2 seconds in a heat of the women's 80-metre hurdles. Later she ha ed a close second to Miss Wingerson, clocked at 11.1.

Spencer won the high jump event—the metric mile—in 3:50 about eight seconds off the record.

Lepp ran easily in third place in the half - mile by through the final lap, when he made his move and stepped past Dave Bailey of New York, second, and Barry Adams of Vancouver, third.

Miss Hoffman romped off with the 400 - metre race, winning handily in 55.7 by 10 yards over Cecilia Carter of Hamilton. Karen Emery of Hamilton, was third.

Miss Piotrowski, 23, defeated Barbara Marjerie Turner in a close finish in the women's 100 metre final Irene was last off the blocks but won in 12.3.

TAKES 400 METRES

McCarten ran the 400-metre event in 47 seconds to win his closest oursuer, Brian McFlarn of Winnipeg, by nearly second.

Aussies Start 'Cut-Throat'

Now that the Aussies have whittled a field of 64 down to four in the men's singles event, they begin to scramble among themselves for the title. It promises to be quite a domestic battle even though the outcome is hardly in doubt.

Top - seeded Roy Emerson reached the semi-finals Friday and meets Tony Roche. The other semi-final match sends Owen Davidson against Fred Stolle the second - seeded Australian who also won his quarter-final match.

Roche, who beat Emerson on grass courts two years ago when he was 18, isn't optimistic about his chances and neither is Davidson, who has been a loser in four meetings with Stolle. The two young Aussies know their prestige would be enhanced with a victory but both agree it won't be a tragedy if they lose.

John Newcombe, the fifth member of the Aussie Davis Cup team, wasn't disappointed Friday following his loss to Emerson. It was the 26-year-old's seventh straight defeat without a win at the hands of the 28-year-old Wimbledon champ.

"I always hope to beat him someday but I guess it's a little way off," Newcombe said after bowing to Emerson 6-4, 7-5, 6-4.

But I don't feel badly when I lose to Emo. I just chalk it up to experience."

Emerson was nicknamed Emo by his teammates.

Emerson had his hands full with his young teammate but used his cunningness and five-star service breaks to subdue the fast-hitting youngster. Newcombe wouldn't surrender graciously and fought off a total of 13 set points throughout the match.

Stolle had no difficulty with his opponent, Whitney Reed of Alameda, Calif. The American showed out 6-2, 6-2, 6-2.

Emerson and Stolle then teamed to reach the semi-finals in the doubles, defeating Mexico's Carmenter brothers Keith and Mike 6-3, 6-0. They meet Canada's Francois Godbout and Rider Getz while Newcombe and Roche battle the Texas two-some of Ron Holmberg and Allen Hill.

The Trots

WESTBURY, N.Y. (CP) — Second place almost three Thor Haoover, rallied in the stretch Friday night to win the $12,500 Realty Cancer Cure invitational pace at Roosevelt Raceway before 35,103 onlookers.

TORONTO (CP) — Ben Herbert from the Herbert Stable of London, Ont., scored an impressive victory in the first running of the Lastic Grattan pace for two-year-olds Friday night at Greenwood Raceway.

With Jack Herbert at the reins, the chestnut colt was all alone at the wire in the seven-furlong event worth $4,300. In second place almost three lengths back came Ogeogo from the Consolidated Stable of Arnprior, Ont.

Jimmy Grattan posted a 2:02 30 mutuel in the second race for pacer Donald MacGregor of Parkhill and combined with first race winner Midnight Babe, owned by William Conley of Westmeath, to post a daily double of $297.30.

Leafs Edge Jets 5-4, Bisons Lose

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Less than a week after they knocked Jacksonville Suns out of first place in the International League by sweeping a five - game series, Syracuse Chiefs have to do it all over again.

Renewing the contest in the friendlier surroundings of their home park, the Suns got five innings of sound relief pitching from Paul Toth, who muzzled the Syracuse sluggers to protect a 3-2 victory.

That chopped the Chiefs' margin to a single percentage point with two more games coming up between the contenders.

The other first-division clubs gained no ground as the third-place Buffalo Bisons lost 4-3 to Richmond Virginians and Rochester Red Wings were beaten 2-1 by Atlanta Crackers. Toronto Maple Leafs also went 10 innings to edge Columbus Jets 5-4.

Toth, protecting a 3-1 lead, gave up a run and three hits but shackled Jacksonville outfielders Mack Jones, Willie Horton and Jim Northrup, none of whom got a hit all evening. Ron Cox had three hits to spark the Suns' fifth straight victory.

The game at Richmond ended undramatically as a balk was called on Buffalo reliever Ed Bauta with the bases loaded to force in the winning run. Elvio Jimines of the Vees sent the game into extra innings with a ninth-inning homer.

Mel Nelson outpitched Vern Handrahan at Atlanta, giving up two hits to four for the Charlestown - born right hander. Ray Looney homered for the Crackers.

Bobby Del Greco raced home on an infield out with the winning run in the 10th inning after Gene Michael of the Jets embarrassed Toronto reliever Frank Funk by stealing home to tie the score in the ninth inning. Ken Hamlin hit two homers for the Leafs.

Walt Disney Three-Fifths Finished With His Program

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Television producers who scurry to make headlines could take a lesson from Walt Disney. He's three - fifths finished with his programs for the coming season, which doesn't start until Sept. 20.

The 1964-65 season is a special one for Disney—his 10th. His shows, first on ABC and now in color on NBC, have always been entertaining, quality and variety. The selection next year will continue to be varied, with a accent on original, multi-chapter films.

"Of the 23 shows, we'll have about five nature films, two feature movies, two cartoon shows and the rest three-and-four - part story films," said Walt. "There's a reason for doing films in three or more parts. We can put more and bigger budgets into our shows than most TV producers do.

WAVES ACTION

"We believe in getting more action and bigger backgrounds for our stories, not just shoot them against a wall. We can justify the expense when we use sets for three or four shows," he continued. "I had a whole Philadelphia street in the '90s built for Gallagher, a story about a newspaper boy, now written by Richard Harding Davis."

Also coming up: Kilroy a tale of a Brooklyn boy who adopts the small town of a soldier buddy (four parts); a Tembo foot, based on an Indian-fight, (three parts); Big Red, Arizona (three parts). Plus One Man's Family, Marsh, Ida, the Offbeat Eagle, An Otter in the Family," etc.

Walt doesn't like to be pressed by headlines. Hence 15 of the year's product of 25 hours is filmed.

"And we've got nature photographers out in the field stocking subjects for 1965 and 1966," he added.

Bears Win Over All-Stars

CHICAGO (AP) — Bill Wade threw two touchdown passes and scored a third himself Friday night as Chicago Bears came from behind for a 28-17 victory over the college all-stars

After the collegians had excelled the big crowd of 64,000 at Soldier Field by taking a 10-7 lead at the half, the defending champions of the National Football League took charge in the second half.

But the big thrill for the crowd came in the final quarter as all-star coach Otto Graham called two quarterbacks simultaneously, Southern California's Pete Beathard and will-o-the-wisp George Mira of Miami, Fla.

With Beathard as main ball handler and Mira as a lonesome halfback, the Graham manoeuvre produced a lively finish just as the game seemed to bog down after the Bears muscled to a 28-10 lead.

Mira kept taking flat passes from Beathard and either ran or lofted passes from his wide vantage point.

It took the Bears quite a while to build up steam in their attack which was outpounded or the ground by the all-stars 187 yards to 94.

Ron Kramer, the most carry the NFL lead at the halfback spot he shared with the late Willie Galimore, carried nine times for 35 yards, the top Bear rushing effort. Galimore and end John Farrington were killed in an auto crash two weeks ago.

Mira rambled 56 yards on four carries and two other all-stars, Taylor and his Arizona taste teammate Tony Lorick, also bolstered Bull's yardage.

Taylor carried seven times for 36 yards and Lorich punched 38 yards on six tries.

Waterfowl Reports Differ

WINNIPEG (CP)—Ducks Unlimited (Canada) reports good waterfowl production this year in southern Manitoba and the western parklands but a poor outlook in the dry Saskatchewan prairies.

The private conservation organization, in its August survey, says drought loss is inevitable in the prairies where early arrivals nested on waterholes only to have them dry up for lack of summer rain.

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP)—This fall's duck flight from North Dakota may be down from last year.

State game and fish department waterfowl biologists report a possible 10-per-cent decline this year from 1963 in the number of ducks broods observed in the annual mid-July survey.

They said, however, that wetlands vegetation is especially heavy this year and many brooods probably were not spotted in the survey.

WEBSTER, S.D. (AP)—Trapping and banding of large Canada geese indicate a good local reproduction of these birds this year, district game manager Larry Frederickson of Webster said Friday.

Frederickson said trapping and banding was completed last week at Spring Lake in the Waubay game refuge and in Bitter Lake, south of Waubay.

Ontario Wins Crown

By PETER McNAUGHTON

CONNAUGHT RANGES, Ont. (CP) — Strong winds that whipped across the sun-swept rifle range near Ottawa made shooting conditions the toughest in memory Friday as the hunt continued for positions on Canada's Bisley team.

Members of the 18-man team which will represent the country at the Commonwealth championships are to be announced tonight when the matches conclude.

In Friday's action, Lt.-Col. W. J. (Bill) Strachan of Ottawa scored 71 of a possible 75 points in the match to lead Ontario to the provincial championship.

The eight-man Ontario team scored 538 of a possible 600 points to win the London Merchants' Cup by seven points over the Alberta team in the match, fired from 900 yards.

NOVA SCOTIA THIRD

Nova Scotia was third with 518 and Prince Edward Island fourth with 515. New Brunswick was fifth with 511, British Columbia sixth with 511, Saskatchewan seventh with 508, Manitoba eighth with 499 and Quebec ninth with 490.

Lt.-Col. Strachan described conditions as "the worst in dry weather that I can remember." He speaks with good authority, having been a member of Canada's Bisley team nine times.

Earlier in the day, Ralph Jenkins, 61, of Charlottetown won the Ottawa event, main individual match of the day. He scored 49 of a possible 50 points from 300 yards and repeated at 900 yards for a 98-point total, one point better than four rivals who tied for second.

Jenkins, too, had trouble with the tricky winds.

"I haven't seen conditions any trickier than this," he said after his victory. "Put it this way—you have to have luck."

FOUND GUILTY

NEW YORK (AP)—Tim Cohane, sports editor of Look magazine, was found guilty of contempt of court Friday for refusing to answer questions about an article he wrote for the magazine, Judge Charles Tenney gave him a 10-day sentence but stayed execution until next Wednesday. The ruling came in connection with a $1,000,000 libel suit against Cowles Magazines, publishers of Look, and Broadcasting, Inc., by Orlando Cepeda, San Francisco Giants first baseman. Cepeda claimed he was libelled in the article by Cohane in the May 21, 1963, issue of Look.

The Golden Years

It May Cost You Less to Spend Than It Does to Hoard Money

By THOMAS COLLINS

It will cost you less money in retirement if you are fairly well off, instead of poor.

It will also cost you less, in many cases, if you will spend some of your money instead of hoarding it.

Mr. Walter J. Hanson, who has just retired as an investment banker, thinks he owes it to his fellow-pensioners to pass along some of this advice on money.

"It is very expensive to be poor," says Mr. Hanson. "In fact, it costs so much that only the rich can afford it. The poor can't."

He starts his advice with insurance premiums. "On life insurance, and certain other kinds, the person who pays premiums quarterly pays larger premiums than the one who pays annually. . . and gets nothing for the extra money. He also uses four stamps, four cheques and four envelopes instead of one."

THROWS MONEY AWAY

The person who borrows money on life insurance, he says, also throws money away because the insurance company will charge you more interest on your loan than it will pay you on money of yours it is holding. He explains it is usually the poorer people who have to borrow on insurance.

"A house mortgage is the most dramatic example of all. All sorts of people who have savings and other investments will go out nutty-willy and get a mortgage on their home, paying up to 7 percent for the money while getting only 3½ or 4 percent to the money they are holding back. The poor man who must get a mortgage because he has no savings probably winds up paying 3 percent per year more for his house than the rich man who just goes out and buys it.

"It probably figures much more than this when you consider the insurance tab on a mortgaged house. . .and when you consider that the man with cash can nearly always knock off a big hunk off the price of a house when he lays the cash on the barrelhead. . ."

Baking Bread In the Arctic

By ALLEN SACKMANN

MOULD BAY, N.W.T. (CP)—Only one man stirs in this Arctic camp of 50 men at 5 a.m. He's Wilfred Pigeau.

Amid the snores of sleeping companions, he climbs into his clothes and takes a short hike to the camp kitchen, a frame building on a hillside.

The 50-year-old cook gathers the ingredients for baking b..ad and measures them into his oversized mixing bowl.

By the time the rest of the camp arrives for breakfast, they are greeted by the aroma of a dozen golden loaves cooling on a sideboard.

This is the early - morning routine seven days a week during the six months the Polar Continental Shelf Project is exploring the unknowns of the Western Arctic each year.

"I used to have the bread shipped in but the flights were too irregular and the bread was too bulky to take up room in the planes," he says.

Mr. Pigeau spends a lot of time baking because "the more pastry the men eat, the less meat they want." And that's important because shipping costs are more than the initial price of the meat.

ORDERS WITH CARE

Supplies are a regular cause o. concern. Bulk foods, many dehydrated, are shipped in six months in advance but fresh meat and vegetables have to be airlifted from Uranium City, Sask., or Inuvik, N.W.T.

"I have to be pretty careful with my ordering when the corner grocer is 1,300 miles away," he says.

Most flying weather is bad—and it often is in the spring—Mr. Pigeau is hard-pressed to make dwindling meat supplies last. Canned meats, with which his larder is well stocked, are disguised in a multitude of ways.

But while he hasn't heard any complaints, he's aware that his popularity rises in direct proportion to the number of steaks and choice roasts in the shipment that arrives when the weather turns good.

One of his chores, when new supplies come in, is distributing the food among the dozens of two- and three-man camps that spread out in the Princess Elizabeth Islands from the Mould Bay base, 1,600 miles north of Edmonton. Mr. Pigeau personally packs and checks each food box to make sure the men get enough of the right foods.

Mr. Pigeau, a French-Canadian, has been preparing food for 32 years. And his family has produced at least one cook a generation since coming to Canada 200 years ago.

He started his career in lumber and construction camps and worked as a relief cook in army camps during the Second World War. He came here from North Bay, Ont.

One of his jobs here is to keep an eye on the water supply, hauled from a lake two miles away. A washroom sign tells the crews not to shower during storms. "No one wants to haul water during a blizzard with 50 or 60 m.p.h. winds," he explains.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Air of optimism exists. Ride with the tide. No time to make sudden "turns." Be receptive. Member of opposite sex can offer encouragement, aid.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19): Key is expansion. Spread influence. Plan and execute creative "public relations" program. Welcome challenge. Obtain valuable hint from today's Sagittarius message.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18): Travel indicated. But first there are details which require attention. Get routine matters out of way early. Then you can make changes, travel, enlarge scope.

Pisces (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20): Money question best settled by making concession. No day to be stubborn. You can change course without losing dignity. Realize this — then do something about it!

If today is your birthday . . . you possess great personal magnetism, have spunk of the pioneer — and many look to you for inspiration.

General Tendencies: Cycle high for Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius. Special word to Aries: Time is on your side. There really is no need to make hasty decision.

Bulletins From Birdland

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

HEIGHT

Before the days of cave men some birds were living under ground, and thousands of years before human beings took to skyscraper apartments some birds were nesting high above ground level.

The common shearwater making his home about the deepest down of any bird — in the subbasement. The burrow is often six feet or more below the surface. The puffin's burrow is quite shallow — it lives in the basement. The Savannah sparrow's house is on the ground floor — in a field, among weeds. But many birds, like many people are not too fussy about the height of their homes as long as they are convenient. For instance, the redstart builds in a crotch of a tree, but it may be only six feet up or 50 feet. Although the Cape May warbler always chooses the top of a spruce or fir, the height varies from 30 to 60 feet. The nest of a red-crossbill may be located five to 80 feet from the ground.

The song sparrow has quite an odd idea about the proper height for a home. This is one of the birds that raises two broods in the year. The first is brought in on a nest made right on the ground, but the second brood is generally reared about four feet up in a bush or fir tree.

DEEP DIVERS

The loon that nests on the shore of an ocean lives at sea level. The swallow-tailed kite usually builds in a very tall tree at a height of well over 100 feet. Gannets bring up their young on the top of the high cliffs of islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and dive for fish from 100 feet above water level to a depth of 50 feet.

Observers at an altitude of 14,000 feet in the Himalayas have recorded storks and cranes flying 6,000 feet above them. But whistling swans have actually been met birds above an altitude of 5,000 feet. Only large birds with a good supporting wing surface can manage to fly very high on account of the rarefied atmosphere there.

MOUNTAIN SUMMERS

Some birds spend the summer well up mountain slopes. In the Rocky Mountain region, there are rosy finches, juncos, pine grosbeaks, and chickadees that nest hundreds of feet above sea level, but instead of flying south they migrate down the mountain to spend the winter on the plain below.

Some years ago two frozen birds were discovered on Mt. McKinley in Alaska. One was a Lapland longspur found at 16,400 feet, the other a redpoll, at the 17 000 foot level.

QUESTION: I heard of a new summer sport, somewhere north or Belleville, which I believe is something to do with prospecting, or searching for valuable minerals, and the whole thing could be in conjunction with an exhibition. Could you please tell me something about it, if you have this information?

Queen's Student.

ANSWER: I think what you are referring to is the Rock-hound Jem-Soree in the Northern part of Ontario. Rockhounding may never supplant fishing for a girl-watching as summer pastimes but it is definitely an interest that's growing.

For the uninitiated, a rock-hound is an amateur geologist with the adventurous spirit of a lumberjack who goes hunting for precious mineral and gem-bearing rocks. In the case of the latter, most of the pursuit he goes in for gemstone cutting and polishing.

Rockhounding, however, is a pastime entire families enjoy, and there is plenty of scope for novices in this new hobby, for even where interest was heightened recently by fantastic new discoveries of copper and nickel in the Timmins area, just 500 miles north of Toronto.

There is another area closer (470 miles north of Belleville) which mining news headlined a few years ago, and that is Ontario's Bancroft area. It is renowned throughout the world for its rich uranium deposits.

And from Aug 13-16 the town is staging its first annual Rockhound Jem-Soree which will be a get-acquainting and its related hobbies.

The event also includes exhibits of minerals, gemstones and carvings, as well as demonstrations in gemstone cutting. The recent mineral's and gem identification.

There will also be a program of educational lectures, films, field trips and exhibits from all parts of Canada and from many from both sides of the border as expected to attend.

Accommodation information is available from the Bancroft Chamber of Commerce, Bancroft, Ontario. Tickets for the one-day affair cost only $1, with daily visits 50 cents and children admitted free.

QUESTION: We are now in Belleville and we plan to spend some time in Toronto for a holiday. Could you, please, give us some pertinent facts concerning this city, and where we could obtain a city map so we could find our way around. — Mr. J. H., Belleville

ANSWER: Toronto is a dynamic metropolis with 1,750,000 inhabitants and constantly growing. It is a mecca for sophisticates and a popular convention centre. Here are the pertinent facts on Canada's second largest city:

HOTELS — 19 — the first — second class, 4,853 rooms; rates range from $8.50 to $13.50 for single accommodation and $10.50 to $22 for double.

MOTELS — 21 — located in the east and west ends of the city, 1,007 rooms; rates range from $7 — $14.50 for single accommodation to $7 - $19.50 for double.

AFTER DARK — 63 better restaurants — 21 dining only, 42 dinner-dancing, 15 night-club entertainment, eight feature all three, 13 international cuisine, 34 nightclubs.

MUSEUMS — Five — including the Royal Ontario Museum, largest in Canada.

Ann Landers

Holding Weekly Allowance Poor Form of Punishment

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our 13-year-old daughter, Natalie, told us she was going to the library for the afternoon to see an art exhibit. Instead we learned that she and a girl friend went to see a foreign movie which was billed for adults only.

ANN LANDERS

Natalie is tall for her age and could pass for several years older. From the description given by a friend who saw her in the movie house Natalie painted herself up like a trollop, wore my wig and high-heeled shoes and got by the cashier.

When I confronted Natalie with the report she did not try to lie out of it. She said she was curious about the picture and thought it would be fun to see if she could get in to see it. My husband feels we should deprive the girl of her allowance for six weeks. What do you say? — COPING.

* * *

DEAR COPING — I do not believe in depriving teenagers of their allowances as punishment. I assume that the allowance is earned by performing some services in the house, and so long as the services are performed, the allowance should be paid.

A more logical punishment would be no movies for six weeks.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our 23-year-old daughter Annette was always the shy type. We never knew what was in her mind most of the time because she was so quiet.

Around Christmas she told us she was expecting a baby. My husband and I couldn't believe it. The father was a boy named Harvey who is also shy and quiet. They had gone out together for three months, but had only five dates.

We gave them a hurried wedding — very small and nobody suspected a thing. Harvey took a job 2,500 miles from here which was fine with us. The baby was born in May. We didn't tell anyone about the baby, not even Harvey's folks. Annette wanted it that way. Last night Annette phoned to say she is sick of lying and wants to come home in a couple of weeks — with the baby.

I dread facing my friends. When they see that the baby is several months older than she ought to be they will know everything. What is your advice? — ASHAMED.

* * *

DEAR ASHAMED — The baby is exactly as old as she ought to be so drop that ridiculous notion.

Tell Annette to come home and don't feel that you must apologize or explain to friends. Anyone who would refer to the baby's "advanced age" is no friend.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Maybe I can help Hattie who is dreading the arrival of 300 guests (she has a small home) to a party honoring her parents on their 50th wedding anniversary. Here is the solution, figured mathematically.

Invite 60 for 2 p.m., 60 for 3 p.m., 60 for 4 p.m., 60 for 7 p.m., and 60 for 8 p.m. Approximately 10 percent of the invited guests will be unable to attend. At peak time, there will be no more than 75 people in the house. Between 6:30 and 7:00 p.m. the family can take off their shoes and catch their breath.

This plan calls for approximately 100 dishes, and cups and saucers, with continuous washing and drying. It's easier than she thinks. — M.B.

* * *

DEAR M.B. — You make it sound so simple I think I'll try it myself. One of these days.

WATCH POCKETS

TOKYO (AP) — Tourists descending on Tokyo for the October Olympic Games will be protected from pickpockets by a special 80-man force of police. One worry, police say, is that pickpockets from other Oriental countries might try to blend into the crowded Tokyo scene for a go at well-heeled visitors.

Your Car

Leaks Cause Sudden Drop In Mileage

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

If your car shows a sudden drop in gas mileage, better start checking for leakage along the tank-to-carburetor route.

The carburetor is a good place to begin. Look for seepage or wetness which might indicate a faulty gasket between the bowl and cover, then examine the carburetor body itself for cracking. If you find that the fuel pump seems wet with gas, you have reason to suspect that it's due to a worn or torn diaphgram . but keep in mind that looseness or stripped threads at the inlet or outlet fittings can also allow fuel to leak from the fuel pump.

Check the sediment bowl, too. A "au " "ket is the usual cause of leakage here. Finally, go over every inch of the fuel line and then the gas tank itself, inspecting closely for wet spots, cracks or dents which might hide pinhole seepage.

From F. R.: "When we drive our car over 40 or 50 mph, the temperature rises quickly and the engine overheats. Around town, despite traffic, it doesn't happen."

A weak or rotting lower radiator hose which collapses under pressure and chokes off water circulation is the most common cause of such overheating troubles.

W. N. writes: "Generally my '57 sedan runs well but if I step down hard on the gas pedal, the engine is noticeably. . .then responds slowly. Obviously, the carburetor isn't feeding enough gas for quick acceleration."

Obviously. This is the job of the carburetor accelerator pump and no matter how hard you floor the pedal it won't help if this pump unit is faulty.

E. G. asks: "After weeks, my car trouble was diagnosed as choke screen trouble which affected proper carburetor operation. It's fine now, but I'd still like to know what the choke screen is."

It's an air cleaner or strainer designed to prevent dirt and grit from getting into the choke and upsetting choke action.

From L. W.: "When I must drive up a long or a steep hill, my car — with automatic transmission — acts like the old conventional shift models when the clutch would slip."

Automatic transmission slippage can occur, too, and it's very often due to low fluid.

TURKEY, CYPRUS ACCEPT CEASE-FIRE

Nikita Calls On Turkey To Cease Operations

Throws Support Behind Government of Cyprus

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Premier Khrushchev today threw Russian support behind the government of Cyprus and called on Turkey to cease its military operations on the island.

In a message to Cypriot President Makarios, Khrushchev said the sympathies of the Russian government are "on the side of the people of the Republic of Cyprus, defending their independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of their country."

In another message, the Russian leader asked United Nations Secretary - General U Thant "to do everything possible to avoid bloodshed in Cyprus."

The call to Turkey to end its military operations was seen here as a bid to halt hostilities without embroiling Russia in the conflict.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda printed Khrushchev's message to Turkish Premier Ismet Inonu on its front page today, conspicuously above the message to Makarios.

WARNS TURKEY

Khrushchev urged Turkey to halt its air attacks on Cyprus. He warned that such action would "only make the situation more acute, increase the conflict and increase the danger of war."

Khrushchev told Inonu:

"I hope that your many years long experience as a statesman also tells you what a responsibility the Turkish side is taking on itself while carrying out a military attack on the Republic of Cyprus, a sovereign state and a member of the UN."

Cyprus diplomatic observers commented the message to Makarios did not appear to be the reply to a request for military assistance.

The Pravist high commissioner to Britain, Antis Soteriades, said in London Sunday night that the government had asked Russia and Egypt for military aid.

Observers here felt the Russian government would react cautiously to such a request because of the possibilities of a wider conflict.

STATE'S POSITION

The message to Inonu repeated the Soviet position that Greek and Turkish Cypriots should be left alone to resolve their own future in peace.

It said that the text of the message was relatively restrained, referring to "military activities" rather than aggression.

Khrushchev said the use of armed force to solve difficult

PC Revolt In Quebec Subsides

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—An incipient revolt by Quebec members of the Conservative party in the Conservative party in the Commons against the rest of their party apparently has subsided.

Observers attribute the fact that no open breach occurred between the Quebecers and the party's Ontario and western-oriented majority to the patience, party loyalty and cool of Leon Balcer (PC — Trois-Rivieres), the leader of their group.

But Mr. Balcer—who has had a telling experience in the ups and downs of personal fortunes in a political party—now has difficult problems of his own to decide.

It is reported that he has been offered attractive positions in private industry and is seriously considering whether, at the age of 46, he should give up his political career with its hazards for more security and the more sure promise of personal advancement in business.

He was first elected to the Commons in 1940 with a majority of just 51 votes. In subsequent elections he increased his majority with the growing Conservative resurgence in Quebec province to nearly 7,000 in 1958 and then suffered the stump that came to nearly all Tories in the province.

In 1956 he was president of the Progressive Conservative Association of Canada, the first French-Canadian to hold the job, and later that year was president of the convention that chose John Diefenbaker as national leader.

DIDN'T FAVOR DIEF

But at the convention, while declaring his impartiality as chairman, he let it be known he did not favor Mr. Diefenbaker as leader.

Subsequently, when Mr. Diefenbaker formed his first cabinet, Mr. Balcer was given the least onerous of duties as acting minister.

At that time, one source now says, Mr. Balcer was offered an opportunity by the party leaders to be promoted to cabinet rank as Mr. Diefenbaker's Quebec lieutenant. Even then, it is said, Mr. Balcer, a lawyer, had

Villagers Turn on Lumpa Sect, Sack Church Settlement, Kill 45

LUSAKA (Reuters) — Northern Rhodesian government troops Sunday found a lumpa church settlement in the eastern province sacked and 46 persons dead.

A government spokesman said it was reported that local villagers attacked the fanatical Lumpa followers two days ago and defeated them.

It was believed to be the first large-scale reprisal by other villagers against Lumpa sect members.

The village, called Paulshi, was about 90 miles north of Lundazi, near the Malawi frontier. A battalion troops and a platoon of armed riot police were sent there to investigate.

A strong force of police was also sent from Lundazi Sunday to the nearby village of Chipoma, which troops occupied after violent resistance Tuesday.

They found 250 Lumpas still living there and managed to free 30 women and children they were holding as hostages. No violence was reported.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: After one of the coldest August weekends on record, the weather system promises only a slight trend back toward more seasonable temperatures for today and Tuesday. A blanket of high cloud will result in considerable cloudiness and a few showers over most of Ontario today with afternoon temperatures generally around the 75 degree mark. Tuesday will bring warmer temperatures to southern regions with a few showers or thunderstorms.

Cuban Vessel Bombed

MONTREAL (CP) — Anti-Castro Cuban exiles are taking credit for an explosion Sunday in Montreal harbor which churned waters and sent spray flying near the bow of a Cuban freighter loading cargo destined for their homeland.

The early - morning bang in Sk St. Lawrence Seaway city was followed by a propaganda barrage from the New York headquarters of the Cuban Nationalist Association, an exile group.

Except for shattering windows in a wharfside shed, the blast near the freighter Maria Teresa did no apparent damage.

Divers were to go down today to determine whether there was any underwater damage to the Maria Teresa's hull or to the concrete pier where she is berthed — loading baby food, milk powder and empty propane gas cans.

ACCOUNTS VARY

Derring-do accounts coming out of New York were countered here by spare and non-committal RCMP statements.

The blast occurred shortly after 3 a.m. EDT—3:11 a.m. by Yale reckoning.

A statement issued several hours later, the Cuban Nationalist Association said the bombing had been carried out by units of the nationalist underwater demolition team, in close coordination with the sabotage section.

"Commandos of group P managed to board the vessel and, without encountering any resistance, captured a number of important and confidential records."

ACT OF WAR

The group called the attack a start of an "offensive war with which our movement, at all fronts, will fulfill its promise of carrying the Cuban war of liberty to our fatherland but to wherever it is necessary for the accomplishment of our liberating ends."

RCMP inspector Ralph Carrere, the only police official to be aboard the ship before following the blast, said cause of the explosion had not been determined but authorities had not ruled out the possibility a bomb was used.

Massive Hunt For Killer Of 2

HALIFAX (CP)— A massive hunt continued today for a red-haired killer who shot to bear gunned down three boys, killing two and critically wounding a third.

Latest clue was a telephone call to Dartmouth Times a sobbing woman who told the police department's duty constable: "I have something to tell you." She hesitated a moment, then broke down, saying "I can't do it; I can't do it," and hung up.

The unidentified youth, described as about 15 years old, rode through this city's fashionable south end on a bicycle Saturday evening. Within 40 minutes of the beginning of his mad ride, he had shot and killed Gordon Hartling, 11, and James Squarebriggs, 12, and wounded Michael Smith, 12, in the face. The Smith boy is recovering in hospital.

South-end streets were empty of children as anxious parents heeded police warnings to keep them inside. Doors of private homes were kept locked.

Nearly 100 armed officers joined the manhunt, considered the biggest in the province's history. All police leaves and holidays were cancelled.

Police Chief Gordon Mitchell made a public appeal for the woman who called police Sunday to call again.

Another clue was an abandoned bicycle found in woods near the third victim.

The city force's 180 men were reinforced by RCMP officers,

Red Chinese MiG Planes Head to North Viet Nam

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. jet fighters equipped with air-to-air missiles have been heading toward the Communist north the last few days to meet the threat of approaching Communist Chinese MiG planes, U.S. military sources say.

Though no clashes have taken place, the opposing flights were reported close enough to make positive radar identification.

Saigon, capital of South Viet Nam, held an air raid alert Sunday, its first since the Second World War when U.S. planes bombed the Japanese - occupied city.

Communist propaganda organs renewed charges against the United States for its reprisal against North Viet Nam last week. And North Viet Nam indicated it was rejecting a United Nations Security Council invitation to take part in a debate on the crisis.

Informants said the Chinese MiGs, flying from Hainan Island across the Gulf of Tonkin, halted short of the heavily-pro-

Pope Offers to Intervene In Issues Threatening Peace

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul VI, in his first encyclical letter, offered today to intervene in disputes threatening world peace.

The pontiff also proposed a joint discussion with non-Christians "disposed to defend" existing common ideals.

He invited Jews, Moslems and "the followers of the great Afro-Asiatic religions" to join him in "promoting and defending common ideals."

The 15,000-word encyclical—a letter to Roman Catholic bishops around the world — put down "practical guidelines" for the pontiff's pontificate.

It was a broad statement of the role of the Catholic Church in the modern world. Its title — Ecclesiam Suam (His Church)—was derived from the first two words of its official Latin text. The reference is to Christ.

Pope Paul condemned communism and atheism, saying the substitution of religion with a godless scientific conception of "is the most serious problem of our time." But he expressed the hope that ideological sys-

Flag Debate Tuesday

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons heads for resumption of the flag debate today or Tuesday, providing the first formal debating time on the proposed maple leaf flag since July 3.

Once the chamber disposes of the bill now before it—implementing tax - sharing arrangements with the provinces — it is the government's intention that the flag debate proceed to a conclusion.

The only scheduled interruption will come on Fridays when the Commons will turn instead to detailed study of departmental spending programs. The rest of the time will be flag, flag, flag.

Although many of the speeches will relate to the design proposed by Prime Minister Pearson in mid-June, resumption of formal debate will be on an amendment moved by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker calling for a plebiscite.

Mr. Pearson's motion stated:

"That the government be authorized to take such steps as may be necessary to establish officially as the flag of Canada a flag embodying the emblem proclaimed by his majesty King George VI on Nov. 21, 1921—three maple leaves conjoined on one stem—in the colors red and white then designated for Canada, the red leaves occupying a field of white between vertical sections of blue on the edges of the flag."

Mr. Diefenbaker's amendment reads:

"That the proposal to change Canada's national flag will affect the unity and destiny of Canada now and for years to come, the government be authorized to take such steps as may be necessary to submit to a plebiscite prior to any further debating time on the proposal in the House of Commons, in order that all Canadians may be given their rightful opportunity to declare their choice concerning a national flag."

While the flag resolution has been before Parliament for more than a month, debate in the chamber has been limited to six days. However, it has been a constant subject of discussion among members in re-

Brief Air Raid On Village Seen Due To Mix-Up

United Nations Plea Brings Truce to Isle

By HAL McCLURE

NICOSIA (AP)—Turkey and the Greek-Cypriot government agreed today to a United Nations Security Council call for a ceasefire on this embattled island. A brief Turkish air attack on a northwest village before Turkey's announcement sent a new scare through Cyprus.

Greece said it hoped the strafing attack on a square in Polis was due to a mix-up in Turkish military orders.

A Turkish government spokesman said after a cabinet meeting in Ankara Turkey would accept the UN call for the ceasefire, but only on the condition that Greek - Cypriots halt their attacks on the minority Turkish-Cypriots on the island. The Turkish cabinet met an hour-long report of the Polis attack reached Ankara.

The Greek - Cypriot government said it had ordered a ceasefire unilaterally as of Saturday. It made no mention of fighting that erupted around the Turkish village of Kokkina Sunday or around Nicosia Sunday night.

A Greek-Cypriot spokesman said:

"In a statement today Archbishop Makarios (Cyprus' president) said the government of the Cyprus republic will fully respect a Security Council resolution on the cease-fire in Cyprus."

There were reports of ground fighting between Greek- and Turkish - Cypriots in the tense northwest coastal strip between Polis and Kokkina.

The Soviet Union assailed the series of Turkish attacks and warned Turkey that it is risking war.

The attack on Polis was the fourth consecutive day of Turkish air activity over Cyprus.

A government source in Nicosia said 10 persons were wounded in the Polis attack.

Makarios, meanwhile, called UN Secretary-General U Thant saying his government was "deeply grateful" for efforts to end the fighting on the island.

Then referring to the UN ceasefire resolution, Makarios said: "We have unilaterally ordered a ceasefire Saturday, Aug. 8."

The UN resolution was adopted in New York Sunday.

The message made no mention of heavy fighting in the Kokkina area Sunday on the outburst of gunfire between Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots in Nicosia Sunday night.

The planes that attacked Polis screamed down out of a bright, sunny sky.

Alex Efty, an Associated Press correspondent at the scene, said the first attack appeared while the townspeople were sipping coffee in the main square.

In Paris, the North Atlantic treaty Organization disclosed

Canadian Politics Said Crippled By Petty Bickering in Commons

TORONTO (CP)—Donald MacDonald, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, said Canadian politicians never have never been more dangerously crippled than by the current "petty bickering" at the election victory into the dangers of political legislation and that the dangers of police state legislation and that the Liberal party is entering an unhealthy period of office more than 20 years ago.

"If the Liberal party has no philosophy or policy now than it had then. A vacuous plea for reform is the sum total of what they have to offer.

He said that provincially the Liberal party is stumbling from the triumph of an election

The bankruptcy of so much of the effort of the old line parties "hangs like palsy over our public life," he said in a keynote address at an NDP provincial convention which opened today.

4 Methodist Missionaries Under Arrest

NEW YORK (CP) — Four Methodist missionaries and their families are reported under house arrest in The Congo and a fifth missionary has been killed there, the Methodist Board of Missions announced.

A Canadian missionary, Dr. Nicholas Hlinay and his wife and child, were reported among them. The others are Americans, including the dead missionary.

The board identified the dead missionary as Rev. Burleigh A. Lew Jr., 45, of Tallahassee, Fla. He was reported killed Tuesday at Wembo Nyama, a rural mission station.

The board said the station is under control of rebel troops and the four missionary couples are under house arrest there. Circumstances surrounding Lew's death were not known here.

Templeton Will Withdraw if Beaten in Vote

HAMILTON (CP)—Charles Templeton said Saturday that if he wrests Toronto Riverdale riding from the Progressive Conservative party in the Sept. 10 provincial byelection it would improve his chances of gaining the leadership of the Ontario Liberal party.

He told a press conference that, if he loses the byelection, a week before the leadership convention, he would withdraw from the leadership race. The Conservatives have held the riding for 27 years.

Mr. Templeton, a former evangelist, television performer and newspaper editor, who resigned as executive news editor of the Toronto Star early this year to enter politics, is one of six persons seeking the Liberal leadership.

The three candidates are J. J. Joe Greene, member of the House of Commons for Renfrew South, and four Liberal members of the Ontario legislature, — Robert Nixon Brant, Andrew Thomson Toronto Dovercourt, Eddis Sargent Grey North and Joseph Gould Toronto Bracondale.

Protecting Thermometer Birds

By ROBERT COLEMAN
Canadian Press Correspondent

MELBOURNE (CP) — The government of Australia's Victoria state is acting to protect the new rare mallee fowl from extinction.

The government has approved creation of a 15,000-acre wild life reserve for this purpose in the Whimmera district, 250 miles northwest of Melbourne.

The unique mallee fowl, or lowan, is one of three species of mound-nesting birds which rank with the platypus, echidna, koala and kangaroo among the oddities of Australian wild life.

The mallee fowl, along with the other two Australian species of megapodes (mound-nesters), has been called the "thermometer bird" and the "incubator bird."

Somewhat larger than the domestic hen, the heavy-bodied, big-footed mallee fowl has the extraordinarily long egg incubation period of about 56 days. This results in the young being highly developed when hatched, so they are able to dig from their mound and fly as soon as the feathers dry. They are independent of their parents from then on.

It lays 14 to 21 eggs in a big mound of sand and vegetation which may be several feet high. The heat and fermentation of the vegetation keeps the inside of the mound at a steady 92 to 94 degrees fahrenheit.

The male bird seems to know this internal heat will not continue for long periods, and each day about 9 a.m. they open the mound to within two inches of the eggs. About 2 p.m. the mound is covered again to preserve the solar heat absorbed during the day.

Girl Receives Broken Leg In Accident

A grinding two-car crash on Highway 2, five miles west of Belleville yesterday sent two persons to hospital and caused $3,000 property damage.

The accident occurred, police said, when a car driven by 17-year-old Brian Jack, Forester's Falls, Ont., drove off the fifth concession of Thurlow township and collided with the car of Thomas Cassidy, Marmora township.

Sen. Goldwater Tries to Explain His Statement

NEW YORK (AP)—Senator Barry Goldwater says the "extremism" he advocated in the race for the White House could be paraphrased as "whole-hearted devotion" to the cause.

The Republican presidential nominee, in a letter to former vice-president Richard Nixon, said misunderstandings must not stand in the way of party unity.

Goldwater has been under pressure from various prominent members of the party to elaborate on just what the term "extremism" in his acceptance speech July 16 in San Francisco.

The Arizonan did so in the letter to Nixon, who had written Goldwater Wednesday. Nixon made the letter public Sunday.

Goldwater said in his Republican convention speech:

"I would remind you that extremism in the defence of liberty is no vice. And let me remind you also that moderation in the pursuit of justice is no virtue."

In the letter, Goldwater said: "If I were to paraphrase the two sentences in question in the context in which I uttered them I would do it by saying that whole-hearted devotion to liberty is unassailable and that half-hearted devotion to justice is indefensible."

Goldwater made a surprise visit to New York Saturday and met with former president Herbert Hoover and Francis Cardinal Spellman, Roman Catholic Archbishop of New York.

Goldwater said he and the cardinal discussed general problems of the world, including the recent Harlem race

Tweed, Gilmour Fire Hazard Reported High

Fire hazard in the Tweed and Gilmour area is reported as being high by Ontario Department of Lands and Forests official at Tweed, Gordon Fraser.

Mr. Fraser reports four fires burning in the area. They are now under control.

The fires are reported in Bagot Township. Three acres of wood area are burning because of a fisherman smoking. One-half acre is burning in Ashby Township, also because of a fisherman smoking. A gas lantern was responsible for .1 acre of wood burning in Faraday Township. There is one-half acre burning in Bedford Township. Cause of that one is not known.

Ten fires have been reported so far this month compared with that number for all of August last year; 126 are reported for the year so far for the season compared with only 107 for this time in 1963.

The normal rainfall for this time of year in the Tweed-Gilmour area is 2.93 inches but so far only .01 inch is reported in the White Lake area so far this month and .56 at Plevna.

The lake at Tweed is reported to be the lowest it has ever been. The tree leaves are wilting when the heat is extreme and close to the lake.

Mr. Fraser said gardens are in dire need of rain as are lawns. He said even the weeds are wilting.

His said rain is desperately needed and that a heavy snowfall is required this winter in order to restore the ground water table.

Creditistes Name Caouette As Leader

By Gerard Alarie

QUEBEC (CP) — Le Ralliement des Creditistes appears to be adopting a new slogan — "It's now or never."

The phrase was used by several speakers as Le Ralliement wound up its two-day national convention.

But, despite the slogan, it put off its entry into Quebec provincial politics until the next election, and kept out of into provincial politics but at the same time stipulated it would not enter federal provincial byelections expected this fall.

The decision to move into the provincial field came on a unanimous vote of some 700 delegates. It heeded up a resolution taken by the executive earlier this year.

At the same time, delegates voted unanimously in favor of an "associate state" theory as a solution to Confederation's problems.

CALLS FOR ACTION

"The associate states must be formed now or never," said Gilles Gregoire, Creditiste member of Chambly, near Lapointe. He said there must be one government for Quebec "and a second government for the nine other provinces who all want the same things."

The associate states would have some common services, including defence, foreign affairs, radio, the St. Lawrence Seaway and a supreme court, "to reduce expenses."

The convention said the two associate states would have sovereign and equal, having all political, economic, judicial and legislative powers, "except for the pursuit of their own aims."

The Creditistes, who re-elected Real Caouette as their federal leader, put off naming a provincial one. It was expected he would not be named until after April 1, 1965, by which time the executive would have chosen the method by which he would be selected.

There had been some expectation the Creditistes would jump into the coming byelections But the delegates voted not to enter provincial politics before a general election, not expected until 1966.

Canadians Ready To Evacuate Cyprus Quickly

By PETER BUCKLEY

EVRENIA, Cyprus (CP)—Canadian members of the United Nations Cyprus force have been organized in a secret operation for quick evacuation from the island if the UN decides it must pull out. It was learned today.

With the steady deterioration in the political and military situation in recent days, the Canadians have packed away unnecessary personal effects and some other property, leaving only equipment necessary for the day-to-day continuation of their peacekeeping role.

Canadian officers declined to discuss the moves but an informal visit to battalion headquarters in the Kyrenia Mountains used to cover installations of the Royal 22nd Regiment revealed preliminary steps had already been taken.

Several tents not required for military or administrative operations have been removed, and large part of the men's personal effects has been packed away and the non-operational material has been collected.

Most surplus material is understood to have been shifted to the Canadian administrative camp 15 miles west of Nicosia.

PATROLS GO QUIET

The morale of the Canadians seemed unaffected and they continued their routine patrols and other duties without substantial change. In free time they clustered around transistor radios to hear news broadcasts of developments in other parts of the island as their rumors about the situation.

There were no extra restrictions on the men's movements and regular groups took ordinary rest leaves in Beirut or Famagusta.

In the Canadian - patrolled areas, meanwhile, the situation remained relatively quiet but tense.

After a two-day lull in the Kyrenia Mountains and foothill villages, firing broke out Saturday night and early Sunday in sporadic fashion with about 150 rounds exchanged between the opposing Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots. Most of the firing was between mountaintop positions around St. Hilarion Castle in the southern foothills.

Sporadic firing was also reported during the night and again Sunday in the Canadian-patrolled suburb of Trakhonas on the northern outskirts of Nicosia.

No casualties were reported in any of the exchanges and the amount of firing was not considered heavy in either area.

Senators Claim Jewish Citizens Are Persecuted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate foreign relations committee was urged today to approve a resolution that condemns Russia's treatment of its Jewish citizens.

"No policy is more firmly fixed in the conduct of U.S. foreign affairs than this moral imperative to come to the aid of oppressed peoples," said Senator Jacob K. Javits (Rep. N.Y.) in prepared testimony.

Similarly, Senator Abraham Ribicoff (Dem. Conn.) said in a prepared statement:

"The world has learned from bitter experience of the dangers of the persecution of the Jews. We have learned that it is a symptom of a greater sickness, a symptom which, though it hurts the sufferer, is not felt by others until the sickness spreads."

Anti-semitism is a criminal offence in the Soviet Union and the Soviet constitution guarantees equal rights to all its citizens.

CITE EXAMPLES

Nevertheless, visitors to the country and students of Russian affairs claim Russian Jews are being persecuted. They cite the reduction in the number of synagogues, references to Jewish identity in accounts of alleged economic crimes and restrictions affecting traditional foods and customs.

"It is an established fact that the Soviet Union is conducting a major campaign against persons of the Jewish faith with relentless integrity and faith," said Representative Hugh Scott (Rep. Pa.) in a separate statement.

And Ribicoff said an aim of Soviet policy is "to shatter, pulverize and gradually eliminate Jewish historical consciousness and Jewish identity."

"The United States, the leader of the free world, has the obligation to protest in the name of human decency," he said.

The resolution has the support of the American Jewish Conference on Soviet Jewry, which represents 34 national American Jewish organizations. It is being sponsored by 24 of the 100 senators.

Printers Defeat Move to Replace Work Committee

TORONTO (CP) — Striking printers Saturday defeated a move within their ranks for the replacement of their negotiati committee, deadlock d in contract talks with Toronto's three daily newspapers.

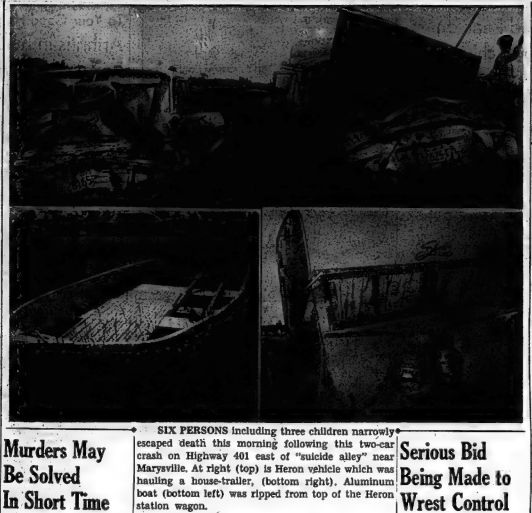
An official statement by Local 91 of the International Typographical Union (CLC) at the end of a six-hour membership meeting said only that the negotiation committee had been endorsed by a 2-to-1 margin among the approximately 600 printers who attended.

But a union official said the vote had been c a motion calling for the replacement of the negotiation committee.

Government - sponsored talks between the union, whose members left their jobs July 9 claiming they were locked out, and T. Star, The Telegram and The Globe and Mail, broke off last Tuesday. Louis Fine, chief labor management conciliator, said then both parties were deadlocked on several issues. The papers have continued to publish.

Stu Bullock, chairman of the union's publicity committee made the statement on behalf of local President Robert McCormack, who discussions at the meeting had encompassed "all aspects of the dispute."

He said "many recommendations" were made but declined to elaborate.



There had been rumors before the meeting that at least one member of the seven - man negotiation team had threatened to resign.

But Mr. Bullock said no resignations had been offered and denied suggestions of a rift in the membership.

Murders May Be Solved In Short Time

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) President Johnson said Saturday "substantive results can be expected in a very short time" in connection with the murder of three civil rights workers in Mississippi.

He told a press conference at his ranch home near here that he had just talked with FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover by telephone and was assured by Hoover that the Mississippi investigation was going well.

The bodies of the civil rights workers—Andrew Goodman and Michael Schwerner, both white of New York, and James Chaney of Meridian, Miss., Negro—were uncove...l by FBI agents earlier this week in a pond dam n. far from Philadelphia, Miss. There were last seen alive in Philadelphia June 21.

Johnson said "murder cannot and will not be condoned in this country" and perpetrators of lawlessness and violence would be apprehended and brought to justice.

SHIP AGROUND off the Moira Schuster dock Sunday sparked excitement and rumors around the waterfront. The ship, property of Crawford Metals in Belleville, was towed up from Deseronto by the tug Dover, and will probably be cut up for scrap. It was grounded and moored a few feet out from the south end of the Moira Schuster pier because there is not enough water off the end of the pier to permit normal mooring. Another ship, a U.S. registered cement carrier, went aground in South Bay over the weekend.

Serious Bid Being Made to Wrest Control

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says a slate of candidates is being mustered to make a serious bid to wrest control of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind.) from its present officers.

The newspaper does not identify the rival group but says "a secret meeting was called to consider all aspects of the situation, map out strategy and come out flatly against Leonard J. McLaughlin who is running for the presidency to succeed Hal C. Banks. . . ."

Banks was ousted from the SIU presidency last March by the federal maritime trustees board. Currently he is being sought on a writ ordering him to jail for a month for contempt of court.

The Gazette says the names of the opposition candidates will be disclosed in a day or so."

The nomination period for SIU elections is to run for a fortnight from Aug. 15.

A spokesman for the opposition slate is quoted as saying:

"We have every confidence the rank-and-file membership is behind us. We'll all run on an anti-Banks program.

"Our aim is to remove the smear that has been stuck to the SIU and see we take our place as accepted members of the Canadian labor movement."

Baker Charged With 2 Counts Capital Murder

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 34-year-old baker was charged Saturday with two counts of capital murder in the two-year old rifle slaying of teen-age sweethearts near Nanaimo, B.C.

Ronald Evelyn Ingram appeared before Magistrate A. D. Poole in suburban North Vancouver and remanded without plea until Aug. 14 in Nanaimo.

He is charged in the slaying of Diana Phippe and Leslie Dixon, both 19, fatally shot with a 22-calibre rifle in locations eight miles apart Oct. 16, 1962. The killer made his original attack on the couple in a Nanaimo lovers' lane.

Police said Ingram came here from Nanaimo a year ago. He was arrested for questioning Friday night.

Superintendent Joe Atherton, officer commanding the RCMP Vancouver subdivision, said a story carried across Canada by The Canadian Press and a magazine article in which appeals were made for information about the owner of the murder weapon resulted in a flood of tips, including one that gave police a long-sought lead.

BOMBS 'STOLEN'

MANILA (AP) — Philippine police have seized 37 100-pound bombs being transported in a truck in the vicinity of Clark Field, a U.S. air base, and charged a policeman with illegal possession of explosives. Constabulary headquarters said the bombs were apparently stolen from the base.

Winkler Mayor Resigns Over Flag Issue

WINKLER, Man. (CP)—Mayor Peter J. Kroeker has resigned from the Lisgar Riding Progressive Conservative Association over the flag issue.

In a letter Wednesday to G. R. Muir, member for Lisgar in the federal Parliament, Mayor Kroeker said he was "extremely disappointed" in the Conservative party's handling of the flag issue.

He said the Red Ensign bears the flag of another country, and "while I cherish our ties with the United Kingdom, it is my firm belief that we will never be a truly independent nation with a sense of destiny of our own, when the symbol for our country bears the symbol of another country on it."

Mayor Kroeker said he feels the Liberal party is justified in seeking early passage of a bill for a distinctive Canadian flag, and he was therefore resigning his position in the Lisgar Conservative association.

Winkler is a town of 2,400 people about 60 miles southwest of Winnipeg.

What Comes After First Trip To the Moon?

By HAROLD R. WILLIAMS

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—What comes after the first trip to the moon?

One of these is exploration of the moon. Most scientists of the manned spacecraft centre here believe this is the next logical step into space.

Two plans are being considered. One is to use the Lunar Excursion Module (LEM) as a truck to land 7,000 pounds of equipment and supplies. The other is to shoot a Saturn V with 25,000 pounds of cargo.

Each plan requires two shots, one for the men and the other for astronauts.

Space scientists have come up with a new idea—extend the lunar stay time for the LEM and increase its capability to deliver scientific and support equipment to the lunar surface.

The new concept has been dubbed Stay Time Extension Module (STEM).

ONLY ONE FLIGHT

Space scientists say the STEM concept is especially appealing because it would permit a surface exploration mission in a single flight with astronauts carrying equipment and supplies with them.
